PREF

The absence of a truly comprehensive and exhaustive Digest of Indian Case-law has been felt somewhat more keenly in the last decade than ever before. The circumstances that have created this want are but too well-known to all lawyers to require detailed notice. Years after the want was felt, I put to myself the question whether I should not undertake to supply the want, but the gigantic dimensions of the task staggered me notwithstanding that by that time I had acquired considerable experience in the line—I mean the publication of compiled works. It was only in 1908, that I was able to make up my mind--but having decided, I at once applied myself to the first and –in case of all works of reference—the most important part of my task, viz , the plan or the arrangement of the Digest. With an ambitious programme before my eyes, I looked upon the question of arrangement as one of prime importance and accordingly I devoted a good deal of time to the consideration of various plans of arrangement. But when the plan was finally settled, the work of compilation progressed satisfactorily enough, and I announced the Digest publicly. The ever appreciative public responded to my invitation to subscribe so cordially that it at once removed from my mind the last vestige of a doubt as to the success of my Digest and their continued patronage has since served to cheer my toils. I should have been able to put before the public the result of my labours in a tangible form long before this, had not my other Digests that were passing through the press at the time distracted my attention. As it is, I am today able to put before the public the first Volume of my Digest and it is now for them to Judge of it.

While I was passing through the period of indecision and uncertainty, I heard that the veteran law publisher of Trichinopoly, Mr. Sanjiva Row was also going to publish a similar Digest It is, indeed, unfortunate, that Mr. Sanjiva Row passed away from amongst us before his Digest saw the light of day. His energetic nephew is now carrying on the work, and the public have the advantage of having before them two sets of Digests to choose from.

Speaking of the other Digests it may be said that there is not one that can be truly called either comprehensive or exhaustive. Until recently a lawyer had to refer to not one, not two, but a dozen or more Digests of different Law Reports by different compilers before he could fairly acquaint himself with the authorities touching a particular law-point He must first go to " Woodman" for cases reported in the authorised Law Reports (for, of Private Reports, few have the honour of being recognised in it), then he must patiently take up one by one, the independent Digests of ten or eleven different private Law Reports and passing on with a sigh of regret for the absence of digests pertaining to other private Law Reports that have not yet published their digests, he must finally go to Digests of printed but unreported cases and rulings. Add to this the vexation caused by the different arrangements adopted by different compilers in their various digests and the reader will not stand in need of any apology on my part for ushering a new Digest in the field, which being comprehensive and exhaustive is not merely an addition to the number of already existing digests, but is an improvement in every possible way upon all the existing digests put together and much more besides.

It was originally intended to publish a mixed Digests of Civil and Criminal Cases; but an esteemed friend of mine, Mr. Ratanlal Ranchhoddas B. A. LL. B., Vakil High Court Bombay, and one of the able editors of the Bom. Law Reporter made a timely and valuable suggestion of separating the Civil and Criminal Cases and consolidating them in independent Civil and Criminal Digests. The suggestion was readily accepted for obvious reasons. My heartfelt thanks are due to Mr. Ratanlal for his valuable suggestion.

SOME SPECIAL FEATURES :--

(1) This is the only Digest which brings the Indian Case-law down to the end of 1912 in a consolidated form.

(2) This is not a mere Digest, for in it, every case that has been the subject of Judicial notice at all, has its whole history given under it, while previous cases on the point are also referred to in the head-note itself The reader is thus enabled to find, at a glance, the whole case-law on a given point collected at one place and has not to go into the several head-notes of all the cases thereon, which again are given in their proper places without any omission, notwithstanding that they are repeated in the historical notes of other cases. In other words this Digest is a consolidation of the Digest and the Index of cases judicially noticed-a feature, the value of which cannot be overrated.

(3) Arrangement of Cases-Cases are arranged in a connected form instead of throwing them together in a confused mass

All the cases belonging to a particular subject are divided into Principal Headings and sub-headings and the catch words of every single case or group of cases are noted down under the sub-heading to which it belongs with the number of that case.

In other words every subject is preceded, as it were, by a short digest of its own. This will enable the busy prectitioner to find out a required case at a moment's notice without going through the head-notes in extenso of hundreds of cases under a particular heading.

(4) Tables of contents—Very often the reader does not remember the section relating to a particular subject and has therefore to go to the Act to find it out and then only he can refer to the Digest. To avoid this inconvenience tables of contents of big Acts are given.

(5) Tables showing the corresponding sections–In order to avoid similar inconvenience as regards the corresponding sections of the new and old Civil Pro. Codes, and the Limitation Acts, comparative tables of such sections are also given.

(6) Names of parties—are given at the end of every case summarised in this Digest.

(7) As to cross-references–In almost all the other digests cross-references are made merely by vol and page of the report. This mode of giving cross-references is circuitous and therefore inconvenient to a busy practitioner.

A practical illustration will best give an idea of the inconvenience:—

Thus, a Cross-reference to a case under "Hindu Law-Alienation" is given in other digests in some such way as this—"Hindu Law-Alienation" see "Mortgage" "9 C. P. L. R. 35; 19 Bom. 363."

Now on goingito the heading of "Mortgage" the reader is confronted by a long series of cases, perhaps more than 800, out of which he has to hunt out the two cases referred to viz 9 C. P L. R. 35 and 19 Bom 363. If he, in the course of his attempt to do so forgets either the Vol or the page of either of the cases, he finds himself in the position of a mariner who has lost his compass. The difficulty increases in proportion to the number of cases referred to.

In order to avoid such a circuitous and troublesome mode of giving cross-references, I have numbered consecutively all the cases under a general heading and a cross-reference is made by referring simply to the number of the case under that heading. Thus in my Digest the above cross-reference will appear as under :—

"Hindu Law-Alienation" see "Mortgage" case No. (251) 19 Bom 363, and so on.

(8) The classification—adopted in this Digest is better suited to a busy practitioner than that adopted in other Digests. In the latter, the various cases that could be arranged under one convenient general heading are scattered at as many places as there are Imperial or Provincial Acts touching the subject.

(9) Overruled cases—As a general rule overruled cases and cases on repealed statutes are also included on the ground that by way of historical interest these are as useful as the living case-law.

I will consider myself highly obliged if members of the legal profession would inform me of any errors or omissions in this Digest.

I cannot conclude this preface without expressing my sense of obligation to the learned editors of the Bom. L. R: C. L. J; A. L. J. & M. L. T. for their kind permissions accorded to me to utilize their head-notes for my Digests and also to my brother pleaders Messrs C. J. Sutaria B. A. LL. B; G. H. Zimye B A LL B M.V. Desai B A LL B; P. V. Patel M A LL B for rendering me valuable assistance in various ways in the preparation of this Digest.

I owe a special acknowledgment to my printers for their services and I wish to put on record here my sense of satisfaction at the prompt, neat and careful work done by them. The credit belongs, of course, to the diligent and hard-working manager Mr. M V Shah of the Vidya Vilas Printing Press.

1—Building house with consent:—Right of transfer.

A person who builds a house in the village abadi with the consent of the proprietor acquires no right to the site. Such a person has no right of transferring his house and the site thereof when he leaves the village. Thakur Nihal Singh v Thakur Sardar Singh & Hira Lal. 3 C P L R 7.

2—Land-holder and tenant—Rights of tenants in village abadi-Wajibularz-Suit to remove building created by tenant without permission of the Zamindars.

In the courtyard of a tenant lawfully in possession of a house site in the Village abadi was "some sort of a thatched shed" used in fact by the tenant and other Muhammadans of the village for the purpose of religious observances. The wajibularz of the village provided that "no cultivator can build a new house outside the compound of his dwelling house without the permission of the Zamindar. He is at liberty to do so in his compound" Held that the tenant in question was not at liberty to convert the thatched shed in his court-yard into a "pacca" mosque without the permission of the Zamindars. Basa Mal and others v Ghayasuddin. 1904 A W N 176=2 A L J 27=27 All 556.

Abandonment of Point.

1—Counsel abandoning a point. The suit was brought by the sons of the reversioner S of the last male owner G on the death of G's widow M. P for possession of immoveable property.

The last male owner died 40 years before suit, the widow in 1896, and the plaintiff's father through whom the plaintiffs claimed in 1889. The whole question in the case was one of plaintiff's father relationship to the last male holder. The defendant was the nephew of the last male holder who took possession of the properties on the widow's death. The first Court found that the plaintiffs had proved the pedigrees filed by them and gave a decree. On appeal the Judicial Commissioner held as follows—"The oral evidence to prove the pedigree in the plaint is in my opinion of as little value as the documentary evidence on which the plaintiffs relied and at the hearing of the appeal practically no attempt was made to support the finding of the Subordinate Judge.

The only contention was that accepting the pedigree filed by the appellant Mathura Prashad, the plaintiffs are heirs of G and according to it they are Samanodakas and therefore in the absence of other nearer heirs they exclude the defendant" and gave a decree for possession of the property on the ground that there were other Abandonment of User.

1—Abandonment of user—Dedication, implied—Dedication to public use as burial ground-Title to land, no necessity for passing—Reversion to owner. An implied dedication arises by operation of law from the acts of the owner and is really founded upon the principle of estoppel: it proceeds not upon the principle that a grant has actually been made but rather on the principle that the owner having allowed the public to enjoy the same for any particular purpose is estopped from denying the right of the public to the enjoyment of such use. Exclusive and continuous user by the public, with the owner's knowledge and acquiescence for the prescriptive period will raise the presumption of a grant and dedication to the public. It is one of the essential elements of a good declaration that it be made to the public, that it be irrevocable, and that the land be for ever dedicated for the designated public use. 8 C B N., S. 848; 42 Cal 541, ref. to. An owner may appropriate land to public use and yet retain in himself all such rights in the soil as are compatible with the full exercise and enjoyment of the public use to which the property has been devoted. It is not essential to constitute a valid dedication that the legal title should pass from the owner; nor is it inconsistent with an effectual dedication that the owner should continue to make any and all uses of the land which do not interfere with the uses for which it is dedicated. See 79 Bom 47; 9 Cal 75. But after a valid dedication has been made, if the use for which the property is dedicated becomes impossible of execution, or if the object of the use wholly fails, there is an abandonment in consequence of which the rights of the public therein fail and a reversion takes place, as the dedication has spent its force when the use ceases. If

A broad distinction is to be drawn as regards the powers of inheriting property between faqirs or members of a religious order who have, and those who have not, entirely renounced the world the latter class not being disqualified from succession in their natural families.

In a case where it appeared that the plaintiff, though he left his village and joined a religious order (Gossains), had not renounced the world, but, on the contrary, was the father of three children who appeared to be grown up, held, that plaintiff had never reached the stage of complete asceticism which would disqualify him from inheritance, and that he was entitled to succeed to the estate of his nephew in preference to the defendant, who, if a relation at all, was a distant one. Sadhu v Misri. 92 P R 1898.

(a) GENERAL.

1 Ground of Abatement-Causes beyond control—Act X of 1859, s. 18.

The real meaning of s. 18, Act X of 1859, is that the grounds for which an abatement of rent may be claimed by a raiyat must have resulted from causes beyond his control. Munsoor Ali v. Harvey. 11 W R 291.

(b) DILUVION.

2—Diluvion—Act X of 1859, s 18 (Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 19)—Deduction in suit for arrears of rent.

Rent of a talukh may be abated if a portion of the talukh be washed away Independently of s. 18, Act X of 1859, a suit for abatement of rent will lie by a talukhdar on the ground that part of the talukh has been washed away. A deduction may be made on such ground in a suit for arrears of rent. Afsuroodeen v Shorooshee Bala Dabea Marsh 558 Savi v Obhoy Nath Bose 2 W R Act X 27.

A tenant holding under a permanent mokurari lease is not entitled to get abatement of rent by reason of a portion of the land in his occupation having been diluviated by the action of a river. Nunda Lal Mukherjee v Kymuddin Sardar. 9 C W N 886.

4-Onus probandi.-The onus lies on thedefendant in a suit for arrears of rent of proving to what deduction he is entitled, and of showing precisely what lands have disappeared. Savi v Obhoy Nath Bose 2 W R Act X 27

Where land forming part of a tenant's holding was lost by diluvion, but subsequently reformed and was settled by the landlord with third parties.

Held—That there was no eviction of the tenant by the landlord, and the tenant could not claim a suspension of the whole rent.

The tenant in such a case may claim a proportionate abatement of the rent.

Per Mookerjee J.—The rule that when a landlord is responsible for the partial eviction of his tenant from the demised premises, there is a suspension of the entire rent, has been adopted in England, not without considerable divergence of opinion. It would not be right to extend the application of such a rule, which may often operate harshly to cases to which the principle on which it is founded is clearly inapplicable. 6. -Diluvion—Right of occupancy—A tenant, whether with or without a right of occupancy, is entitled to abatement of rent for land washed away unless precluded by the term of his kabuliat from claiming any abatement. Enayutoolah v Elahebuksh. W R 1864 Act X 42.

Abatement of Rent (Grounds of Abatement-(Contd.)

9—Holding over, effect of — Rent kept in abeyance in kabulyat—Omission to specify reason — Oral evidence, admissibility of, to prove reason——Evidence Act (I of 1872), S. 92 and proviso (2).—

Where a tenant holds over upon the expiration of the term of his lease and pays rents, the tenancy is renewed upon the same conditions as those contained in the expired lease.

Therefore, the mere circumstance that the term of a lease has expired does not entitle the tenant to contend successfully that he has been absolved from the obligation which he may have undertaken at that time.

In a lease the rent was stated to be a certain sum, but a deduction on account of rent in suspense was allowed and a lesser sum was actually payable. The plaintiff sued upon the lease and alleged that the deduction was allowed because a quantity of land was not at that time fit for cultivation, but that there was an oral agreement to the effect that the rent in suspense would be revived as soon as the quality of the land improved.

Held, that under proviso 2, S. 92, of the Evidence Act, the oral agreement could be proved, because the lease omitted to specify the reasons for which the rent was kept in suspense and the period during which it was to continue in abeyance, and that the plaintiff might establish that the contingency upon which the rent was agreed to be revived had happened. 28 Cal 227, Ref: 11 Cal 486; 12 C L R 163 and 9 C L R 301, Ref.

15—Apportionment of rent—Decree—Mukurari lease—Lessee getting possession of less land than stated in lease—Act XI of 1859 S. 54—Abatement of rent—Right of lessee-A decree had determined that lands leased in mokurari to a lessee with a fixed rent, were less in area than specified in pottahs that comprised them, the lessors not being entitled to the whole; the less estate was possessed by the lessor:—Held, that lessee was entitled to a corresponding abatement of the rent reserved. The revenue paying mehal within which were lands subject to a mokurari, such lands being shares of mouzahs therein, was afterwards sold for arrears, under Act X of 1859. The purchaser at that sale was sued by mokuraridar to make good her incumbrance under S. 54 of the Act. The decree that followed maintained the lease but only as to part of the shares specified in the pottahs, and the lessee for possession of that part only In this suit for mesne profits brought by the lessee against the heir of the purchaser who filed a cross suit against her for rent, it held that, as the lessee had not proved that she having had possession under the leases, had been dispossessed by the purchaser, there had not been an eviction in the proper sense of the term. But when, in her suit for possession, part only was decreed to her and she was precluded by the result from getting a substantial part, her position was the same as if she had been evicted. She, therefore had the same equity for an apportionment, as on eviction. On the facts it was rightly judged by the Court of first instance the leases were not taken with knowledge on the part of the lessee that the title was doubtful Imambandi Begum v Kamleswari Pershad 21 Cal 1005; L R 21 I A 118 PC.

17—Error in measurement of land—Land found to be less than stated.—A lease providing for enhancement if the lands are found on measurement to exceed the quantity stated in the lease, does not necessarily give the right to abate if the lands are found to be less than that stated in the lease. Ram Kant Chowdhry v. 18 - Construction of pottah—Default of tenant.

Though a pottah provided for an abatement of defendant's rent if on measurement the land was found to be less than 145 bighas, yet it was held that if defendant came to be in possession of that less quantity by his own default and not that of the lessor, the mere fact of defenant having been in possession of less than 145 bighas would not entitle him to an abatement.

Delay in suing——In 1859 G entered into negotiation with respect to the purchase of a certain talook at premium of Rs 42,411 and an annual rent of Rs. 48,070, and in January 1860 he signed a sale-bond which contained an enumeration of the mouzahs purchased, the actual sale being completed in the 2nd June following. Until his death in December 1861 he paid the stipulated rent according to the terms of the deed. Subsequently his widow brought a suit for abatement of the rent on the ground that her husband had been misled as to the amount of rent payable by the under-tenants,—Held, (affirming the decision of the High Court of Calcutta) that under the circumstances the suit could not be maintained Darimbya Debbya v. 22—Act X of 1859, ss 18 and 23, cl. 3—S. 18, Act X of 1859, is not applicable to a case in which a plaintiff patnidar sues for an abatement of rent on the ground of fraud caused by the concealment from him of the existence of an intermediate tenure created by the zemindar. Cl. 3. s. 23 of that Act, is wide enough to admit of such a suit being tried by the Revenue Courts. Shokoor Ali v Umola Ahalya 8 W R 504

(G) REDUCTION OF RENT ALLOWED TO LANDLORD BY GOVERNMENT.

25.—Reduction of rent payable by landlord to Government—Act X of 1859, Ss. 17 and 18.

Sections 17 and 18 were passed for the benefit of the ryot, and not for the protection of the zemindar. Section 18 was intended to give the ryot a right to abatement in certain cases, but not to protect the zemindar from liability to make abatement in any other case. In a suit for abatement of rent on the ground that the jumma payable to Government had been reduced upon condition that the rents of the ryot should be reduced in a like proportion.—Held, that the right to abatement applies only to the case of rents of which the amount had been fixed before the jumma was reduced by Government, and not to rents fixed by pottahs or kabuliats entered into subsequently. Sukhawatoollah v Puthoo Goldar. 1 Ind Jur O S 7

(H) LOSS OF PORTION OF LAND.

26.—Loss of portion of land—Suit for declaration of liability to pay less rent—Equitable relief.—A suit by a tenant against his original lessors for a declaration that he is not liable to pay them the whole rent payable under his pottah in consequence of a third person having, subsequently to the grant of such pottah, by suit established a right to a share of the rent, is not a suit for abatement of rent. But where, under such circumstances, the tenant is holding more land than is covered by his pottah, it is not necessary that his landlords, if desirous of enhancing the rent, should be referred to a separate suit for that purpose. The suit of the tenant being for equitable relief, the claim of the landlords must be taken into consideration in determining what relief the plaintiff is entitled to obtain. Chandmoni Dali v. Loke Nath Chatterjee. 6 C L R., 494.

(I) LAND ACQUIRED BY GOVT. PUBLIC PURPOSES.

27—Land taken for public purposes.—Suit to recover share of money taken as compensation for land.—In a suit to recover the proportion of money paid into Court as compensation for land taken for a railway, to which the plaintiff, a dur-putnidar, may be entitled, and in which suit the zemindar and putnidar are defendants, the plaintiff cannot claim abatement of rent under Act X of 1859, section 18, since such a claim is cognizable only in a suit instituted under that Act. Gordon Stuart & Co. v. Mohatab Chand Marsh, 490

28—Claim to deduction from rent.—A claim for rent being a recurring cause of action, a tenant is entitled to set up against it for any particular year any right which he had to a deduction or abatement, notwithstanding that he has paid full rent for several previous years. When land is taken away for railway purposes, and compensation made, which is divided between the zemindar and those holding under him, any deduction of rent claimed, from the zeminder must be reckoned with reference, not to the gross amount of compensation, but to the portion which passed into his hands. Mohatab Chand v. Chittro Coomaree Bibee 16 W R 201

29—Abatement of rent, Suit for—Suit for refund of excess rents:—In a suit brought by a putnidar for a declaration that he was entitled to an annual abatement of the putni rent in consequence of some lands comprised in the putni having been required for the purposes of a railway, and also for the refund of the excess rents which he had been compelled to pay for some years. Held: per Mookerjee, J :—That this was a claim for abatement of rent and for recovery of damages for illegal exaction of rent within the meaning of clauses (2) and (3), S. 23 of Act X of 1859. The proper course for the plaintiff, therefore, was to sue in the first instance for abatement of rent in the Revenue Court which was the only court of competent jurisdiction for that purpose. Per Harington, J., contra, treating the case as though it were one of first impression :—Although under S. 23 of Act X of 1859 a civil court had no jurisidiction to entertain a suit for abatement of rent, still the suit in so far as it related to a claim for refund of the excess rents paid by the putnidar was properly cognizable by the civil court and should not be dismissed for want of jurisdiction because one of the steps which plaintiff should have to take in establishing his right to have the money repaid to him would if it had stood alone, have entitled him to a decree in the Revenue Court. Per Mookerjee, J :—The present suit is substantially one for abatement of rent and the prayer for refund is ancillary to the prayer for abatement, because as soon as the amount of abatement is determined, the amount of refund is deducible by simple arithmetical calculation. The civil court has no jurisdiction to allow a claim for abatement, and is not competent to embark upon precisely the same inquiry for the purpose of allowing a refund. Per Mookerjee J :—The following rules are deducible from a review of the authorities on the question :—(1) A suit for abatement of rent properly so called is maintainable only in the Revenue Court. I. W. R. 299 ref. to. (2) A suit for adjustment of the receipt on the ground that the rent payable under a lease is less than the sum nominally inserted in it, is not a suit for abatement of rent, properly so-called and is accordingly maintainable in the civil court B. L. R. F. B. 95 referred to. If the tenant is entitled to sue for abatement in the Revenue Court under Rule (1), the suit for refund lies in the same Court, but if the tenant is entitled to sue for adjustment in the Civil Court under Rule (2), the suit for refund lies in the same Court. The cases which support the view that a suit for refund lies in the Civil Court assume a prior determination of the amount of abatement by a Court of competent jurisdiction. W. R. Gap. 30—Construction of Kabuliat—Agreement between zemindar and putnidar to divide compensation in respect of land taken for public purposes.

A putni lease contained a clause by which it was stipulated that if any portion of the demised lands should be taken up by Government for public purposes, the zemindar and the putnidar should divide the compensation allowed equally.

Abatement of Rent (Grounds of Abatement-Contd.

A portion of the land having been so taken and the compensation divided as agreed upon, it was held in a suit for arrears of rent that the putnidar was notwithstanding the fact of his having received his moiety of the compensation, equitably entitled to abatement on the ground that he had been deprived of a portion of the land covered by his putni.

Uma Sunker Sirkar v Tarini Churn Singh 11 C L R 366=9 Cal 571.

31—Ijara settlement—Deduction from rent—a kabuliat of an Ijardar who took on lease certain land, contained the following clause:—"In regard to the aforesaid rent we take upon ourselves the risk of flood and drought, of death and flight of alluvion and diluvion, of profit and loss. In no case shall we be able to claim a reduction in the rent, nor will it be open to you to demand more on account of alluvion etc.' During the lease part of these lands were taken up by Government for a railway, and the lessor was paid compensation therfore. The Ijardar claimed a deduction of rent for the lands taken away. Held, that such a claim did not come under the meaning of the word "abatement" as used in the the rent law, nor was it intended by the parties to be within the clause of the lease, but the land having been taken from the whole area demised, not by natural causes, but by vis major, the Ijardar was entitled to a deduction of rent, on his showing that there were tenants of his on the land who, before the land was taken by government, paid rent to him which they had not ceased to pay.

33—Proceedings under Land Acquisition Act, 1870—Purchase at sale for arrears of rent—Beng. Reg. VIII of 1819.—

Portion of certain land held under a patni having been taken up by the Government for public purposes under the Land Acquisition Act, the zemindar declared his intention of granting no abatement of rent, and acting upon this declaration the patnidar was allowed to appropriate the whole of the compensation. The patni was subsequently sold under Reg VIII of 1819, with notice of the amount of the original rent, and the purchaser now sued for abatement of that rent. He did not allege that he had no notice of the proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act. Held, that the plaintiff must be presumed to have had notice of these proceedings, and that it was therefore incumbent upon him to have made inquiry regarding the position of the patni, and that under the circumstances he was not entitled to the abatement sought for. Peari Mohun Mukerjee v Audhiraj Aftab Chand. 10 C L R 526.

There is no provision in the Rent Law prescribing that suits for enhancement or abatement shall not be brought within a certain period after the determination of a similar suit on the same grounds. (3) CLAIM TO ABATEMENT.

35—Claim to abatement—"Otherwise vary" the rent—

The words "otherwise vary" in s. 153, Act X of 1859, are meant to include abatement claimable by the ryot, and this reservation is made in respect of questions of right to vary the rent, whether raised by the landlord or by the tenant. Anund Chunder Deghee v Nubocoomar Chatterjee. 8 W R 192.

(5) FORM OF SUIT.

39—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Act X of 1859, s 23. A obtained from B a putni lease whereby it was agreed that A. should prepare a hastabud (rent roll); that, if it should appear that there was any deficiency in the jumma stated in the potta, the correct jumma should be ascertained as therein provided; and that the rent should be made up to A. by B; and B should return a proportionate amount of the consideration-money. A sued B for an abatement of rent, for a refund of rent paid in excess, and for a proportionate refund of the consideration money. Held, the suit was not a suit for abatement of rent within the meaning of this section, and the Civil Court has jurisdiction to try the different questions together in the same suit.

40—Rent, ennancement of-Transfer of Property Act. The compensation is to be apportioned between the parties according to the value of interest which each of them parts with. The Zemindar has a right to the fixed rent and the loss he sustained is of so much of his rent. Any other possible injury such as the chance of the putnidar throwing up the land and its being diminished in value by what has been taken by Government, and still remaining as it did, liable to pay the same revenue is not appreciable and cannot be taken into account. If there is no abatement of the rent and the patnidar continues liable to pay to the zamindar the same rent as he had to pay before, there would be nothing for which the Zemindar is to receive compensation. The same rule applies to the case of lease in perpetuity with fixity of rent. The burden of proof is on the Zamindar to make out his claim and show as to the value of a particular contingency to him. Satis Chunder Chattopadhya v Rai Johindra Nath Chowdhury 7 C L J 284.

41—Apportionment of rent—Suit—Bengal act VIII of 1869, s 19—Certain batwara proceedings terminated, in 1877, and the portion of the estate, held by the plaintiff and allotted to the defendant was ascertained. The rent was Rs 4 per bigha. In 1881, a suit was brought by the defendants to recover rent of a larger amount than what the plaintiff admitted to be due and a decree obtained on the 31 st. May 1881. On the 20th September 1881, the plaintiff instituted a suit nominally under the provisions of s 19 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, for abatement of rent, upon the ground that the defendants were seeking to charge him rent upon a larger amount of land than he actually held. The court found that the area of land held by the plaintiff was the same as stated by him in the plaint, and not that alleged by the defendants. Held, that the suit was rather one for the apportionment of rent after the Butwara proceedings, and not one for abatement of rent.

was entitled to abatement of rent from A, and that a suit for abatement, under the circumstances, was cognizable by the Revenue Court. Semble,—Where there is no specification in the original contract of the amount of rent payable for the portion of land for which abatement is claimed, such a sum ought to be deducted from the whole rent as would bear to that whole rent the same proportion as the annual value of the portion of the land which has disappeared bears to the annual value of the land originally leased.

(8) CIVIL COURT'S DECREE EFFECT OF, ON REVENUE COURT'S DECREE.

48.—Effect of decision of Civil Court on decree of Revenue Court—Suit for excess payments of rent after decree for abatement. A patnidar sued his zemindar and obtained a decree for abatment of the patni rent, on the ground that the assets of the patni fell short of the amount stated in the lease. While this suit was pending in the Civil Court, the zemindar brought a suit for the rent of the two years upon the full jumma; and though the patnidar objected that his suit for abatement was pending, the Collector decreed the rent suit in full. In execution the zemindar recovered the full rent, and the patnidar then sued for a refund of excess payments and of the interest realized by the zemindar thereon. Held, that the decree of the Revenue Court wes superseded and modified by the decree of the Civil Court. which was subsequently affirmed in appeal. Held, that the plaintiff's cause of action accrued on the date on which the zemindar recovered from him rent in excess of what he was justly liable for and also interest on such excess. Held (on reference to the decree) that the abatement was to take effect from the commencement of the patni lease.

49-Act No XII 1881(North-Western Provinces Rent Act), Chapter II Section 93 (a).—Landholder and tenant suit for rent-Plea of custom allowing deductions on account of land rendered unculturable by action of river.—Such deduction not an "abatement of Rent" within the meaning of the act.

An abatement of rent in the sense of chapter II of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act No. III of 1881, implies the reduction of the rent payable for the holding, if not permanently, at all events for an indeterminate period, the rent as abated being substituted for the original rent and continuing to be the rent of the holding until altered by agreement or by further order. A tenant cannot apply under Chapter II on any ground for a reduction or revision of rent for a particular year only and having no effect beyond that year on the rent payable for the holding.

In a suit for arrears of rent under section 93 (a) of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act 1881, the defendant proved a local custom, whereby a tenant was entitled to proportionate deduction from the rent for any year for such lands as were in that year, owing to fluvial action, unculturable by being submerged by water or covered by sand. No application for abatement for rent had been made under Chapter II of the act.

Held, that inasmuch as the defendant did not by his plea seek for an abatement of rent in the sense of Chapter VI namely a reduction permanently or for an indeterminate period of the rent payable for his holding, but only a remission or deduction from such rent for a particular year and in respect of such portions of the holding as were unculturable in that year, and inasmuch as remission could have been obtained in proceedings under Chapter II, the custom did not override any of the provisions of the Act, and must be given effect by the court trying the suit.

Where a person has once been admitted to the record as legal representative of a deceased plaintiff that person is a party and any dispute raised inter parties as to that substituted plaintiff's right of representation [not inheritance] so as to have such substituted plaintiff struck out comes properly under S. 32 and not under S. 367 of the Civ Pro Code

In an execution proceeding the decree-holder having died in September 1898, the judgment-debtor, on the 18th October 1899, obtained an order from the executing Court for the removal of the attachment on the ground that no application in accordance with the provisions of Section 365, Civil Procedure Code, had been made by the representatives of the deceased decree-holder within the prescribed period of limitation. The circumstances were that the decree-holder who was a Sikh Jat had died and left a will probate of which having been keenly contested by his heirs was not granted to the executors until April 1900. In May 1900 two out of the three executors filed an application, but the judgment-debtor contended that by sec. 365 of the Civil Procedure Code the application was timebarred.

Held, that the word "suit" includes all proceedings in a suit including the proceedings in execution, and that the executors were bound to make and capable of making the application at the time of the death of the testator, but that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, there was sufficient cause preventing them from continuing the execution proceedings originated by the testator within the meaning of s. 371, Civ. Pro. Code and that therefore under the provisions of s. 372A Civil Procedure Code, and of s. 5 of the Limitation Act they were entitled to an extension of the time for making the application to set aside the abatement order.

Upon a charge of theft, brought by defendant in the Courts of the Kalsia State, plaintiff was arrested and kept in custody for about six weeks, but was subsequently discharged after full enquiry had been made into the truth of defendant's allegations. Thereafter plaintiff instituted a suit in the District Court, Umballa, within the jurisdiction of which defendant was resident, for Rs. 3400 as damage for malicious prosecution. Defendant traversed the allegations in the plaint, and further pleaded that plaintiff could not sue in a British Court on a cause of action which had arisen in Kalsia State. The Court overruled this objection and awarded plaintiff Rs. 610 as damages, whereupon both parties appealed to the Chief Court. Pending the appeal, defendant died, and his son was brought on the record as his representative, and at the hearing it was contended on his behalf, (i) that plaintiff's appeal had abated on defendant's death; (ii) that plaintiff had not proved that the alleged malicious prosecution amounted to a tortious act lege loci delicti commissi (i. e., of the Kalsia State) as well as lege fori (i. e., of British India); (iii) that the former proceedings had not resulted in the acquittal, but merely in the discharge, of the plaintiff; and (iv) that, in any event, defendant had not acted without "reasonable and probable cause" in charging plaintiff with theft.

Held, as to (i), that plaintiff's appeal did not abate on the death of defendant as aforesaid, as to (ii), that the plea not having been raised in the Lower Court in this form, could not be raised in the Chief Court on appeal; and as to (iii), that a discharge after full inquiry is better proof of the innocence of an accused person than an acquittal.

81A-C P C O 22 r 4 (1882 S. 368)-Suit, institution of, in a Civil ourt-Death of defendant before presentation of plaint-Court's power to substitute his representatives—Jurisdiction.

Held, that when a plaint is presented by plaintiff for the purpose of instituting a suit against a defendant in accordance with the provision of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, and it afterwards turns out that the defendant had died before the presentation of the plaint, the Court has no jurisdiction to substitute the representatives of the deceased as defendants and allow the suit to proceed as against them. (16 Mad 319, Ref: and 12 W R 45 approved & followed.)

Not only is there nothing in the Civil Procedure Code to authorize the institution of a suit against a dead man as distinct from a suit against his legal representative but the death of the defendant puts an end to the suit within a preseribed period unless steps are taken within that period for bringing in the legal representatives.

The defendants, on the other hand, produced the wajib-ul-arz of 1860, in which the right was given in these terms. "If any co-sharer wishes to transfer his proprietary rights by sale or mortgage, first let him transfer it to a real brother or a near brother or to other co-sharers, and in case these refuse or decline to pay the proper price, the owner may transfer to whomsoever he pleases". Held, that this being the whole of the evidence in the case, the existence of the custom was not disproved and that the later wajib-ul-arz explained the ambiguity in the earlier one.

Held, also that, where the sale was made to three sets of vendees, the share of each of whom was specified, and one of them died and his heirs were not brought on the record till after six months, the suit did not abate in respect of the shares of the other two sets. Hukam Singh v. Held, that as the Court was bound, under Section 57 clause 8 of the Evidence Act, to take judicial notice of the facts that the State of Kashmir existed, and that the Maharaja was its Sovereign recognized as such by the British Crown, and as the decree was against the Maharaja in his capacity as Ruler of the State, and was appealed from by him in that capacity the appellant must be regarded as a public functionary who was sued under, and appealed by his official designation and the appeal did not therefore abate under Section 366 of the Code as the true appellant was not dead the decree not being against the Maharaja in his private capacity, and the State which he represented for the purposes of the suit still existing

The words 'right to sue' in S. 361 of the Civil Procedure Code must be interpreted in their ordinary meaning, namely, the right to obtain relief by means of legal procedure. It does not follow that the right to appeal against a decree partakes of the nature of the original decree. Plaintiff sued to recover damages on account of a libel, and obtained a decree for damages against defendant. Defendant paid the amount of the decree and filed an appeal in the High Court after which he died; his son was then brought on the record as his heir and legal representative. To this it was objected that at defendant's death the appeal abated and his son had no right to continue the same:-Held, by Fulton and Crowe. J. During the pendency of her appeal in the Chief Court, the plaintiff died, and applications by the widows of other collaterals of H. R. who claimed to be brought upon the record and to continue the appeal as representatives of the deceased appellant, were resisted by the defendants on the ground that, as the deceased had only a life interest in the property and practically left no heir—the succession going to the heirs of her deceased husband—the right to appeal did not survive, and that the appeal ought therefore to abate.

The deceased H. R. was a Dat Brahmin of Kanjrur, tahsil Shakargarh, Gurdaspur District.

Where several defendants jointly appeal against a joint decree, to which S. 544 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, applies, the death of one of such appellants, if no legal representative of the deceased appellant is brought on the record within limitation, can only have the effect of causing the appeal to abate so far as the deceased appellant is concerned. (8) DEATH OF PRINCIPAL PENDING APPEAL.

115—Death of principal pending appeal—Principal and agent.—The plea of abatement on account of the death of the principal, pending the suit in appeal before the Lower Appellate Court, was disallowed, it being shown from the circumstances of the case that appellant, though an agent, intended himself to be the plaintiff. Had he acted as an agent, the whole authority was determined on the death of the principal, and the appeal must have abated until resumed by substituting the heir of the deceased principal as a party to the suit. Thornhill v. Taylor I Agra, 215.

8 DEATH OF PRINCIPAL PENDING APPEAL—Concld.

116—Abatement of appeal.—Where one of the defendants in a mortgage suit died pending appeal and no application was made to bring on record his legal representative as a party to the appeal, the appeal did not necessarily abate. It abates only in cases in which the litigation can not proceed without the representative of the deceased party to a final and complete adjudication. Renga Srinivasa Chari v. (9) DEATH OF RESPONDENT.

117—Appeals.] One of 4 respondents died, but no application was made within 6 months to bring his representatives on the record. In their application that was eventually made the name of a wrong person was inserted. Held, that the right of appeal did not survive against the surviving respondents alone but against them and other representatives of the respondent who had died. Therefore the proper order was to have directed this suit to abate. Held further, that when the order as to abatement was embodied in the judgment and decree, objection was properly taken thereto by way of second appeal against the decree. 18 All 19. 20 W N 109, 19 W N 136; 14 All 221, 22 Bom 718. referred to. Hem Kunwar v. Where a decree which had been obtained by several plaintiffs, proprietors of a joint residuary estate, set aside the sale of the said estate held under Act XI of 1859, and two of the plaintiffs, respondents died during the pendency of the appeal by the defendants against that decree to the High Court, and their representatives were not brought on the record within the time allowed by law.

Held, that the decree could not be reversed in appeal without the representatives of the deceased proprietors being placed on the record, and that as the decree set aside the sale of the entire joint estate, under no circumstances should that decree be affirmed as to the unascertained shares of some joint share-holders and reversed as to the unascertained shares of other joint share-holders.

Held further, that as sufficient cause was not shown by the appellant as to why application was not made within the time allowed by law to bring in the heirs of the deceased respondents and as the right of the appeal did not survive against the surviving respondents alone, the appeal had abated under the provision of section 368 read with section 582 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Chandreswar Persad Narain Singh v. 119-C. P. C.—S. 368—Death of respondent during pendency of appeal—Legal representative—

During the pendency of an appeal in the Chief Court in a pre emption suit brought by the pre-emptor as appellant against the vendor and the vendee as respondents, the vendor-respondent (who was a childless widow) died; whereupon an application was duly made by the appellant under Section 368, Civil Procedure Code, to substitute as the legal representatives of the deceased respondent, certain persons who were the reversionary heirs of the husband of the said deceased. It was objected at the hearing on their behalf that they were not the legal representatives of the deceased respondent, as there was a sister and a sister's son of the deceased in existence.

Held, that the term "legal representative", as used in Section 368 of the Code, clearly does not necessarily mean "legal heirs"; that it is not the intention of the section that an elaborate inquiry and decision should be given, in case of nice questions arising as to exactly who, under particular rules of law, is the legal representative, and that looking in the present case to the obvious practical interest which the reversioners had in the property, and the great probability (to say the least) that they were as much the next heirs and representatives as a sister or a sister's son, the objection taken by the respondents must be disallowed.— Charanjit Mal v. Mussammat Mitho, 29 P R 1888.

During the pendency in the High Court of an appeal in a pre emption suit, one of the respondents died, and his representatives were not brought on the record within limitation. Judgment was passed against the respondents in ignorance of his death. Execution was applied for by the successful appellant and was allowed as against the surviving respondents.

Held, that the decree being one for pre-emption, in which possession of the entire property might have been taken in execution, and the representatives of one respondent not having been brought on the record, the cause of action did not survive as against the remaining respondents. 3 Cal 487 (P C) relied upon; 17 All 478 dist. Imam Uddin v. On the preliminary objection, taken on behalf of the respondents in this appeal, that it should abate on account of appellant's failure to get the legal representatives of a deceased respondent substituted on the record under S. 368 of the Code, it was held, that since the liability of the respondents in the present case was joint and several, the death of one of them without his legal representatives being substituted in his place could not exonerate the others from liability and the appeal would abate only so far as the deceased respondent was concerned. One B died bequeathing by his will certain portions of his property to plaintiff, and defendants 4, 5, 6, respectively. Plaintiff sued on the will for the recovery of the possession of her share from defendants 1, 2 and 3, who were alleged to be in possession of the property in suit improperly. Defendants 4, 5, 6, refused to join plaintiff, so they were made defendants, but they did not appear either at the hearing in the Court of first instance or an appeal.

Defendants 1, 2, 3, joint brothers, and related to B as cousins, opposed.

The suit was dismissed An appeal against it was admitted and adjourned sine die; at the hearing after nearly two years, it was found that defendants-respondents Nos. 2 and 5, had died in the interval, and no steps had been taken to bring their legal representatives on the record. It was alleged that defendants-respondents Nos. 1, 2, 3 were joint and the interest of respondent No. 2, merged into those of 1 and 3, and that respondent No. 5 was not a necessary party. The appeal was still ordered to abate.

Held, that it could abate only as regards defendants-respondents Nos. 2 and 5, and should proceed against the rest, on the merits.

Pending an appeal before the High Court preferred by some of the former, A (respondent) died leaving a will. About four months after A's death, A's son obtained probate of the will. The appellants applied for substituting the name of A's son for A within six months of his obtaining the probate, but more than six months after A's death. Held, that the appeal could not have proceeded in the absence of a representative of A, and no sufficient cause having been shown for not applying for substitution within six months of A's death the appeal had abated under Ss. 368 and 582 C P C and Art 175 C of Sch II of the Limitation Act. 14 M L J 147.

Civil Procedure Code 1882, Sections 367, 368—One of two respondents having died pending an appeal, the appellant applied to have one Mussammat T.D brought on the record as the deceased's legal representative. Thereupon one H N applied under Section 368 of the Civil Procedure Code 1882, to be accepted as the legal representative of the deceased instead of Mussammat T, D. Held, that although Section 368 of the Code does not make any express provision for the case of a dispute in such matters, it follows ex necessitate rei, that when a dispute does arise, the court should have the power of deciding it by an interlocutary order for the purposes of proceeding with the case or appeal. 133.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) S 368—Death of respondent--Ommission to apply within 60 days to place representative of deceased on record—"Sufficient cause" for not applying within such period.

Where, pending an appeal, one of the respondents died and it appeared that the right to sue did not survive against the other respondents alone and no application was presented within the period allowed by law to substitute the legal representative of the deceased on record in his stead, held, that the excuse that the heir was not put on the record because the plaintiff-appeallants did not know the requirements of the Code and the Limitation Law, could not be accepted as "sufficient cause" in the terms of Section 368 of the Civil Procedure Code for the appellant's omission. Allanditta v Ziadat 39 P R of 1885

Compare Mussammat Bhain v Uttam Chand P R 39 of 1885

134.—Appplication to implead the legal representative of a deceased respondent—"Sufficient cause" for not applying within the prescribed period—Ignorance of law.

In a suit in which there were numerous defendants, it appeared that after the plaintiff had filed his appeal in the Court of the Divisional Judge, one of the respondents died leaving minor sons, and (it was allegeed) a widow, and also a brother who was also a respondent. At the hearing of the appeal it was objected that plaintiff had not applied within 60 days of the death of the deceased respondent to have his sons made legal representatives, whereupon the plaintiff explained that he considered it unnecessary, as the deceased's brother was alive and a party to the suit. The Divisional Judge held that this was merely pleading ignornance of law and the excuse was not sufficient.

Held, that the explanation was sufficient, the plaintiff being an uneducated zamindar, who, it might easily be believed, would consider the adult surviving brother to be the proper representative of the deceased in preference either to his widow or his minor sons in a suit regarding immoveable property.

It is not necessarily a ground for rejecting cause shown for omitting to apply for legal representatives to be brought on the record in place of a deceased party, that the cause shown involves a mistake of law (See No 81 P R 1886 F B, in Chief Court, arising out of a suit for partition of what he (plaintiff) alleged to be the undivided estate of a Hindu joint family, one of the defendant-respondents died, and no application having been made within the 60 days prescribed by Article 171 B, Schedule II, Act XV or 1877, to put his heirs on the record, it was contended on behalf of the remaining respondents that the appeal abated. It appeared that after the period of limitation for such an application had expired the appellant did put in on application, praying that, in addition to one B D., brother of the deceased already on the record, one R C. another brother, and also the widow of the deceased should be placed on the record as respondents, but in a subsequent application it was pointed out that neither R C who had separated from the family, nor the widow were entitled to be regarded as the lengal representatives of the deceased and the appellant therefore prayed that the suit be proceeded with, under Section 362, Civil Procedure Code without adding any parties to those already on the record.

As regards R C., held, that the suit having hitherto proceeded on the footing that he would have no claim to a share in the property on division, the Court would not be justified in assuming in a case where no custom modifying the Hindu law had been pleaded or proved, that a custom allowing separated brothers to share with associated brothers in the property of a deceased brother was applicable to the parties, and that R C was not therefore a necessary party to the appeal. (No 44 of 1884. Civil) referred to.

As regards the widow held, that in a suit for partition brought by one member of an undivided family against another, the widows of deceased brothers and cousins are not necessary parties though in many cases it might be convenient that they should be made parties, in order to ascertain what provision should be made for their claims against the estate.

The right to sue was therefere held to survive against the surviving respondents, against whom the appeal was directed to proceed under Section 362, Civil Procedure Code. Budha Mal v Bhagwan Das P R 86 of 1886 Civil.

137.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882 Section 368—Application to make the representative of a deceased respondent a respondent—"Sufficient cause" for not applying within the prescribed period—Ignorance of law.

The question referred for the decision of the Full Bench was whether, for the purpose of ascertaining what is "sufficient cause" within the meaning of Section 368, Civil Procedure Code and other similar provisions of the Code it is necessary to exclude altogether from consideration mistakes arising from ignorance of law

Held, by Burney Tremlett and Smyth, JJ that it cannot be laid down as a general proposition that ignorance of law can never be considered : but that the principle laid down in (No 39 of 1885, Civil), (viz that the excuse that the heir of a deceased respondent was not put on the record within the prescribed period, because the appellant did not know the requirements of the Code and the Limitation Law, could not be accepted as "sufficient cause" in the terms of Section 368 of the Code for the appellant's omission) should only be departed from under special circumstances.

Held, per Barkely, J., (while otherwise concurring in the reply to the reference made) that it is inexpendient to lay down any general rule to control the discretion of the Court in dealing with each case with reference to its particular facts. Ghulam Shah v Mallik Muzaffar Khan 81 P R of 1886 Civ.

of immoveable property, one of the defendant-respondents died and no application was made till after the lapse of 60 days from the date of the respondent's death by the appellants to place the names of the legal representatives of the deceased on the record in his stead, nor was the case one in which the cause of action could be held to have survived against the surviving respondent alone.

Held, by the Full Bench that S 368 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 and not S 372 was applicable to the above case, as the expression "cause of action" in Chapter XXI of the Code means any cause of action whether the suit be for damages, or for personal property or for immoveable property, or for some peculiar relief, and the expression "a cause of action which survives" means a cause of action which is not extinguished by the death of the plaintiff or of the defendant as the case may be. (10 Calc L R 449) not followed.

Held therefore, by the Division Bench (Plowden and Smyth JJ) that Art 171 B and not Art. 178 of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act applied to the above case, and accordingly under S 368 of the Code the appeal abated.

executed by a Muhamadan lady, widow of one R A., on the 2nd June 1881. The said lady having died in 1883, the persons sued were the brother and nephews of R A., they having succeeded to R. A's property on the death of the widow and the claim was based on the grounds that the defendants were the heirs and representatives of the widow, and that in any event, as the debt was incurred for necessary purposes, it was recoverable from the estate of her husband in their hands. Defendants pleaded that the deed was fictitious and without consideration, and that it was not executed for necessary purposes, and did not therefore bind the estate of R A.

The District Judge found necessity proved to the extent of Rs. 3,000 only, and, gave plaintiff a decree for that amount with interest at one per cent. up to date of suit or Rs 7,260 in all, with proportionate costs, against the property sought to be charged, and dismissed the rest of the suit with costs.

Plaintiff thereupon appealed to the Chief Court for the portion of his claim disallowed by the Lower Court and defendants filed cross-objections under Section 561, Civil Procedure Code, in regard to the amount decreed against them.

When the appeal came on for hearing, respondents' counsel pointed out that one of the respondents had died more than six months previously, and that no application had been made to put his representatives on the record, and contended that the appeal had therefore abated under Sections 368 and 582, Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of appellant, it was admitted that the facts were as stated, but it was urged that appellant had nevertheless a right to proceed against the remaining respondents.

Held, that the appeal abated as against the remaining respondents, inasmuch as under Section 42 of the Contract Act, the obligation to perform the promise of the widow devolved on her death, on all her representatives jointly, and as on the death of one of her said representatives, the heirs of the latter were not discharged, but took their place with reference to the liability, Section 368 was applicable to the suit though founded on contract, and no act on the part of plaintiff could take the case out of the operation of the said section.

9 DEATH OF RESPONDENT—Contd.

S. 43 of the Contract Act which gives a creditor a right to proceed against any one of his joint debtors, deals with substantive law, and the right so given must be exercised before the creditor institutes his suit. After the suit is filed the creditor is in the hands of the Court, and his option under s. 43 of the Contract Act is subject to the provisions of the Code of, Civil Procedure. He cannot therefore, defeat the provisions of s. 368 of the Code by resorting to his right under s. 43 of the Contract Act after the Limitation prescribed for putting the representative of his deceased debtor on the record has expired, and he has no explanation to offer for the delay.

Held, also, that even if appellant's prayer to proceed against the remaining respondents could be regarded as tantamount to one to amend his appeal, the appeal having at the time abated, it was too late to ask for such amendment in the form proposed, whatever might have been the decision on such application, if it had been made within six months of the death of the deceased respondent

Held, further, that as there can be no hearing on the merits after abatement, the cross objections had also abated. Rao Ghulam Muhammad Khan v Nahar Ali. 53 P R 1896.

142—Judgment before death.

A suit was brought for recovery of a share of ancestral family property, which had been sold in execution of a money-decree for a debt contracted by the plaintiff's grandfather. The plaintiff obtained a decree in the lower appellate Court, from which the defendant appealed to the High Court. During the pendency of the appeal, the plaintiff died, and on her own application, his widow was brought on the record. At the hearing it was contended that upon the plaintiff's death, the right to sue did not survive, and that the suit should be dismissed. Held by the Full Bench that, judgment having been obtained before the plaintiff's death, the benefit of the judgment or the right to sue, would survive to his legal representative. Muhammad Husain v Khushalo. 9 All 131.

The plaintiffs sued two defendants alleging them to be members of a joint Hindu family. Their suit having been unsuccessful, the plaintiffs appealed and during the pendency of the appeal one of the respondents died. After the lapse of more than six months the widow of the deceased respondent applied to the Court to have it declared that the appeal had abated. The appellants contested this application, but at the same time themselves asked that the widow might be brought on to the record if the Court thought it necessary that she should be a party. The Court accordingly ordered that the widow should be made a respondent. Held, that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the plaintiff's appellants having pleaded that the respondents were joint, whilst the Court of first instance had held that they were separate, the plaintiffs were excusable in not having applied to have the widow made a party to the appeal and the appellare Court had used a proper discretion in joining her Sher Singh v Hari Singh 1902 A W N 152.

An order having been made under s. 366 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the abatement of a suit an application was made to set aside the abatement and to substitute, the applicant in the place of the deceased plaintiff. The application was made several months after the period of sixty days allowed by art 171 of sch (ii) of the Limitation Act ; and the only cause alleged by the applicant for not continuing the suit related to a period of thirteen days only. The Court set aside the abatement, brought the applicant on the record and decreed the claim. The defendants appealed and in their memorandum of appeal objected to the order setting aside the abatement as illegal. Held, that the Court of first instance had committed an error in law in making the order setting aside the abatement, inasmuch as that order was time-barred and without sufficient cause being shown within the meaning of s 371 of the Code : that the error was one which affected the decision of the case within the meaning of s 591 ; and the defendants were therefore entitled to set it forth in their memorandum of appeal in the lower appellate Court. Dudhraj v Parbati, 9 W N 70, Chajjandas v. 1—Mortgage—Pre-emption.

A mortgaged his absolute occupancy holding to B without the consent of the malguzar. The holding was put up to sale in execution of a money decree subject to whatever encumbrances existed upon it and it was purchased by C. Before sale the Collector gave C an opportunity of pre-emption; but the Commissioner set aside the transaction on the ground that the right of pre-emption had not been exercised within a month. B now sued to enforce his lien against the holding. Held, that the proceedings taken by the Collector and by the Commissioner under section 38 Tenancy Act must be left out of consideration altogether as in no way affecting the rights of the defendant. 2—Absolute Occupancy Tenant—Malguzar—C. P. Tenancy Act. 1883 Sec. 38 —Mortgagee—Possession—Sale Deed— Specific Relief Act. An absolute occupancy tenant mortgaged his holding by a registered deed which was void as against the malguzar under Section 38 of the C. P. Tenancy Act 1883. The mortgagee sued the tenant on the deed, obtained a decree and got possession in March 1896. In June 1896 the malguzar with the knowledge of the above facts got a sale deed executed by the tenant and forcibly ejected the mortgagee who again got possession by a suit under the Specific Relief Act.

The malguzar then sued the mortgagee on his sale deed. Held that at the date of his purchase the malguzar had a right to take over the holding at a price to be fixed by the Deputy Commissioner but that as he chose to purchase for a price arranged between himself and the tenant and to pay the whole of that price to the tenant his suit could not succeed. 5. 3—Abwab—Promise to supply wood-Not forming part of rent—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), S. 179-Reg. (VIII of 1819), S. 5.

A patni lease, executed before the Bengal Tenancy Act came into operation, provided that the patnidar should supply wood for the cooking of the bhog of certain idol. On his default, the Zamindar sued him for the price of the article.

Held, that, as the value of the wood was not incorporated with and did not form an integral component of the rent of the patni, it should be considered as an abwab and not recoverable.

The original patnidar having died, his representatives the present defendants, were called upon in 1903 by the Zamindar to execute a security bond, and they complied with the requisition agreeing to remain bound by the terms of the original patni lease.

Held, that the execution of the security bond did not amount to a new lease, and that, therefore, s.179, of the Bengal Tenancy Act was of no assistance to the plaintiff. 3 C L J 301: 33 Cal 683; 4 C C L J 527, 10 C W N 527, 12 C W N 175. Where in a patni kabulyat executed before the Bengal Tenancy Act, it was stipulated that, besides the money rent agreed upon, the tenant would deliver 10 seers of chilli 5 days before the Puja to the landlord

Held, on a construction of the kabulyat, that the delivery of the chilli was a part of the consideration for which the tenant was allowed to take the lease, and that it was a part of the rent and not an abwab. 4 C L J 529, 10 C W N 529 rel. upon. Sarada Kripa Lala v. When a decree for mesne profits was satisfied by some out of the entire body of persons liable thereunder by payments made from time to time and a question arose as to the principle which would regulate contribution amongst the parties themselves:

Held, that the correct principle was to allow interest on the sums paid from the date of payment, and then to apportion rateably the whole sum crediting interest on each amount paid in favour of the party on whose behalf it was paid, from the date of payment until the final satisfaction of the decree for mesne profits. (i) CASTE INSPECTION OF BOOKS RIGHT OF.

8—Caste, not a corporation — Inspection of books—Right of members to.—

The right to inspect account books kept in connection with caste funds and properties is not in any sense a caste privilege. It is a legal right. It is preliminary to a right to assert a claim to property and is incidental to the right to recover property which may be lost to the caste by misuse or misappropriation. A suit brought by plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and others as members of Cutchi Memon Jamat to have full and free inspection of the books of account kept by the defendants in their capacity as trustees of caste funds and properties is maintainable in Civil Courts. It is the assertion of a pure legal right and it in no way affects the internal autonomy of the caste "or" its social relations. There is no analogy whatever between a corporation as known to English Law and an Indian caste. The principles governing the rights of members of caste to inspection of accounts of caste properties must be governed by considerations very different from those governing the rights of members of corporation seeking inspection of documents of such corporation.—Haroon Haji Vahedina v. Haji Adam Haji Oosman Nurani, 11 Bom L R 1267=4 Ind Cas 569.

An executor is not justified in declining to file his accounts simply because there may be a dispute as to the period from which the accounts should begin. But a party interested in the estate will be ordered to bear his own costs of the order if his application is frivolous or vexatious or if he has been guilty of long delay or laches or if he has acquiesced in the executor not filing the accounts.

(K) JUDGMENT—DEBTORS PAYING OFF DECREE AGAINST ESTATES ACCOUNT

10.—Judgment-debtors paying off decree against estate—Accounts. R, the 12 annas share holder of an estate, and after his death his successor-in-interest remained in wrongful possession of the remaining 4 annas share from 1826 to 1854 when the true owners recovered possession. In 1862, they instituted a suit for mesne profits from 1826 to 1854 against "the co-sharers, zemindars of 12 annas share" and got a decree in the first Court in 1875 against persons who were co-partners in the estate at the date of the decree. On appeal, the High Court merely reduced the amount decreed (in 1882). Between 1854 and 1882 several changes had taken place in the distribution of interest amongst the different branches of R's family. On a question subsequently arising as to what amount each co-partner was liable to contribute in paying off the decretal amount, the High Court held that this was to be determined according to the share which each of them had in possession from 1826 to 1864: Held (reversing the judgment of the Court)—That the cause of action in the suit was the wrongful enjoyment of the 4 annas share by the 12 annas shareholder collectively as part of their family estate and the decree which followed being in effect one against the estate, was against those who were co-parteners when it was passed and they were bound to contribute according to shares they then held in the estate. The decree was satisfied by payments made from time to time on behalf of the several co-partners from 1883 to 1889 and during this period interest ran on so much only of the amount of the decree as for the time being remained unsatisfied. In a suit for contribution instituted by one of the co-partners against the others in respect of the amounts so paid: Held—That inasmuch as each payment, so far as it went, stopped the running of the interest of the decretal amount, the benefit, of that cessation of interest ought to go in relief only of those who made the payment and not of those who continued in default. Accordingly accounts were directed to be taken on the following principle, viz., interest was to be computed on the total principal of the judgment-debt to the date of the final extinguishment without regard to the sums from time to time paid on account, and interest at the same rate on each amount so paid from the date of payment until the final satisfaction of the decree was to be credited in favour of the party on whose behalf it was paid, decree depending on the result. One of the items paid on account consisted of a sum of money held by the Government Treasury to the credit of the co-partners in separate accounts and derived from a portion of the estate which lay in the Garo Hill District. This amount was drawn in 1883 but one of the co-partners, H, proved that before that he had by suit established his right to a larger share in the estate than was represented by the amount held by the Treasury to his credit. The High Court in passing accounts held that H was entitled to a credit out of the sum drawn from the Treasury proportionate to his share in the estate: Held (reversing the judgment of the High Court)—That the money not having been held on joint account, H was not entitled for the purpose of the present suit to credit for a larger sum than that which stood to his account.

(m) COMMON LAW RIGHT OF THE MEMBERS TO INSPECT BOOKS OF THE CORPORATION.

13.—Register of shareholders—Member of the Corporation—Common-Law right of the member to inspect books of the Corporation—Presidency Banks Act (XI of 1876)——Bank of Bombay—Shareholder—Suit by shareholder against the Bank to enforce inspection of the register of shareholders.

On the application of a member the King's Bench Division will in general grant a rule for a limited inspection of the documents of the corporation, if it be shown that such inspection is requisite with reference either to an action then instituted or at least to some specific dispute or question depending in which the applicant is interested; but, even in this case, the inspection will be granted to such an extent only as may be necessary for the particular occasion. The rule was formerly sometimes laid down broadly, and the language ascribed to the Court in one or two cases might almost lead to the inference that members of a corporation have an absolute right, whenever they think fit, to inspect all papers belonging to the aggregate body. But any such doctrine is now exploded; and the privilege of inspection is now confined to cases where the member of the corporation has in view some definite right or object of his own, and to these documents which would tend to illustrate such right or object.

These principles were extended to the case where a shareholder applied to inspect list of shareholders, and registers of their addresses, of a bank incorporated under the Presidency Banks Act, 1876. The Bank of Bombay v. (n) INVENTORY AND ACCOUNT.

14-15.—Inventory and Account.

District Judge, power of, to call for inventory or account—High Court, decision of, if binding on lower court—Construction of Act—Reference to proceedings of Legislative Council:—Under S. 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, the District Judge has no power to institute a judicial enquiry by an audit of the inventory and account at the expense of the executor or administrator, nor can such an authority be implied from the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as to the appointment of a commission to examine the accounts. All that the District Judge has to do under S. 98 of the Probate and Administration Act is to see that the inventory and account prima facie satisfy the requirements of the section, that is, that the inventory appears on inspection to be a full and true estimate of all the property, credits and debts, and that the account on inspection appears really to be a true one shewing the assets and their disposal. To ascertain this the inventory and account should be passed under some examination by the judge's staff so as to detect manifest mistakes or errors: if such were detected the papers could not satisfy the section, and for this purpose the section empowers the judge to extend the time to the executor or administrator to amend the account. Where the testator enjoined on his executor to prepare accounts annually; held, that that did not enlarge the Judge's power and empower him to exact an account annually although it would authorise a person interested to take action against the executor. S 98 of the Probate and Administration Act does not give a Judge power to call for a revised account, if an account has already been exhibited as required by the section and has been accepted as prima facie true, but if it appears that the account is materially untrue the Judge may take action under its fourth subsection. Where once an account had been filed and accepted shortly after the expiry of a year from the grant of probate —Held, that the judge had no power to call for further accounts of subsequent years. Maharani Sarat Sundari Barmani v. 17.—Art 106—Suit for partnership account and share of partnership assets.

A suit by the heir of a deceased partner against surviving partner for an account and share of the deceased in the partnership assets, including the good will and trade marks of the partnership business, comes within the class of suits dealt with under Art 106. The fact that there were unrealized assets outstanding at the death of the deceased partner which were still outstanding at the date of the suit would not alter the nature of the suit. Mohit Lall Dutt v Raj Narain Dutt. 9 C W N 537

18.—Accounts—Expenses incurred for partnership not allowable if unseparably mixed up with private affairs.

In taking accounts, it is not possible for a court of justice to allow expenses to the accountable party, even though honestly incurred for the partnership, where, by mixing up his private affairs with those of the partnership and by his omission to keep clear accounts of any kind, he has made it impossible even to conjecture what those expenses are. Moung Tha Huyin v Mah Thein Myah. 5 C W N 114=28 Cal 53

(c) CUSTOM.

19—Indent form—Inconsistency between printed and written provisions-Custom of trade in Bombay—Indentor—Foreign manufacturer—Liability to account.

Where in an indent form in which the usual conditions of contract are printed there exists some inconsistency between the printed and the written provisions, the Court cannot discard the print, but must as far as possible discover the real contract of the parties from the printed as well as from the written words.

Account-(Contd.)

According to the custom of trade in Bombay when a merchant requests or authorizes a firm to order and to buy and send goods to him from Europe at a fixed price net free godown including duty, or free Bombay Harbour, and no rate of remuneration is specifically mentioned, the firm is not bound to account for the price at which the goods were sold to the firm by the manufacturer, and it does not make any difference that the firm receives commission or trade discount from the manufacturer either with or without the knowledge of the merchant. 38 L J Q B 111. ref. to. Beir v Chhotalal. 6 Bom L R 948=30 Bom 1.

(d) DISHONEST CONVERSION BY PARTNER.

20-Criminal breach of trust-Dishonest conversion by partner—Liability of partner to account for partnership money. In a partnership it is open to a partner to spend the money he receives and to account for it in dealing with the partnership, and such a partner is plainly entitled to be called upon for an account of the expenditure of the money which he has received.

In a case where it was not satisfactorily made out that this was not done, and it could not be made out in the absence of a proper demand for an account, it was held that no dishonest conversion could be found, which would justify the conviction of the partner under S 406 Penal Code

(E) HARD & UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAIN.

21.—Hard and unconscionable bargain-Relief—Exceptions—The general rule is that neither excess of interest nor exorbitance of charge will suffice for a court to relieve parties from the incidents of their contracts unless the element of unfair dealing, such as, that the debtor has been overreached, tricked or deceived, or that the money lender has taken an unfair and undue advantage of his weakness and necessities, is shown. The mere fact that a person is in urgent need of money is not sufficient in itself to raise a presumption that the person to whom he applies for the loan will take unfair advantage of his necessity. Undue influence or unfair dealing must be proved before a presumption of pressure can arise. A bargain not in itself hard and unconscionable can

(F) EXECUTOR'S RIGHT TO CALL FOR INVENTORY AND ACCOUNT.

22.—Executor's interest—Executor's right to call for inventory and account from co executors. An executor to whom leave to apply for probate has been reserved has an interest, or at any rate, an appearence of interest so as to entitle him to call for an inventory and account from his co-executors who had already obtained probate.

Obiter:—Probate is made operative as the authenticated evidence and not at all as the foundation of the executor's title and an executor derives all interest from the will itself and the property of the deceased vests in him from the moment of the testator's death. 1 Phill. 239 at 241: 1 Phill 241—1909. (G) GUARDIAN'S LIABILITY TO RENDER ACCOUNTS.

23.—Guardian's liability to render accounts-Suit for accounts.—Where a previous guardian failed to deposit the process fee, which he was required to put in, for the purpose of notice being given to the succeeding guardian to come in and inspect the accounts, and the Court has made no order declaring the previous guardian to be discharged under S 41. cl 4 of the Act, a suit lies for the purpose of calling upon the previous guardian to render accounts. The mere fact that the succeeding guardian has neglected to inspect those accounts, although they were paying in the Court for about a year, is no legal bar to the suit being maintained.

Although a question, as to whether certain properties in respect of which accounts are claimed, really belonged to the estate of the minor or to the previous guardian personally, is a question of right, which cannot properly be gone into in such a suit, still for the purpose of taking an account, it must be seen what are the properties, which the previous guardian took possession of, as guardian of the minor under the orders of the Court; and he is bound to render an account, in respect of all the properties, of which he received charge as such guardian. Kaniz Fatima v Sajjad Hosain 34 Cal 211.

(K) COMMISSION TO EXAMINE

27-Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), Sec. 398 Amount, Commissioner to examine—Commissioner's duty—commissioner, when to take evidence under section 398, Civil Procedure Code—Commissioner, not a Judge or an Arbitrator—Decision of commissioner, value of.

On an application by the parties, the appellate court ordered a certain vakil to be appointed commissioner with powers under section 398, Civil Procedure Code, to examine the accounts and objections to the same, and it was further ordered that the vakil should submit to the court his report on the said accounts and objections.

Held that the object of the order was to refer to the commissioner the examination of the accounts for the purpose of enabling the court to see what the accounts were, and duty of the commissioner was to make out an account showing to the court exactly, what the accounts in the books stood and nothing else. The business of the commissioner was practically to place himself in the position of an assistant to the court, so as to give the court all the information which the accounts gave and thus to enable the court to come to a decision.

Held further, that under section 398 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the commissioner is entitled to take evidence in the matter referred to, so as to be able to report to the court for the purpose of enabling it to give a judgment on the points at issue.

The commissioner cannot deal with the case as if he is the Judge or an arbitrator appointed by the parties.

If the commissioner's report does not show what the accounts are, but merely contains a decision in favour of one party, the report is waste paper and is of no assistance to the court, whatever. Tincowri Debi v Suttya Doyal Ranerji. 6 C L J 105

28—Direction to take, not contained in a decree.

A decree contemplated an account being taken between the parties but it was silent on the question as to how that account was to be taken, whether by the Commissioner of the Court or by some person selected by both the parties. The Court of first instance decided that where the direction as to account ought to have been incorporated in the decree when passed it was competent to the Court at any stage of proceedings to direct necessary inquiries or accounts to be made or taken

Held, on appeal, that as some account was taken under the decree by a person appointed jointly by the parties a new agreement had come into existence superseding the decree and the Court was not competent to make the order appealed against. Sir Jehangir Cowasji Jehangir v The Hope Mills, Ltd. 33 Bom 273 =10 Bom L R 488; reversing 33 Bom 216 =9 Bom L R 1380.

29—Negotiable Instruments—Object of parties having dealings with each other—Presumption.

Prima facie the object of a promissory note is to show that the particular transaction represented by the note is a separate transaction, and it is intended that the remedies in respect of that transaction, should be separately pursued, even though the parties had several dealings with each other and there is a running account between them. Issur Singh v G Bergamaun. 30 Cal 627.

1—Inspection of account books—Right of a member of a caste to inspect documents and books of account relating to caste property—Injunction where such inspection refused

Where a member of a caste, who was also a trustee of the caste property, was refused inspection of books of accounts, documents etc, by the President of the managing committee of the caste —

Held that an injunction could be granted restraining the President from refusing such inspection.

Every member of a caste, being interested in its affairs, has a right, incidental to his membership, to every information which the books, records, and documents of the caste can give him to enable him to discharge the duties he owes to the caste It is a right similar to that of a partner in a firm to the partnership books and can be taken away from him only by an express caste rule, resolution, or usage. But a trustee or a member of a caste has such right to inspection only for the bona fide purpose and in the interest of the caste and not for any purpose hostile or injurious to those interests.

Though a Court will not interfere with the jurisdiction and discretion of a caste as regards its internal purposes and management with reference to which it is its own master to frame rules and regulations, yet it will interfere in favour of any individual member of the caste as against any other member or members of it, where the Court is asked to give effect to any rule, resolution, or usage, of the caste if the right claimed in virtue of such rule, resolution, or usage, is a civil right congnizable by the Court In giving relief in such cases, the Court so far from interfering with the autonomy of the caste, or encroaching upon its jurisdiction as to its internal affairs, recognises them by giving effect to its rule, resolution, or usage

When a plaintiff sued on a deed which recited that accounts had been settled the defendant may by pointing out existence of irregularities and mistakes in the book of the plaintiff justify reopening the account. Girdharlal v Hiraji 91, P J 337.

2—Accounts—Expenses incurred for partnership not allowable if unseparably mixed up with private affairs.—In taking accounts it is not possible for a Court of justice to allow expenses to the accountable party, even though honestly incurred for the partnership, where, by mixing up his private affairs with those of the partnership and by his omission to keep clear accounts of any kind, he has made it impossible even to conjecture what those expenses are. Moung Tha Huyin v Mah Thein Myah. 5 C W N 114=28 Cal 53

Notes—Dist: 11 M L J 353=25 Mad 149.

3—Settled account—requisites of—Acquiescence—Accounts settled to be reopened when—Proof—Leave to amend—Suit for account, procedure to be followed.

The requisites for making an account settled depend on the circumstances of each case and mode of dealing between the parties.

Account settled—(Contd.)

Although acquiescence in accounts furnished may not, by itself, amount to settlement, when acounts have been delivered with opportunity for inspection where they have been duly examined and no exception has been taken, and where they have been acquiesced in, they cannot be opened unless upon distinct and specific averment of errors proved or of fraud, mistake or collusion proved.

If a settled account is impeached for errors, particular errors must be stated and proved and the same rule holds even where the account is settled "errors excepted."

Where the plaintiff commenced an action on the assumption that no accounts had been rendered, and the case proceeded on the question of the liability of the defendant to render an account and the appeal was argued on the same footing, leave ought not to be granted to convert the suit into one for re-opening the accounts on the ground of errors contained therein.

Where a person seeks an account from another alleged by him to be his agent the first question to be decided is the factum of the agency. If that question is decided in favour of the plaintiff the next question to be tried is whether the defendant as agent is liable to be called upon to account. If he answers that accounts have been settled between him and his principal, that question ought to be tried next. If the accounts have not been settled, they have then to be taken. In suits of this description, if the liability to account is denied, that is the fundamental question to be tried first It is only after an adverse decision upon this question against the defendant, that he may be called upon to render an account.

Mohesh Chunder Bose v. Radha Kishen Bhatta Charjee. 6 C L J 580.

4—Accounts—Limitation Act Sch. II. Arts 57 and 85—Account-current-Account, open mutual.

An open account is one, which is continuous or current, uninterrupted or unclosed by settlement or otherwise, consisting of a series of transactions.

An account-current is an open or running account between two or more parties, or, an account which contains items between the parties, from which the balance-due to one of them is, or, can be ascertained.

Mutual accounts are such as consist of recip rocity of dealings between the parties and do not embrace those having items on one side only though made up of debits and credits.

An account, under which one party has merely received and paid moneys on account of the other, is not a mutual account properly so-called. Each party must receive and pay on account of the other.

A shifting balance, sometimes in favour of one side, sometimes in favour of the other, is a test of mutuality but its absence is not conclusive proof against mutuality.

The mere circumstance that, on one solitary occasion there was a sum to the credit of the defendants in the books of one plaintiffs, does not make the account, between the parties, a mutual account in which there have been reciprocal demands between the parties. 6 (M H C R 142 and 17 Mad 293=4 M L J 140 Ref: 18 Beav.575 (579); 52 E R 225; 23 L J Ch 657: 18 Jur 763; 2 Phillips 7: 8; 3 Drewry 183 (192) 61 E R 873 (876) 2 Y and C. 5—Suit for—Procedure—Principal and Agent.

In a suit for accounts all that is necessary for the plaintiff to show, to entitle him to a decree, is that the defendant is a person bound to account. When this is established, the Court ought to fix a date for the furnishing of the accounts under S. 215 A C P Code, and order accounts to be taken. The law does not impose any duty on a plaintiff, who calls on his agent to account, first to satisfy the Court that there is, or ought to have been some surplus in the hands of the agent. 6—Accounts—Accounts settled—Omission of plaintiff to party for re-opening of accounts on the basis of fraud—Plea of defendants that no accounts were rendered—Finding that plaintiff accepted payments after hearing accounts read—Whether amounts to a finding that accounts were.

A finding, in a suit for settlement of accounts, that plaintiff accepted payments after hearing accounts read, is not finding that accounts were settled between the parties.

Where the defendant, in such a suit, admits that he had not rendered any accounts to the plaintiff and was not liable to do so, the Court should presume that there was no settlement of accounts, and plaintiff's suit is not liable to dismissal on the ground that he did not pray in his plaint for re-opening of accounts on the ground of error or fraud. Pattath Manakkal Narayanan v Manakkal Narayanan. 8 M L T 424=7 Ind Cas 853

In June 1883, the plaintiff's father advanced a loan to the defendant at compound interest. The account of this debt with interest was adjusted and signed from time to time. In June 1893, it was adjusted and signed, the amount found due being Rs. 28-8-0. In February 1896, the plaintiff sued to recover this amount. Held, that the account (ruzukhata) was merely an acknowledgment of the debt and of the correctness of the calculation of interest upon it. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to treat the amount so found due as principal and to claim interest upon it. The debt to be sued on was the amount originally advanced, and the interest recoverable was limited by that amount according to the rule of damdupat. By English law an account stated could be sued on as implying a promise to pay. Formerly this was the rule also in Bombay (as shown by the earlier cases), where the account was signed. If, however, it was not signed, it could not be sued on as a new contract. The Indian Limitation Act required an acknowledgment or admission of a debt to be signed; and an admission not made in the manner prescribed by law (i. e. signed) for the purpose of preventing a debt from becoming barred does not imply a promise to pay it if it should become barred. According, however, to the later authorities, an account stated or adjusted (ruzukhata) cannot be sued on as a fresh contract. The suit must be brought in respect of the original transaction, and the subsequent stated or adjusted accounts are only evidence of the debt arising from them, and serve to prevent the operation of the Act of the Limitation. Shankar v Mukta. 22 Bom 513.

4.—C. P. C. O. 2 r. 2 (1882 : S. 43)—Cause of action—Account stated—Mortgage transaction.

The defendant traded in Zanzibar as the agent of one Khimji, who owned five shops within the German jurisdiction. To release from attachment these shops, the defendant obtained from the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 7,000 out of which he applied Rs. 5,859 in discharge of the attachment, and returned the balance to the plaintiff. As a security for the repayment of Rs. 5,869, the defendant became personally responsible for the amount, and as part of the same transaction, he got a mortgage in his own favour from Khimji of the five shops and in turn sub-mortgaged them to the plaintiff. As a result of these transactions, the plaintiff debited Rs. 2,753 in the general account which was in the name of the defendant. The plaintiff then brought Suit No. 193 of 1899 against the defendant to recover the balance due on this general account; and a few days later he brought another Suit No. 196 of 1899 for the purpose of enforcing certain rights under the sub-mortgage. The first suit was decided in the plaintiff's favour, but the second was thrown out on the ground that it was barred under Section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that the second suit was not barred by Section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, since the two claims were not in respect of the same cause of action. The cause of action in the earlier suit was an adjusted account, in respect of the transaction arising out of the mortgage; and the mortgage constituted a cause of action in itself in the second.

An account stated respecting a debt constitutes a new and distinct cause of action, the consideration being the ascertaining of the previously uncertain state of the transaction between the parties, while a promise to pay is implied by the admission of the balance.

(3) MAHOMEDAN WIDOW IN POSSESSION FOR DOWER

4—Mahomedan widow in possession for dower—Suit not framed for an account.

In a suit by the only brother and heir-at-law of a Mahomedan of the Shiah sect, claiming the whole of the deceased's estate, and for mesne profits, the issues raised by the pleadings were, first, whether a marriage had taken place between the deceased and the party in possession, who claimed to be his widow, and secondly, the validity of a deed of dower executed by the deceased in her favour. The Courts in India found these issues in favour of the widow, and dismissed the suit. The Judicial Committee, in affirming the Court's decrees upon these points, held further that, although the estate of the husband was hypothecated for the dower, yet as the heir-at-law would be entitled to the residue after satisfying the widow's claim, he was by right entitled to an account, but as the plaint was so framed as not to admit of an account being taken, the appeal was affirmed, without prejudice to a suit being brought for administration of the deceased's estate upon the footing of the marriage and deed of dower being admitted in the suit. Ameeroonnissa v Moradonnissa. 6 Moore's I A 211.

was not in a position to treat defendant as a trespasser and to call upon him for an account of the past administration of the trust upon that footing; and further, that the suit being substantially one to remove the defendant from the trust and establish plaintiff's title to the hereditary office, or on failure of this, to secure the appointment of a fit and proper person to fill defendant's office, the account was only prayed for on that understanding, and, therefore, the plaintiff was not entitled to call for an account of the past administration of the trust, as a person interested in the religious trust. Manally Chenna Kesavaraya v Vaidelinga. 1 Mad 343.

The plaintiffs instituted this suit for an account against the defendants after the lease had expired:—Held that the suit for an account was not maintainable, the lease created between the parties the relationship of landlord and tenant and the only relief which the plaintiffs could not ask is a decree for rent if any still remains due. Bhekdhari Lal v Badhsingh Dudharia. 27 Cal 663.

sum which might be found payable to him The agent denied having received any money and also his liability to an account thereunder The court found that the relation of agency subsisted between the parties The Appellate Court dismissed the suit on the ground that though an attempt has been made to prove a balance due, still from the evidence adduced at the hearing, it was impossible to decide, how much of the principal's money was unaccounted for:—Held, that such a suit was essentially a suit for an account and the Lower Courts should have ordered an account to be taken of the defendant's dealings with plaintiff's money. This was without any expression of opinion that, in a suit for an account, an issue may not be raised, at the outset, so clearly as to be ready for decision. But the general rule being the other way, this suit was an example of it. Hurrinath Rai v. Krishna Kumar Bakshi.14 Calc 147=L R. 13 I A 123

In a suit for an account by a principal against his agent, the plaintiff should ask in his plaint that a proper account may be taken. If the defendant is found liable to render such account for a certain period, the Court should make an interlocutory decree declaring that he is so liable, and direct him to file an account in Court within a fixed period. This decree may be enforced under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code. After an account has been filed, the plaintiff should be allowed reasonable time to examine it. If the objections are numerous, the procedure prescribed by ss. 394 and 395 and form 157 of Sch IV of the Code should be followed. When the accounts have been taken, the court must determine the amount due, and the final decree should be for the payment of this amount and also, if necessary, for the delivery of any papers, vouchers, or other documents which have come into the hands of the agent in the course of his employment. Art.175 C.—Death of respondent—Legal representative necessary for prosecution of appeal-Application for substitution of legal representative made within six months of obtaining probate of deceased respondent's will, but more than six months after his death—Abatement of appeal—Sufficient cause.

In a suit which was in substance one for taking the accounts and winding up the affairs of a partnership which had subsisted between the plaintiff and several defendants to that suit, a final decree was made binding the plaintiff and some of the defendants to contribute in certain proportion a sum of money of which a portion was directed to be paid to another defendant A. Pending an appeal before the High Court, preferred by some of the former, A (respondent) died leaving a will. About four months after A's death A's son obtained probate of the will. The appellants applied for substituting the name of A's son for A within six months of his obtaining the probate, but more than six months after A's death. Held, that the appeal could not have proceeded in the absence of a representative of A, and no sufficient cause having been shown for not applying for substitution within six months of A's death, the appeal had abated under Ss. 368 and 582, C. 16—Suit against gomasta—Duty of Court to look into accounts.

In a suit against a gomasta to obtain accounts of moneys which had come into his hands, it was held that it was not enough for the Lower Courts to make a decree ordering the defendant to render nikash papers to the plaintiff; it was the business of the Court to have these papers brought before it and examined, and to determine whether they were correct and fair accounts between the parties. Shushee Shekhur Audhikaree v. 19—Execution proceedings transferred to a Collector—Court's power under S. 324 A—Collector's duties.

A Collector acting under S. 320 of Civil Procedure Code has power to include on the debit side only such charges as can be incurred under the provisions of the chapter; and the Court is perfectly justified under S. 324 A in regarding as at its disposal, the balance which is left after such charges have been deducted; and if there be any charges which have been not so incurred, but which have been inserted in the accounts, such charges, being improper, cannotiaffect or restrict the disposing power of the Court over the balance. The power of the Court as to the application of the balance is complete although the fund itself remains in the hands of Collector as trustee.

The amount of maintenance to be determined for the judgment debtor is a matter for the Court to consider and decide and one which it cannot allow the Talukdari Settlement officer (acting as a Collector) to decide.

The Collector, like an agent, though bound under S. 324 A to render accounts, cannot be compelled to give up the account books into Court nor does the section require him to pay the balance into Court. Rupali v. Kalyansing: Rupali v. Gambhirsingji (6 Bom L R 825).

(9) RIGHT TO REOPEN SETTLED ACCOUNT

22-Right to re-open settled account-Principles of Court of Equity in re-opening accounts—Principles which regulate a Court of Equity in opening stated and settled accounts—Accounts of long standing and great complication of a mercantile firm at Calcutta one of the partners of which afterwards acted as agent in England, involving charges for agency and partnership transactions were mutually agreed to be investigated and closed. After long negotiations and discussion respecting some of the charges, an agreement was come to, the parties agreeing to strike the general balance at a given sum, reserving one item of the account amounting to a considerable sum, for future investigation This reserved item was subsequently settled by the acceptance of a bill of exchange for a lesser amount, as such reserved-item, if re-opened would have disarranged the settled general account. The bill of exchange was dishonoured and an action brought to recover the amount. A bill was then filed for an injunction for the cancelment of the bill of exchange, and praying that the accounts so settled might be opened. The Supreme Court at Calcutta held that the reserved item being left open was evidence that the account was not finally closed, and decreed the accounts to be opened, referring the cause to the Master On appeal, held by the Judicial Committee (reversing such decree, and dismissing the bill with costs) that the transaction amounted to an adjustment of the general account between the parties, subject to the reserved item which was subsequently settled, and that the accounts so settled and closed could not, in the absence of fraud be re-opened Mc. 23—Examination of accounts, waiver of—settlement of account—No fraud or undue influence used in settlement—Promissory note for the amount found due—Re-opening of accounts, not allowed.

Where two persons have mutual dealings and accounts and one of them of his own free-will and accord and without any fraud practised or undue influence exerted by the other waives his right to an examination of the accounts for the purpose of ascertaining the balance due and agrees to treat a gross sum as due from him and executes a promissory note for the amount, the promissory note must be treated either as the result of a settled account or as a settlement by compromise, and in either case it cannot be re-opened.(5 M I A 395 Fol) Magniram Khupchand v Laxminarayan Rampratap 10 Bom L R 281=32 Bom 353

24—Hindu Law—Partition-Account-Account for partition nature of-Mitakshara joint family—Manager's liability to account—Settled account when to be reopened or impeached-Right to correct account-Pleadings. When accounts have to be taken with a view to a partition of joint family properties, the account which has to be taken of the entire family property in the hands of the different members is mainly an enquiry into the existing assets: the head of the family cannot, in general be called upon to defend the propriety of the past transactions of the family.

Although the Court is always reluctant to re-open account which has been settled with deliberation and with tolerable fairness, relief will be granted where fraud or mistake is established; and it does not matter whether the error in the accounting occurred by accident or design: nor is it necessary that the error or mistake should be mutual If an item has been omitted in the account by mistake it may be recovered.

Account suit for-(Contd.)

A settled account is only prima facie evidence of its correctness; it may be impeached by proof of unfairness or mistake in law or in fact ,and if it be confined to particular items of account it concludes nothing in relation to other items not stated in it. But the right to correct an account is confined to cases in which no element of estoppel has intervened or where there is no obligatory agreement between the parties as upon settlement and mutual compromises.

Ordinarily, where a party seeks to open a settled account, there must be some direct, distinct and specific averment of errors to entitle the party to open the accounts, but where no objection was taken by the defendant to the frame of the suit and even after the preliminary question of the liability of the defendant to render an account had been decided in favour of the plaintiff, and the accounts had been elaborately examined without any objection as to the course adopted being taken, the Court will not allow an objection of this character to prevail when it is not suggested that the defendant has been in any way prejudiced by the omission of the plaintiff to specify the errors in the plaint.

4—Valuation of suit—Appeal—Jurisdiction—Bengal N. W. P and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887) s. 27

Plaintiff sued for an account and valued the suit at Rs. 2000, but added that if any further sum were found due he would pay the additional court-fee. A preliminary decree was passed directing the Defendant to render accounts. On Defendant's failure to account, plaintiff filed an account claiming that Rs. 11000 was due and prayed for a decree for that amount. Plaintiff subsequently reduced the amount to Rs. 9000. Defendant thereupon objected and on an account being taken plaintiff's suit was dismissed and he preferred an appeal to the District Judge valuing his appeal at Rs. 4500 The District Judge held that the appeal did not lie to him as the value of the suit was Rs. 9000 and not Rs. 2000. Held that the appeal lay to the District Judge as the value of the suit must be considered

Per curiam—The presumption in favour of everything necessary to give validity to a marriage is one of exceptionl strength and the evidence to rebut the presumption must be strong. distinct. satisfactory and conclusive. 12 Cal. 706 (1885) followed. In India there is no legislative prohibition against persons who are not British subjects and of English domicile marrying though they be within the prohibited degrees as understood in England. The Courts in India will not disallow a Roman Catholic of Indian domicile, who has obtained the necessary dispensations, from marrying his deceased wife's sister, though by the law of her own Church she may be incapable of contracting the marriage. The husband's capacity renders the marriage valid in law. 5 P D 94 (1879), relied on. Where a person who belonged to the Greek Church subsequently embraced the Roman Catholic religion and married his deceased wife's sister (necessary dispensations having been granted to him) and thereafter speedily reverted to his original faith: Held—That this subsequent apostacy did not affect the validity of the marriage. It is not the province of the Court to examine the sincerity of a man's religious convictions. Per Mitra, J.—The rule to be applied in such a case is that of equity, justice and good conscience as stated in sec. 37 of Act XII of 1887. There being no Municipal law or well-established usage prohibiting the marriage of a domiciled British Indian of the Christian religion with reference to consanguinity or affinity, the marriage of such a Christian when it is not incestuous by the general consent of Christendom should be declared valid. H. In a suit by the zamindar for increase of rent, the defendants claimed to set off a sum representing the amount which the zamindar was bound to contribute under the Road Cess Act and Public Works Cess Act, and which amount they had paid to the Collector. Held that the amount in question came within the terms of the kabuliat, and that the defendants were not entitled to the set-off claimed by them. 4 Calc. 576, followed Shumbhu Nath Mookhopadhya v Hurro Sundari Dabia Chowdrain. 11 C. 4.—S. 3 and ss. 9, 10, 23, 25, and 26—Sale for arrears of road cess, Effect of—Right of purchaser—Interpretation clause, construction of.

In a suit on a bond by which certain land admittedly lakhiraj was mortgaged, the purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property at an auction sale for arrears of road cess due under Bengal Act X of 1871 was added as a defendant and the lower Courts, holding that the effect of such a sale was to pass the property to the defendants, free of incumbrances, made a decree excluding that portion from liability in respect of the mortgage-bond. Held, on the construction of Bengal Act X of 1871, that the sale had no such effect, and that the whole of the property was liable to be sold in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. Although the effect of an interpretation clause is to give meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places in the Act in which that word occurs, it is not the effect of an interpretation clause that the thing defined has annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature. It does not follow, therefore, that because lakhiraj property is defined in the Road Cess Act, 1871, to be a tenure, all the interests and consequences attached by other Acts to tenures generally, or to particular classes of tenures, become annexed to lakhiraj property.

5.—Ss. 5, 7 and Part II, sch. A, part ii—— Bhowli tenures—Suit for rent.

S. 5 of the Road Cess Act requires the holders of any estate or tenure, of which the annual rent shall exceed one hundred rupees, to lodge returns of all lands comprised in an estate or tenure; bhowli lands are therefore to be included in such returns. When the Collector has determined the annual value in respect of certain land and a portion of that land is subsequently granted as a tenure to an under-tenant and the Collector has not separately assessed the annual value of the land of the tenure so created, the under-tenant will nevertheless be liable for any cesses in respect of that land. In such a case it is competent to the Court to ascertain the annual value of the land comprised in the defendants' tenure.

7.—Bengal Cess Act (Act X of 1871) s. 47—Decree for arrears of cess—Effect of sale in execution.

Although the procedure for the realization of cesses may be the same as the procedure laid down for the realization of rent due upon the tenure, yet it does not necessarily follow that the effect of a sale for cesses should be the same as that of a sale for arrears of rent for which the tenure itself is liable to be sold. 12 Cal 430, followed. S. 47 of the Act provides that "Every holder of an estate or tenure to whom any sum may be payable under the provisions of this Act may recover the same with interest at the rate of twelve and a half per cent, per annum in the same manner and under the same penalties as if the same were arrears of rent due to him." Notwithstanding the above, the effect of a sale by the Collector in execution of a decree for cesses against some of the owners of a tenure is not to convey to the purchaser the whole tenure, but only the right, title and interest of the particular individuals against whom the decree was obtained. Mahanund Chuckerbutty v Bani Madhub Chatterjee. 24 Cal 27.

The plaintiffs sued to recover arrears of road and public works cesses on account of certain rent-free land, and they claimed to recover double the amount due under s.58. The first Court found that as notice of the valuation had not been published in accordance with s. 52, the provisions of s. 58 were not applicable. It was then contended that the plaintiff was, at any rate, entitled to recover the amount of the cesses with interest under s. 62. Held that the required notices not having been published, no cess has become payable under that section and that his suit must be dismissed. Ras Behari Mukerjee v Pitambori Chowdhrani. 15 Cal 237.

9.—Ss. 52, 53—Evidence Act, s. 114—Presumption.

Where under an Act certain things are required to be done before any liability attaches to any person in respect of any right or obligation, it is for the person who alleges that that liability has been incurred to prove that the things prescribed in the Act have been actually done. Held that the notice provided by s. 52 of the Road Cess Act did not come within the presumption of s. 114, cl. (e), of the Evidence Act, and must be proved. Ashanullah Khan Bahadur v. Trilochun Bagchee.

The notification as to imposition of Public Works cess in the Calcutta Gazette was dated the 6th June 1877. It was published in the Gazette of the 13th June 1877 and it was declared therein that the liability of property in certain districts to pay Public Works cess would accrue from the year beginning with the 28th June 1877. Held, that the lessee is liable under the contract to pay the entire amount of the Public Works cess payable on account of the tenure, as it was imposed after the execution of the lease. Bhola Nath Lahiri v Chunder Madhub Ghose. 6 C L J 212.

3.—S. 4, explanation, and S. 20 (a) and (b)—Road-cess return—Conversion of nakdi into bhaoli rent shortly before return submitted——Annual value how to be assessed—Alteration in area of holdings and tenures by reason of exchange amongst tenants, if must be specified in return.

The plaintiffs who had a share in a mouzah had their share separated by partition in 1300, F S. Subsequently to the partition the defendants who were tenants and were paying nakdi rent agreed to pay bhaoli rent from the beginning of 1302, F S. It also appears that, after the partition, the tenants of the whole estate agreed amongst themselves to respectively hold lands in that share only in which they held homestead lands and in this way an exchange of lands took place between them. On the 4th of Assin 1302, F S., the plaintiffs submitted a road-cess return in respect of their separated share, in which the nakdi rents which prevailed up to the end of 1301, F S., and the recently settled bhaoli rent were mentioned. Further the statement of land, holding or tenure given in the return corresponded with the state of things as they existed prior to the exchange effected between the tenants. Plaintiffs having sued the defendants for bhaoli rents calculated on lands held by them since the exchange the defendants objected that the provisions of cls. (a) and (b) of S. 20 of the Act had not been complied with.

Held, that as there was no enhancement of rent but only conversion of nakdi into bhaoli rent and as no calculation of annual value based on the average money-value of three years' bhaoli rent as contemplated in the explanation to section 4 of the Act was possible in this case, the plaintiffs had substantially complied with the provisions of S. 20, cl. (b) of the Act.

that cl. (a) of the section had also been complied with inasmuch as all the lands for which rent was payable were mentioned in the return although it appeared that by reason of the exchange of lands amongst the tenants, the lands for the rent of which each of the defendants was sued in this case was greater than that shown in the road-cess return.

5.—Act IX of 1880 S. 4—Hat, Profits from, not liable to Road cess.

The profits from a hat not being rent or revenue or annual value of land within the meaning of S. 4 of the Act are not liable to road-cess. Therefore a land-lord who pays road cess upon such profits cannot recover it from his tenant.

The Rule of the Revenue Board authorizing the assessment of hats, being at variance with the provisions of the Bengal Cess Act, is ultra vires (6 C L J 342: 11 C W N 1053 (F B), Fol. 28 Cal 637 Fol. Surajdeo v Narain Mackenzie 5 Ind Cas 254.

6.—Road Cess Act (Bengal) Ss. 4—6.—Mela profits of whether liable to be assessed with cess —Income tax-Immoveable property—Lessee and licensee, difference between Annual value of land Lease.

When a person agrees to pay the zamindar a separate fixed rent for the rights or privileges to hold a fair annually for a few days on lands which are included in the jotes or holdings of agricultural tenants, at a time when no crops are standing on them, but was given no right or interest which could be enforced against the ryots, and he in turn gave to certain persons, who are described as ijaradars what is called an ijara of the rights to hold the fair at a certain yearly rental.

Held, that the profits, of the mela cannot be lawfully assessed with Road and Public works Cesses.

The liability to pay income tax does not carry with it as a necessary consequence exemption from payment of Road Cess.

Per Rampini A. C. J.—Whether the profits of a mela are derived from land or are immoveable property and whether the persons in enjoyment of them are tenure holders within the meaning of the Road Cess Act or not depends upon the terms of each particular lease.

Per Brett, Woodroffe and Mookerjee JJ.—

The profits derived from a fair do not fall within the description of "annual value of land" as defined in section 4 of the Road Cess Act.

Distinction between a lessee and a licensee explained.

Per Brett and Woodroffe JJ.— A mela or fair is not an immoveable property within the meaning of section 4 of the Road Cess Act.

The amount paid by the ijaradars is not liable to assessment for Road Cess.

The profits of the fair are not liable to assessment under Chapter V of the Road Cess Act as other immoveable properties not included in chapter II. 28 Cal 637. The Secretary of state for India in Council v Karuna Kant Chowdhry. 6 C L J 342=11 C W N 1053=35 Cal 82.

7—Ss. 4, 41—"Holder of a tenure," whether includes a raiyat.

A raiyat may be a tenure-holder within the meaning of the Cess Act of 1880. S. 41 of the Act draws a distinction between a holder to a tenure and a cultivating raiyat, and not between a holder of a tenure and a raiyat. Peary Mohan Roy v Sarat Kumari Debi 15 C L J 428.

8—S. 5—Charge.

The words in s. 5 of the Cess Act (B C IX of 1880) "all immoveable property shall be liable to the payment of a Road-cess or a Public Works cess" are sufficient to lead to the conclusion that the amount assessed as cess is a charge. Assanullah Bahadur v Manjura Banu. 8 C W N 357=30 Cal 778.

9—Ss. 6, 72, 81.—"Annual net profits of mines," meaning of—"Owner," "Occupier," meaning and difference—Return, liability of both to submit—"Sources of income," meaning of:—

Per Rampini, J:—The word "owner" in s. 72 of the Road Cess Act (IX of 1880 B C) is not restricted to the actual worker or the lessee of a mine. It is applicable to the proprietor of the land in which mines have been excavated and who is in receipt of a share of the annual profits in the form of royalty. The lessees under such proprietors, especially if they hold leases for only limited terms, cannot be considered the owners of the mines. The word "owner" used in the section is not necessarily the same person as the "occupier" and is not restricted to the "occupier." A proprietor of land in which mines are situated and who is in receipt of royalties of a certain specified sum for the working of the mines is in enjoyment of annual net profits of mines and is as such liable to pay road cess in accordance with the provisions of s. 6 of the Road Cess Act. S 72 of the Road Cess Act does not contemplate the service of only one notice on the owner or occupier of a mine, the submission of only one return by him, and the levying of only one assessment on the annual net profits enjoyed by him. The terms of that section read with s. 14 (2) of the Bengal General Clauses Act, applies as well to two notices and to two returns as to one. The submission of separate returns having regard to Ss. 72 and 81 of the Road Cess Act and the making of separate assessments on the "owner" and "occupier" are not necessarily illegal under the Act, as they are not expressly prohibited by the Act. The "annual net profits" from a mine is a quantity which is independent of the circumstance whether the mine is worked by the owner himself or by lessees or adventurers holding the property under him: the difference between the gross earnings and the working expenses which constitutes the net receipts is the net annual profits from the mine. If the mine is worked by the owner himself, the whole of the net receipts is taken by him as the net profits. If the mine is worked by a lessee from the owner the whole of the net receipts becomes divisible between landlord and tenant according to the terms of the Contract Act which regulates their rights. In such a case when the landlord takes a rent and royalty the amount received by him represents a portion of the annual net profits from the mine, and the royalty received by him is liable to be assessed with cesses and the balance left in the hands of the tenant constitutes his share of the annual net profits from the mine. S. 6 of the Cess Act of 1880 makes the cess leviable upon the annual net profits form a mine, no matter whether such profits are taken entirely by the owner or are, distributed between the owner and the lessee who is in actual occupation of the mine. The Legislature contemplates in s. 72 of the Act the service of one notice and the submission of one return in respect of the whole of the net annual profits from the mine and not in respect of any portion of the same. The term "owner" in s.72 is used in a limited sense; it means an owner who is in possession of the mine or who has control over it, or in whom the mine is for the time being, beneficially vested, and who has the occupation or control or usufruct of it. 46 L J Q B 559, 7 Ad. and Ell. 124, 46, 164; 80 R R 507 and 3 Q B 449; 61 R R 249 ref. to. Quere Whether s. 424 of C P C, is limited in its application to cases of what might be called torts or wrongs 25 Cal 239 ref. to. Manindra Chandra Nandi v The Secretary of State for India in Council. 5 C L J 148=34 Cal 257.

10—Ss. 6, 72, 76, 80 and 81 and Sch. E—Proprietor of land—Coal mines—Royalty—Cess on Royalty—Annual net profits—Liability to pay cess—Policy of Cess Act.

Where the plaintiff, who was the owner of landed property, leased such property to various parties for the working of coal mines, and who, besides the rent of surface land, received, under the designation of royalty, a percentage on the coal raised by the lessees or mine-owners, had been assessed for "cess" under the provisions of the Cess Act (IX of 1880, B, C.) in respect of the royalty received or receivable by him from the coal mines on his estate:

Held, that the return required under S.72 of the Act was not with regard to the mine owner's profits, but had reference to the general net profits of the property; that the royalty receivable by the plaintiff was part of the "annual net profits" of the mine within the meaning of those words in ss. 6 and 72 of the Act; and that the plintiff had been properly assessed with "cess" thereon.

In S. 81 of the Act, the word "owner" is used in the sense of proprietor, but the liability for the "cess" lies on both "occupier" and "owner" in the case of mines, etc., as in the case of land it lies on holders of estates or tenures or raiyats, the policy of the Act being that all persons, who benefit by the maintenance and construction of "roads and other means of communication" or "works of public utility" out of the cesses, should bear the liability of paying the same Manindra Chandra Nandi v The Secretary of State for India in Council. 8 A L J 140 (P C) =9 M L T 196=15 C W N 210= 13 Bom L R 82=9 Ind Cas 311= 21 M L J 365.

Bengal Act VII of 1880 for the recovery of public demands applied to cases of road and other cesses. (P R 14 Cal I) referred to.

Where a commissioner setaside a sale held in execution of a certificate granted by a Deputy Collector in respect of a fine imposed for failure to comply with a notice under sec, 16 of the Cess Act, on the ground that the evidence for the petitioner made out a prima facie case of fraud or at any rate of irregularities which prevented the Petitioner from obtaining knowledge of the proceedings against him,and caused the sale of his estate at a most inadequate price. Held—That the power of revision-conferred on the commissioner by sec. 17 of Act VII of 1880, B. C, was amply—sufficient to justify the order setting aside the sale.

The Board of Revenue also had power to interfere in this case under sec. 24 of the Act.

Sec. 17 of Act VII of 1880 B. C. applied to order made after as well as before sales in execution of certificates issued under the Act.

The periods of limitation applicable in ordinary cases were not binding on the Commissioner when he was acting in exercise of his revisional jurisdiction.

It is an elementary principle which is binding on all persons who exercise judicial or quasi judicial powers that an order shoud not be made against a man's interest without there being given him an opportuuity of being heard.

In this case the order of the Commissioner annulling the sale was challenged in a regular suit brought in the Civil Court on the ground that the order was made without hearing the purchaser.

Held, That the proper remedy of the purchaser was to apply to the Commissioner for a rehearing.

Under a perpetual mokarari lease a tenure-holder stipulated to pay Rs. 1,585 as the total amount of rent inclusive of abwabs and cesses during the whole period of the continuance of the tenancy. It contained the following words "Yeh Sal Samilusi pundrah sao panchasi rupea men hai, bilmokhta". Held — That the tenant undertook to pay the whole of the cesses which were levied at the time of contract, inclusive of the share payable by him under the state as also the share the burden of which would otherwise have to be borne by the landlord himself. If any additional cess is imposed or if the amount of cess is increased, the incidence of the new burden is regulated according to the statute. When an exemption is claimed from statutory liability, the contract under which exemption is claimed must be strictly construed against the claimant and it must appear from its terms, beyond the possibility of any dispute that the parties intended to vary the liability as imposed by the State. The rule is specially applicable, when exemption is claimed from exaction imposed by the State. The construction to be placed on a deed ought to be such as will render it reasonable rather than unreasonable and will make it just to both the parties rather than unjust to one of them. 18—Ss. 46, 112, 113, 114, 351 A-Model Rules, Rule 33—Appointment of paid Assessor, whether valid.—

At a meeting of the Municipal Commissioners of a certain Municipality, the question of appointing a paid Assessor was raised as an amendment which was lost. Within six months from that date, the question was again raised as a substantive proposition which was carried. An Assessor was appointed accordingly, who revised the assessment of the plaintiff, which was confirmed by the appeal committee under S. 114 of the Bengal Municipal Act. The plaintiff brought this suit, to have the assessment of his holding declared void as being made by an assessor appointed in contravention of law.

Held, that the appointment of a paid assessor had not been "finally disposed of" at the first meeting, within the meaning of Rule 33 of the Model Rules under S 351 A of the Act; that, therefore, its reconsideration at the second meeting was permissible; that the validity of the determination of the Appeal Committee could not be impeached; and that the plaintiff's suit must fail. In a suit for enhancement of rent, some road-cess returns rendered under Bengal Act IX of 1880, s. 95 of which makes them admissible in evidence against the person by or on behalf of whom they were filed, were held to be, though not conclusive, evidence to show that the claim for enhancement could prima facie be supported on the ground that the existing rate was not "fair and equitable," within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act. This evidence (found to be the only reliable evidence produced by either party) shifted the onus on the tenants to rebut any presumption raised by the returns, by producing their collection papers. If they had not done so, the Court would be justified in acting on the presumption under s. 114 (g), I E A. (Dist: 32 Cal 118). 20—S. 95—Road Cess returns—Admissibility—Admissions by defendant's fellow-tenants—No evidence against defendant.—

S. 95 of the Cess Act lays down that returns made under it "shall be admissible as evidence against such person (that is, the person by or on whose behalf they were filed), but shall not be admissible in his favour". It does not enact that such a return shall be admissible only as evidence against the maker, and the first part of the provision is clearly declaratory, but not exhaustive. Admission in Road Cess returns made by a defendant's fellow-tenants (especially when they were made by them not qua tenants but qua landlords, and when it is denied that the makers are dead, and there is no finding to the contrary) are no evidence whatever against the defendant. 21—Sec. 95, applicability of—Document, admissibility of, not objected to in the lower Court—Decree, not inter partes admissibility of.—

The plaintiff alleging himself to be a kashtkar or holder of a right of occupancy sued the defendants for the possession of the land on the ground that they were in occupation without any right. The defendants produced certain rent-receipts showing that the landlords recognised them as kashtkars. The plaintiff produced a rent decree of 1869 (which contains a statement contrary to that which appears in the receipts) and road-cess returns:

Held, that the road-cess returns are admissible in favour of the plaintiff and their admissibility is not affected by section 95 of the Road Cess Act. Section 95 of the Road Cess Act has no application to the case where the parties who tendered road-cess returns in evidence were not the persons who filed them, in pursuance of the provisions of the Act.

The decree, though not inter partes is evidence to show that the landlords recognised the plaintiff as kashtkar, and that the rent receipts granted to the defendants were fraudulent. When no objection was taken as to the admissibility of a document in the Court of first instance, it is not allowable to take the objection in appeal.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, payable by certain fractional shareholders in a Talook, the Zemindar put in as evidence several road-cess returns which had been filed on behalf of another fractional shareholder and which showed that the tenants were receiving from subtenants considerably higher rent than they were paying to the Zemindar,—and this was found to be the only reliable evidence produced by either party. Held, that the returns, though not conclusive, prima facie showed that the existing rate was not fair or equitable and this evidence shifted the onus on the tenants to rebut any presumption raised by the returns by producing the Collector's papers. As the tenants had not done this the Court was justified under s. 114 (g) of the Evidence Act, to award enhanced rate on the basis of the returns.

The practice, which has prevailed for upwards of half a century, of allowing the plaintiff, in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, to put a value on the relief, which he asks for, and thus determine the jurisdiction, is not illegal and shall not be departed.

The word "Value" is S. 19 of Act No. XII of 1887 may be interpreted to mean the valuation put by the plaintiff on the relief sought by him.

A suit for restitution of conjugal rights does not admit of being satisfactorily valued, but the plaintiff can put his own valuation, subject to the power of the Court to refuse to accept the valuation if it is not bona fide. A money value, however arbitrary, can be placed on all suits. A Munsiff can, therefore, try a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, the value of which, as fixed by the plaintiff, is within his pecuniary jurisdiction. 7—Ss. 18, 19, Sub-Section 1—Restitution of conjugal rights and suit for—Appeal, forum of.

A suit for restitution of conjugal rights is incapable of being valued and to such a suit a special money value cannot be attached for the purposes of jurisdiction.

A suit for restitution of conjugal rights is not therefore triable by a Munsiff under s. 19, Sub-Sec. I of Act XII of 1887 (Civil Courts Act), but is triable by a District Judge or Sub-Judge under s. 18 of that Act.

A suit for restitution of conjugal rights was valued at Rs. 49 and brought in the Munsiff's Court. The Defendants did not object to the valuation and to the jurisdiction of the Court. In second appeal it was argued by Defendant that the suit ought not to be dismissed on the ground of the Munsiff's want of jurisdiction.

Held—That s. II of the Suits Valuation Act covers a case like the present in which a Court has exercised jurisdiction by reason of an arbitrary valuation when no valuation can or ought to be made, and the suit ought not to be dismissed, no objection to jurisdiction having been taken in the manner provided in s. When the original value of a suit was over Rs. 5,000, and by a consent decree the plaintiff accepted a sum of less than Rs. 5,000, an appeal against an order passed in execution of such decree by the Subordinate Judge lies to the High Court, and not to the District Judge.

In a suit for recovery of mesne-profits the plaintiff valued his claim at Rs. 300 for the purposes of ascertainment of the jurisdiction of the Court and the amount of the Court-fee payable. He stated that, if the amount of mesne profits was found to be greater than Rs. 300, he might be awarded a decree for the excess amount after payment of additional Court-fee A Commissioner was appointed to ascertain the rates at which rent was payable in respect of the different classes land. He submitted his report that if the meane-profits were assessed at a certain rate, the plaintiff would have been entitled to a decree for Rs. 580. But the plaintiff made no application for the amendment of the plaint nor did he ask for leave to increase the valuation of his claim or offer to pay any additional Court-fee. The first Court gave him a decree for Rs. 223 and he appealed to the Sub-Judge and valued his appeal at Rs. 357, that is, the balance of Rs. 580. The appeal was dismissed and the plaintiff filed a second appeal.

Held, that the mere circumstance that the plaintiff chose to value his appeal at Rs. 357 did not show that the value of the suit was raised to Rs 580, for such an alteration could not be made without a proper application to the Court in that behalf, and even if such an application were made, it could not be granted unless the plaintiff paid the additional Court-fee, and that consequently the value of the suit must be taken to be Rs, 300 and the second appeal was incompetent. 11 Cal. 169, Rel. on; 34 Cal 954; 6 C L J 255; 11 C W N 1133 (F B) Ref. Kali Kamal Maitra v Fazlur Rehman Khan Chowdhry, 7 Ind Cas 778

Under section 42 of the Bengal Drainage Act the right of the landlord to recover from his tenant, any sum as drainage charges payable by him, accrues on the date on which the landlord has entered into an engagement with the Government to pay the sum assessed by the Commissioners appointed under the Act, and not on the date on which the Collector assesses the amount payable by the tenant under s. 44.

Clause (c) of section 42 of the Act does not entitle the landlord to recover from his tenant in any one year more than one-tenth of the total sum payable by him.

A suit for the recovery of drainage charges payable by a tenant to his landlord under section 42, clause (b) and section 44, sub-section (1) of the Bengal Drainage Act must, having regard to the provisions of clause (2) of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, be brought within three years from the last day of the Bengali year in which the sum claimed fell due.

The plaintiffs and the defendants were owners each of an eight annas share in a mehal. It was alleged that the mehal was privately partitioned between the plaintiff's and the defendant's ancestors, that they were in enjoyment of their shares and that the partition was subsequently confirmed by a decree of Court also. Then in 1884, the defendant petitioned the Collector to make a partition but on the plaintiff's objection that there had been a private partition, the petition was dismissed. But, on appeal to the Commissioner, the order of the Collector was reversed and he was asked to proceed with the partition. After various objections by the plaintiff, the Deputy Collector of Durbhangha, to whom the case was sent, partitioned the estate and sent the case for the sanction and approval of the Collector, under s. 58 of Act V of 1897 (B. C.). The plaintiff then filed the present suit for a declaration that the properties, the subject-matter of the suit, having been privately partitioned, could not be partitioned again by the Collector, under the Estates Partition Act. Held, that under s. 2, cl. excluded—Scope and effect of s. 111—Mirasi or permanent tenure—Circumstances leading to the inference of the existence of such tenure—Fixity of—Rent—Separate suit.

Plaintiff instituted the present suit for a declaration of his title as a Mirasdar in respect of a portion of land in a taluk of which plaintiff and the defendants are co-owners, and also for a declaration that the rent was fixed in perpetuity. In the course of prior proceeding for partition of the estate by the revenue authorities under the Estates Partition Act (Bengal Act VIII of 1876), the present plaintiff set up title as mirasdar in respect of land now in dispute, and the Collector came to the conclusion that the miras set up by the plaintiff was not proved. It was contended on behalf of the defendants that the order of the Collector was made under s. 111 of the Act and that the suit was not maintainable under s. 149 of the Act. Held that s. 111 did not apply, because neither the existence of a permanent tenure nor the fact that the rent of the tenure was fixed in perpetuity was admitted. S. 111 provides for cases of permanent intermediate tenures, and prescribes the mode in which the partition is to take place when the fact of such tenures is established. Held, also, that s. 149 does not exclude the jurisdiction of Civil Courts in matters which involve a question of title. (36 Cal 726 Ref.) If, in the course of a partition proceeding under Act VIII of 1876, any question arises as to the extent or otherwise of the tenure, as the tenure-holder is not a party to the proceedings, he is not affected in any manner by the decision which may be arrived at by the revenue authorities for the purposes of partition between the proprietors. It would be unreasonable to hold that a party, who has appeared before the revenue authorities in his character as a proprietor, should be finally concluded by a decision upon a question of title, which would not have been binding upon him if he had been a stranger to the proceedings where the tenure had been in existence for at least seventy-five years prior to the commencement of the suit, and the plaintiff was in undisturbed possession of the lands in dispute from the date of his purchase up to time when, in the partition proceedings, the existence of the tenure was denied by his co-charers, and, on the conveyance executed in favour of the plaintiff, his vendors asserted that they had a miras right in respect of the lands in dispute. Held, that, under such circumstances, the inference is perfectly just that the tenure was of a permanent character. (32 Cal 51, 34 Cal. 602, Ref. 21 Cal. 496, Dist). The only effect of the decree in favour of the plaintiff in this suit is to decide that the tenure is permanent, and the question as to whether the rent is or is not fixed in perpetuity is left open for decision in suit properly framed for the purpose. Janki Nath Chowdhury v Kali Narain Chowdhury.

5-S 116-Order of Collector striking off partition—Proceedings under s, 116, Estates Partition Act, in consequence of disputes as to title to certain land—Suit for declaration of title to and possession of land in dispute—Applicability of.

In consequence of a dispute in partition proceedings as to whether certain plots of land should be included in the property to be partitioned or not, the Collector passed an order, under s. 116 of the Estates Partition Act, directing that the partition proceedings be struck off. The plaintiffs brought a suit for declaration of their title to the said disputed plots of land and to recover possession thereof. On behalf of the defendant, it was contended that the suit was barred by limitation under Art 14 of the Limitation Act. Held, the present suit was not brought to set aside the order of the Collector but to obtain the lands and for a declaration of their title thereto. The Collector's order could not stand in the way of the plaintiff's obtaining the reliefs prayed for and it was, therefore, unnecessary for the plaintiffs in this suit to have that order set aside. As the suit was not brought to set aside the order of any public officer, Art 14 did not apply and the suit was not barred by limitation.

6—Estate Partition Act (VIII of 1876, B C), S. 116—Order directing execution of lands from partition.

Suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to certain lands, for a direction that the Collector should proceed with their partition under the Estates Partition Act, and for possession to be given to the plaintiff and his co-sharers It appeared that, in proceedings before the Collector under this Act, the Collector passed an order excluding the disputed lands from the partition and proceeded with the partition in respect of other lands. The question for decision was whether Art. 14, Sch 2 of the Limitation Act, barred the suit, the same having been brought more than one year from the date of the Collector's order. Held, Art 14 of the Act did not apply, because the Collector had no power, under S. 16 of Act VIII of 1876, to pass an order excluding the disputed lands from partition that such order was ultra vires and consequently, a nullity, and that, therefore, Art. 14 was not applicable to the suit, and the suit was not barred (21 Cal 626, 11 Bom 429, 15 Bom 434 and 32 Cal 1107 Fol: 29 Cal 367, Distd.)

Bengal Acts-Estates Partition Act (V of 1897)

1-S. 29-Manager of Court of Wards, power of, to assert the claim of pre-emption—Delay in assertion of right—Formality-Claim, when can be made —Act V of 1897 (Bengal Estates Partition) Ss 29 and 95—Custom.

A guardian or manager under the Court of Wards can assert a claim of pre-emption, based on the ownership of the ward's property, and such manager does not need any express sanction from the Court of Wards. He can also perform on behalf of an adult female ward the ceremonies of Talab-i-mowasibat and Talab-i-ishtishad.

There is no fixed time within which the talab-i-ishtishad should be performed. It is a question of fact for the Court to determine, whether such ceremony was done within proper time.

The performance of the ceremoney of tab-i-ishtishad is not meant to be done for the information of the vendor or vendee, though its effect may be to give them information. The formality is insisted on with the object of getting evidence that the pre-emptor has really asserted his right, and because evidence is wanted in order to establish proof before the Magistrate. It may be that no witnesses are present at the time of the performance of the talabi-mowasibat. The talab-i-ishtishad must be performed in the presence of witnesses so that there may be proof that the claim has been made.

The performance of the ceremony in the Raj kachary or law office of the vendor is a sufficient compliance with the law.

The existence of the custom of pre emption among Hindus in the district of Champaran, Bihar had been judicially recognised.

The assertion of the claim of pre-emption must be made without delay; but before the shafee can assert his right to pre-emption, he must be satisfied by evideuce, which he holds to be credible, that the sale has been completed.

It is clear from the authorities that under the Mahomedan Law, before it can be held that the sale was complete, there must have been a cessation of the vendor's right in the property.

An order passed under S. 29 of Act V of 1897 has not the effect of dividing the shares of the proprietor finally, until the date specified in S. 9 > of the Act, and until the latter date the right of pre-emption subsists. 1 All 521 and 23 All 129 Ref. 16 W R (F B) 13 Fol; 17 Cal 543 Ref. 27 All 160 diss. An estate having been partitioned between the plaintiff and his co-sharers under Act VIII of 1876 (Bengal), a portion of a holding, which, formerly, appertained to the joint estate fell within plaintiff's share: Held, that the partition had the effect of dividing the holding, so that the plaintiff became the sole landlord with regard to the portion of the holding that fell within his share of the estate. (5 Cal 273, 26 Cal 852, Ref.; 1 C W N 160, 2 C L J 369, Dist.) Act VIII (B C) of 1876, whilst it did not provide for the division of holdings, did not also contain any prohibition against such division. Protab Chandra Das v Kamala Kanta Shaha. 10 C W N 818.

3—S. 99—Private partition amongst proprietors—"Tenancy in common," cessation of—Putnidar of separated share, if bound by subsequent butwara by Collector.

S. 99 of the Estates Partition Act does not apply, when the estate partitioned by the Collector had already been privately partitioned amongst the proprietors and the proprietors were holding their shares of the lands in severalty and not in common tenancy as contemplated in that section. A putnidar in possession of a separately allotted portion of such estate is not, therefore, affected by the subsequent partition by the Collector.

The fact that the Government was not bound to recognise the private partition for purposes of revenue does not affect the question. (20 Cal, 285 Ref).

At this time C was married; but F was not married. C had a son born on the 17th May 1858 who lived to be 21, and to whom on his attaining his majority, one moiety of the estate was handed over by the executor. F married W in 1875, and she had a son born on 23rd August 1883, who only lived a few hours.

Held. (1) that on the birth of the son of F the half share in dispute became vested in him and on his death it passed to his father as his heir.

(2) That a bequest in favour of a person simply that is, without any intimation of a desire to suspend or postpone its operation confers a vested interest.

(3) That there is no line of precedents attaching to Bengali terms' meanings, which make them understand as terms of art by Bengali lawyers

(4) That the words "descend to the eldest son" meant to go down to him,to belong to him,in succession to the testator referred to his birth.

A person whose income-tax is below the taxable minimum, does not become qualified as a voter within the requirement of S. 15 of the Bengal Municipal Act by submitting to the levy of the tax. Similarly, a person, who is not legally liable to pay the Municipal rates as required by that section does not become qualified as a voter by paying such rates.

General words used in a statute will be interpreted in a qualified sense, when grounds for doing so appear within the statute itself.

Bengal Acts-(Municipal Act III of 1884)-Contd.

Per Mukerjee, J.—The term "owner" as defined in cl. 11, S. 6 of Bengal Municipal Act, is not restricted, in the case of an owner not in possession, to one who is in receipt of rent from the occupier of the premises. Such a person is an "owner" within the definition, though the premises are in the occupation of his son. The son as "manager" or "agent" of the father, would also be "owner" within the definition.

The son appearing to have contributed considerable sums towards the acquisition and subsequent improvement of the property, the presumption, moreover, was that he was joint owner with the father.

As the son was also proved to have paid the rates out of his own money :

Held—That he was legally liable to be assessed with those rates as an "occupier," if not as an owner, and was thus properly qualified to vote and to be elected as a commissioner.

Per Teunon, J.—That the son having been proved to have a substantial interest in the property was rightly treated by the Municipality as an owner and as liable to be assessed under S. 103 of the Act. The Local Government at the recommendation of that officer proceeding under S. 9 (e) re-establish the Municipality with a reduced number of Commissioners, who imposed and recovered certain new rates from the appellant. He brought this suit for the recovery of the amount.

Held, that the suit falls under cl. (35) (f) of Sch II to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and a second appeal lies.

Bengal Acts-(Municipal Act III of 1884)-Contd.

Held, also. that the "Commissioners at a meeting" and not the "Commissioners" had the power under S. 9, cl (e), to recommend the alteration in the number of the Commissioners, and, therefore, the new rates imposed by a body, not duly constituted, were not legally imposed and the appellant was not bound to pay them. Bepin Behary Sen v Chairman of Santipur Municipality. 1 Ind Cas 388.

A petition of objection to a notice purporting to be under s. 210 of the Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884 B C) though not stamped, and therefore informal, should be taken notice of by the municipality and dealt with according to law.

When an objection is raised that a particular person who does an official act has no power to do it, it is for that person to prove that he has such power. No mere presumption under s. 114 of the Evidence Act, that official acts have been rightly done, can dispose of the objection.

A notice issued by the Vice-Chairman of a Municipality under s 210 of the Act, in the absence of proof of delegation of powers under s. 45 of the Act, is invalid.

The notice in this case being invalid, the conviction under s. 219 of the Bengal Muncipal Act was bad.

At a meeting of the Municipal Commissioner of a certain Municipality, the question of appointing a paid Assessor was raised as an amendment which was lost. Within six months from that date, the question was again raised as a substantive proposition which was carried. An Assessor was appointed accordingly who revised the assessment of the plaintiff, which was confirmed by the Appeal Committee under s 114 of the Bengal Municipal Act. The plaintiff brought this suit to have the assessment of his holding declared void as being made by an Assessor appointed in contravention of law:

Held, that the appointment of a paid Assessor had not been "finally disposed of" at the first meeting, within the meaning of Rule 33 of the Model Rules under s 351 A of the Act, that therefore, its reconsideration at the second meeting was permissible: that the validity of the determination of the Appeal Committee could not be impeached, and that the plaintiff's suit must fail. Section 116 of the Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884), does not take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in a case in which it is alleged and established that the assessment, the propriety of which is in controversy is open to objection on the ground that it is ultra vires; in other words, it is only when the action of the Municipality has been exercised in conformity with the powers conferred upon it by the Act, that the Civil Court has no authority to interfere. The test in such cases is, whether the assessment is or is not in conformity with the statutory provisions.

Errors in assessment which constitute irregularities merely and do not go to the ground work of the tax and render the assessment void, can be corrected only in the manner provided by the statute, which creates the authority, and the remedy so provided must be treated as exclusive. On the other hand where the defects in assessment are jurisdictional, rendering them void, the persons aggrieved thereby are entitled to invoke the ordinary judicial remedies, and all clear violations of law give rise to jurisdictional questions. In other words, while mere erroneous exercise of judgment is not reviewable by the Civil Courts, any excess of jurisdiction makes the act liable to challenge in such Court.

The term "property" designated as a subject of taxation without any qualification includes both real and personal property or estate and intangible as well as tangible rights of value.

The word "circumstances" was not introduced in section 85 of the Act, to restrict the term "property" the intention of the Legislature seems to have been on the other hand to widen the scope of the section so as to make taxable what might perhaps be not properly comprised under the term "property" and at the same time ought not to escape assessment. The property of the defendant which was taxable in the present case, under the law was unquestionably his whole income and the fact that he spent only half of it within the Municipality does not make his circumstances and property within the Municipality worth only that much. Chairman of Giridith Municipality v Sreesh Chandra Mazumdar. 7 C L J 631=12 C W N 709= 35 Cal 859.

14.—Ss 113, 116—Land-holders—Liability to assessment-Power of Municipal Commissioners, to levy tax-Assessment—The word "liability" in the second portion of s 113 of Bengal Act III of 1884 meant liability a part from the question of occupation, and must be taken to refer to the liability to assessment or rating of a person who is the occupier of a holding. S 116 has no application to a dispute as to whether a person assessed to the tax does or does not occupy a holding and to the same restricted meaning ought to be placed on the word "liability" in this section also. Hence, a suit brought to set aside an assessment on the ground that a person assessed does not occupy a holding is not barred by s 116.

26.—Ss. 321, 322, proviso—Latrine tax—Fixing of scale—Shop-keeper, liability of, to pay latrine tax—Liability of shop-owner.

If the Commissioners at the meeting did not fix any scale for the levy of latrine fees, as enjoined by S. 321 of the Bengal Muncipal Act, the assessment and levy of the latrine tax must be deemed to be ultra vires.

The meaning of the proviso to S. 322 of the Act is, that, when a shop-keeper lives elsewhere, and pays latrine tax for his house, he shall not be made to pay again for his shop, unless the shop contains a privy or cesspool. The owner of a shop, who is not its occupier, cannot claim exemption under the proviso.

From an owner of shops, which, together with the dwelling-house, are all included in one holding, fees are to be levied on the annual value of the holding inclusive of the shops. The wording of S. 321 shows that the fees are to be levied with reference to the annual value of holdings containing dwelling-houses or privies, and not with reference to dwelling-houses only.

The fact that the plaintiff has been convicted by competent Court, though he may subsequently have been acquitted on appeal is evidence of the strongest possible character, if unrebutted, against the plea of want of reasonable and probable cause.

But if the conviction at the original trial has been procured by the defendant by false or fraudulent testimony or other unlawful means, and such conviction is subsequently reversed by a higher Court and the plaintiff is acquitted and discharged, the fact of conviction ought not to be treated as conclusive proof of probable cause.

Reasonable and probable cause is an honest belief, based upon a full conviction founded upon reasonable grounds, in the existence of a state of circumstances, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person was probably guilty of the crime imputed.

In a suit for compensation for malicious prosecution before the plaintiff can succeed. he must establish that the prosecution was both without reasonable and probable cause and malicious.

The mere absence of reasonable and probable cause does not justify the conclusion. as a matter of law, that the prosecution was malicious, though it is quite conceivable, that the evidence which is sufficient to prove absence of reasonable and probable cause, may also establish malice.

A prosecution. though in the outset not malicious and commenced under a bona fide belief in the guilt of the accused. may nevertheless become malicious in any of the stages through which it has to pass it, the prosecutor, having acquired positive knowledge of the innocence of the accused, perseveres malo animo in the prosecution. with the intention of procuring per nefas a conviction of the accused.

Circumstances of suspicion cannot be treated as evidence of reasonable and probable cause as a defence to an action of a malicious prosecution.

The question of the absence of reasonable and probable cause or the presence of malice, is a mixed question of fact and law; and whether, from the facts found, absence of reasonable and probable cause or presence of malice can be inferred, is a question of law for determination by the Court alone.

Where the decision of the Court in the Criminal proceedings in favour of the plaintiff was given on January 3. 1905, the notice on the defendant Municipality was served on November 29, 1905, and the suit for malicious prosecution was commenced on January 4, 1906, and it was found that the act of which the plaintiff complains was done in good faith and that there wes reasonable and probable cause for the criminal prosecution : Held, that the suit was clearly barred under S. 363 of the Bengal Municipal Act. 10 W R 439 ; 13 W R 276 ; relied upon 8 Q B D 167; 51 L J Q B 268. 30 W R 545 , 46 L T 127 : 40 J P 420 ; 10 Q B D 252 ; 74 R R 287; 16 L J Q B 158; 6 Jur 346 ; L R 6 Ex 329 ; 25 L T 337 : 40 L J Ex 201 ; 24 All 363, relied upon: 11 B L R 321 ;

1—S. 6—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 3 Interest, Rate of.

Under s. 6 Regulation XV of 1793, interest claimable under a bond must not exceed the amount of the principal. S. 3 Regulation XVII of 1806, is not inconsistent with the application of Regulation XV of 1793 inasmuch as the Regulation of 1806 refers to rates of interest and the Regulation of 1793 to accumulations of interest irrespective of rate. Bardakant Rai v. Bhagwan Das. I All 344.

2-Interest in excess of principal-Act XXVIII of 1855.

S. 6 Regulation XV of 1793 (prohibiting the Courts from awarding as interest a sum larger than the principal) is not applicable to suit instituted after the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855. Even under Regulation XV of 1793 it was the practice of the Court to allow interest in excess of principal where the interest had accumulated owing to reasons not ascribable in any degree to procrastination on the part of the creditor. Huromonee Gooptia v. Gobind Coomar Chowdhry 5 W R 51.

Notes: Ref 9 Cal 825.

3-Interest in excess of principal.

4--Interest in excess of principal.

Where under s. 6, Regulation XV of 1793, interest upon the principal prior to the institution of the suit was adjudged to the plaintiff, limited to a sum equal to the principal, although that regulation was repealed when the suit was brought, yet, looking to the time when his contract was made, the plaintiff was held not entitled to any further interest before suit but interest upon the principal was allowed to him from the date of suit to the date of decree. Jeebnath Singh v. 5—Usurious transaction.

To an action for recovery of arrears of rent due to the plaintiff under a sub-lease of a pergunna, the defendant pleaded that the sub-lease was part of a loan transaction for the purpose of securing to the plaintiff an illegal interest upon the loan and was void under Bengal Regulation XV of 1793. Held by the Privy Council (confirming the decision of the Courts below) that it was an usurious transaction, and that, the suit should be dismissed. Wise v. 7—Ss.9 And 10—Rate of interest-Usufructuary mortgagee.

In a suit on a bond executed together with an assignment to the plaintiff of the rent of certain mehals farmed out to other parties, the Judge dismissed the suit under s. 9, Regulation XV of 1793 holding that a deduction of a certain sum from the jumma of the assignment was a device to obtain more interest than the legal rate. Held that under the decision of the Privy Council in 8 Moors I A 358 that section of the bond and the assignment are one and the same and where the plaintiff has a claim to be treated as a usufructuary mortgagee under s. 10 of the same law.

8—Interest—Usury.

Interference with the rate of interest in India was a thing of positive law and cannot be extended beyond the Provisions of the Regulation (XV of 1793). S. 9. of the Regulation does not declare that where an attempt has been made to elude the usury laws the contract is itself void nor does it direct the return of the pledge without redemption. In a question arising in respect of the validity of foreclosure proceedings under section 8 of the Bengal Regulation XVII of 1806, in which the purwanah required to issued under that section was initialled by the judge, held that the requirement of the Regulation that the purwanah should be under the seal and official signature of the Judge in the absence of evidence to the contrary ought on the principle omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta, to be deemed to be satisfied by the affixing of the seal of the Court and writing of the initials of the Judge.

A mortgage-deed, dated 11th May 1871, provided that the mortgagor should pay up at a prescribed time, but that if he died within the fixed period then the transaction should be considered as a "complete sale," of the hypothecated properties to the mortgagee. The mortgagor dying before the prescribed time, the mortgagee without instituting any foreclosure proceedings entered into possession.

Held—That this was a mortgage by way of conditional sale within the provisions of the Bengal Regulation XVII of 1806 and that under that Regulation the mortgagee had no right to enter into possession without instituting foreclosure proceedings. The heirs of the mortgagor were therefore entitled to sue him in ejectment as a mere trespasser. Sheik Hub Ali v Wazir-un-nissa. 1 M L T 297.

The detention to be legal, need only be covered by an actually existing warrant of the Governor General in Council in the form prescribed, without regard to the lawfulness of the arrest. The Regulation is not confined to prisoners of war or foreigners held in confinement for political reasons. The substance of Regulation III of 1818 was expressly re-enacted by Act XXXIV of 1850 and Act III of 1858, and therefore, as the result of these later Acts alone, the detention would be legal. Where a permanent tenancy was created by a lease dated 1860, i. e., before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the provisions of section 179 of the Act would not apply to the case, and the landlord could not recover any abwab from the tenant.

An agreement by a permanent tenant to give a certain number of cocoanuts to the landlord as bhet and to perform certain services (begar) without any remuneration, in addition to the rent, was illegal under the law as prevailed before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Where by a putni lease, the annual Jama (rent) was fixed at Rs. 6,000 and, besides the said rent, the putnidar (lessee) undertook to deposit into the Collectorate the Government Revenue of Rs. 40,156-4-9½ fixed for the share of estate granted in putni and payable by the lessor, kist by kist, failing which, the putni lease was to be cancelled and would become null and void and the landlord was to take khas possession.

Held, that the payment of the patnidar of the Government Revenue, though no doubt was a part of the consideration to be tendered by the lessee for the enjoyment of the tenure it was not money payable to the landlord and as such was not rent within the meaning of S. 3 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and could not be recoverable as rent under the special provisions of the putni Regulation. Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mohan Tagore v Bibi Jarao Kumari 3 C L J 7=10 C W N 201=1 M L T 8= 33 Cal 140 (P C).

A purchaser of a share of a putni acquires a valid title in the property although his purchase was not recognised by the zemindar. He is not exempted from liability for rent jointly with the transferor if the landlord chooses to recognise him as one of the joint-holders of the putni. Section 6 of the Putni Regulation only prevents any splitting of the tenure and apportionment of the rent without the sanction of the landlord.

One of the co-sharers in the zemindari who had a 5 annas interest brought a suit for his share of the rent against the registered putnidar and obtained a decree, in execution of which he sold a 5 annas interest in the putni:

Held—That the effect of the sale was precisely the same as that of a sale under a money decree; that is, the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor at the time of attachment passed.

and no default is made by the purchaser, but on the contrary when the purchaser makes repeated tenders of the rent, instalment by instalment, and endeavours to secure recognition when a landlord without any justification refused to treat the purchaser as his tenant and deliberately omitted to implead him as a party in the suit for rent the whole of which had accrued due after the transfer and was payable by the transferor, it is not open to the landlord to treat the purchaser as a tenant and make him liable for the rent that accrued due between the date of the institution of the previous suit and the sale in execution of the decree made thereunder. 14—Settlement Regulation VII of 1822, s. 9—Duties of Collectors and Settlement Officer—Entries in khewats and khataunis—Evidence Act, S. 35—U P Land Revenue Act, S. 91.

The language of Regulation No VII of 1822 regarding the particulars which a Settlement Officer has to enter in the record proposed by him. is extremely wide. The information which he had to collect was intended to be utilised in the Courts of Justice in determining the rights of litigants before them. The Settlement Officer was directed to ascertain "the real nature and extent of the interests, more especially where several persons may hold interests in the same subject matter of different kinds of degrees." This would include the case of mortgagors and mortgagees whose interests in property are of different kinds of degrees, and entries in kheats and khataunis would be admissible under S. 35, Indian Evidence Act, to prove the existence of a disputed mortgage. An entry contained in a wajib-ul arz prepared under the provisions of Act XIX of 1793 is prima facie evidence of its accuracy. Robert Skinner v Chendan Singh. 15—s. 13—"Profits"—Adjustment of accounts between defaulting tenure-holder and person who has held possession as mortgagee under Reg VIII of 1819, s. 13.

The word "profits" in the 4th clause of s. 13 of Regulation VIII of 1819 means that which is left to the tenure-holder after payment of the rent of the tenure. A person who enters into possession of a tenure as mortgagee under the provisions of that section is bound in the first place to pay the rent due to the landlord out of the collections before applying the same to the liquidation of his own debt, and the defaulter is not to be liable for the rent of the tenure during the period of the possession by the person so holding it as mortgagee. Lala Bharub Chandra Karpur v Lalit Mohun Singh. 12 Cal 185.

See—Set-off—General Cases. 2 C L R 414

16—Ss. 13 and 14, Cl. 4—Under-tenure-holder making deposit—Suit for possession, if necessary—Lien when extinguished—Statutory lien—Statement by putnidar, who has no interest, if binds transferee.

Per Stephen, J.—A special suit to declare the lien, created by S. 13, Cl 4 of the Putni Regulation, terminated by satisfaction of the debt is unnecessary, when the plea of suit is set up as a reply to a claim for rent and the defendant uses it only as a basis for resisting that claim.

The creation of a gribi estate is a formal act both according to the language of Reg. VIII of 1819, s. 14, and according to universal practice and cannot be inferred from the conduct of parties.

Per Mookerjee, J.—The under-tenure-holder who makes the deposit under s. 13, Cl 4 of Putni Regulation is entitled to remain in possession only so long as the full amount advanced, with interest, is not realized from the usufruct of the tenure. If, after his debt has been satisfied, he does continue in occupation, he does so at his peril and renders himself liable to account for the profits received in excess. His position is analogous to that of a mortgagee in possession who stays on the premises after his dues have been satisfied.

The lien is extinguished by satisfaction of the debt from the profits of the tenure. No order of the Collector is necessary in this behalf, nor his recourse to a regular suit essential to alter the legal position of the parties The moment the lien is extinguished, the defaulter becomes entitled to recover possession.

S. 13, Cl. 4 of the Putni Regulation makes it a condition precedent to the creation of the lien that the amount lodged should be advanced from private funds and should be paid by the tenure-holder after he had already paid the whole of the rent due from himself.

The lien in question is (a) creation of the Statute, and statutory liens cannot be created by consent; the provision of the law must be strictly complied with before reliance can be placed upon the lien.

A mere treatment of the under-tenure-holder by the landlord as a usufructuary encumbrancer is not sufficient to create the statutory lien.

A statement in the plaint unchallanged and made by the Putnidar after his interest has been transferred is in no way binding upon the transferee (1 C L J 13 = 33 Cal 357 Ref).

The decision of a Revenue officer in an uncontested proceeding has not the effect of a decree under that section and the entry in the Record-of-rights pursuant to such decision cannot override the effect of a contested Civil Court decree between the same parties. 26—Insurable interest in goods sold - Sale of ascertained and unascertained goods—Passing of property in the goods sold-Contract Act, S.78.

The plaintiff sued to recover money alleged to be due under policies of insurance granted to her by the defendant-company in respect of certain cases of kerosine oil, which, after landing and while in the petroleum depot, were destroyed by fire. The suit related to two shipments, viz: by the steamers "Haddon Hall" and "Crewe Hall." The question for decision was purely one of law, whether, at the time when the fire took place, the ownership in the oil had passed to the plaintiff and whether, the plaintiff had an insurable interest in the oil sold her. Held, that so far as the cases ex "Hoddon Hall" were concerned, the property in the oil had passed to the plaintiff at the time of the fire. Risk and property generally go together. In this case the buyer was to take all risks of exchange, the goods were to be insured at her expense and the price of goods was to be paid by her even if the insurance money were not recovered. Apart from this S. 78 of the Court Act is conclusive on the point. Here both the payment and delivery were postponed. The goods were ascertained. Consequently, the property in the goods passed to the plaintiff as soon as the proposal for sale was accepted and she had an insurable interest in the goods sold her. The interest was covered by her policy and she was entitled to recover the amount assured. Held, that, so far as the shipment by "Crewe Hall" was concerned, there was no ascertainment or appropriation of any lot of cases to any particular buyer. It was clear from the terms of the contract that the buyers were to take delivery of the whole cargo from the ship's side or tackles at their own expense. But, owing to change of rules of the Port Commissioners, until the actual delivery to any particular buyer, all the cases remained together in bulk in the godown, in which they were landed. Until delivery was actually made under a delivery order there was no ascertainment or appropriation of any given lot of cases to any particular buyer. until the fire took place there was no ascertainment and actual delivery of goods to the plaintiff. Consequently, the property in the oil per..."Crewe Hall" did not pass to the plaintiff at the time of the fire and she had no insurable interest in it.

Per Maclean, C J.—If in a contract there are certain terms from which, when they exist, the Legislature says that certain consequences shall ensue, these consequences must ensue.

The question being whether certain holdings situated in the tract known as charramna or pasture lands in Mouzah Basantpur in Zillah Purnea were permanent tenancies, it was proved that sales by private treaty and by auction through Court of such holdings were frequent, that cases of ejectment were uncommon, that such holdings frequently passed to the heirs of the deceased tenants and that mutation of names in the zemindar's seerista had been frequently allowed sometimes on payment of nazarana and sometimes without

6A—Sec 6—Act X of 1859—Occupancy holding, submergence—Rent, non-payment of-Extinguishment—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)

To enable a raiyat to acquire a right of occupancy under section 6 of Act VIII of 1869 (B C) or under Act X of 1859, his possession must ordinarily be continuous for twelve years over the whole of the land in respect of which a right of occupancy is claimed.

The fact that the plaintiff was in occupation of different areas of lands in different years, would not entitle him to a right of occupancy in the whole, unless it was proved that he had a right of occupancy in a portion, and the parties intended that the additional lands also should be impressed with the existing rights in respect of the original lands of the holding.

Under section 6 of Act VIII of 1869, a raiyat retains his right of occupancy only so long as he pays rent. But although mere non-payment of rent might not be conclusive evidence of abandonment, non-payment of rent taken with submergence of land, is sufficient to indicate an extinguishment of the right of occupancy.

An occupancy holding was diluviated at a time when Act VIII of 1869 was in force, and the land had continued under water for thirteen years before the present Bengal Tenancy Act was passed in 1885.

Held,—Whatever right was acquired by the raiyat, was extinguished by non-payment of rent during the period of submergence before the Act of 1885 came into force; as he had no subsisting rights in 1885, the provisions of Act VIII of 1885 could create no new rights in his favour nor revive those which had already been existinguished.

The words 'All costs of process" in S. 6 of Act VIII B C of 1865 are quite wide enough to include costs of execution such for instance, as the fees, necessary for the issue of an attachment or a sale proclamation.

If the plaintff judgment-debtor in a suit to set aside a sale for arrears of rent, succeed in proving that some of the costs of process entered in the sale Proclamation was not really due from him, the sale which followed in perfect good faith on that sale-proclamation cannot be regarded as null and void.

In 1887 Raja B. executed a permanent lease in favour of the respondent of lands, parts of which, it was known were liable to resumption by Government. Respondent paid Rs. 7,500 as bonus for this grant and agreed to pay rent for the entire tenure at the rate of Rs. 2,300 per annum. A clause in the lease provided amongst other things that if by reason of any "law suit with Government or with any other person," the proprietary right in the lands were lost by Raja B, "then the rent of the said land at the rate prevailing in the mehal for the Jami-Jumma thereof should be deducted from the aforesaid Jumma of Rs. 2,300". In 1882, Chuck Khatali, one of the chucks included in the lease, was resumed by Government formed into a separate estate and temporarily settled for 20 years with heirs of Raja B, at a rent of Rs. 850. In 1892, one of the heirs of Raja B, sold his interest in the permanent estate to one Kali Prosunno Ghose and his interest and chuck Khatali to the appellant. The appellant and the remaining heirs of Raja B. sued Respondent to recover from the chuck Khatali only rent with interest at the rate fixed in the settlement proceedings.

Held that the plaintiffs could not recover. The resumption of the chuck by Government could not abrogate the rights of the Respondent under the pottah, so long as Raja B. and his heirs were themselves in a position to let him have the lands, and these rights in no way conflicted with the operation of Sec. 10 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 or the rights of the Government under it:

Held also-that the liability of the Defendants was not under the settlement but being as it was, for a lump sum of rent, they were necessary parties in any action for rent for chuck Khatali. That consequently, Kali Prosunno Ghose ought to have been joined as a party and the suit was bad without him.

24—Act X of 1859, Sec. 23—Refund of excess rents—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Joinder of unwarrantable claims, effect of—Abatement.

In a suit brought by a putnidar for a declaration that he was entitled to an annual abatement of the putni rent, in consequence of some lands comprised in the putni having been acquired for the purposes of railway, and also for a refund of the excess rents which he had been compelled to pay for some years.

Held: per Mookerjee J.—That this was a claim for abatement of rent and for recovery of damages for illegal exaction of rent within the meaning of clauses (2) and (3). Sec. 23 of Act X of 1859 The proper course for the plaintiff, therefore, was to sue in the first instance for abatement of rent in the Revenue Court which was the only Court of competent jurisdiction for that purpose.

Per Harington J., contra, treating the case as though it were one of first impression:—Although under Sec. 23 of Act X of 1859, a Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for abatement of rent, still the suit, in so far as it related to a claim for refund of the excess rents paid by the putnidar, was properly cognizable by the Civil Court and should not be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, because, one of the steps which plaintiff should have to take in establishing his right to have the money repaid to him, would, if it had stood alone, have entitled him to a decree in the Revenue Court.

Per Mookerjee J.—The present suit is substantially one for abatement of rent and prayer for refund is ancillary to the prayer for abatement, because as soon as the amount of abatement is determined the amount of refund is deducible by simple arthmetical calculation. The Civil Court has no jurisdiction to allow a claim for abatment and is not competent to embark upon precisely the same enquiry for the purpose of allowing a refund.

Per Mookerjee J.—The following rules are deducible from a review of the authorities on the question.

(1) A suit for abatement of rent, properly so—called, is maintainable only in the Revenue Court.

Bengal Acts-(Rent Act VIII of 1869 & X of 1859) S. 23 Concld.

(2) A suit for adjustment of the rent, on the ground that the rent payable under a lease is less than the sum nominally inserted in it, is not a suit for abatement of rent, properly so called and is accordingly maintainable in the Civil Court.

(3) If the tenant is entitled to sue for abatement in the Revenue Court under Rule (1), the suit for refund lies in the same Court, but if the tenant is entitled to sue for adjustment in the Civil Court under Rule (2), the suit for refund lies in the same Court. The cases, which support the view that a suit for refund lies in the Civil Court, assume a prior determination of the amount of abatement by a Court of competent jurisdiction.

Per Mookerjee J. —A plaintiff cannot give jurisdiction to or take away jurisdiction from a Court by an unwarrantable addition to his claim and the jurisdiction of the Court ought to be determined with reference to the nature and value of his claim after the additional matter has been struck out. Asutosh Roy v Harinarain Singh Deo. 3 C L J 143.

Gobind Moni v. Rajendro Kishore Chowdhry, 15 W R 18.

108-Suit against ijaradar-Act X of 1859,s.30.–

A suit on the ground of illegal ejectment can be brought where the defendant is the ijaradar entitled to the rents.—A case under s. 27, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, where it was held that "person entitled to receive the rent" means "all the persons" if there are more than one; and when the suit was brought against one ijaradar only out of

See Brojo Mohun De Sircar v. Dengu, 7 C L R 141.

109—Ejectment not directly by landlord.—

To bring a case of ejectment within the Rent Act, there must have been some direct act on the part of the person entitled to receive the rent towards ejecting the tenants, either personally or by his servants, or by joining with those who actually ejected them. Joykissen Mookerjee v Mudoosoodun Kulliah, W R,1864,Act X 90.

110—Landlord and tenant—Limitation.—

Where a landlord does not himself directly take steps to interfere with the rights of cultivation of his tenants, but does so through other persons, whose acts he may if it so pleases him, afterwards ignore, he is not in a position to set up a special plea of limitation under the Rent Law (Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 27).

111—Ejectment not by zamindar.—

A suit by plaintiff complaining of having been ejected by the defendants, who were not the zamindars of the land in dispute, or the persons entitled to collect rent from the plaintiff, cannot be entertained under the Rent Act. The mere allegation of the defendants that they were the zamindars, unless admitted to be true by the plaintiff, will not give jurisdiction under that Act.

113.—Suit after ejectment by purchaser from Government.—

The Government purchased the zamindari rights in a pergunnah, under Regulation XXI of 1822, at a sale for arrears of Government revenue and re-settled one of the talukhs in the pergunna which talukh, had been created subsequently to the Decennial Settlement, with the plaintiffs as talukhdars. Subsequently, and after the expiration of the terms for which they had re settled with the plaintiffs, the Government sold their zamindari rights to the defendant, who ejected the plaintiffs. A, after the grant of a patni talukh to B, fraudulently, granted a pottah of the same land to his own daughter, and by means thereof she intervened in a suit by B against a raiyat for rent,and prevented B from recovering in the suit. Held that this was evidence to support a suit by B against A under Act X of 1859, s 23 cl 6, for illegally ejecting him from the tenure, and the pottah being a mere device. Notwithstanding the daughter was joined as a defendant in the suit, the suit could be entertained under the Rent Act.

An objection of limitation is not most suitably sustained by evidence of relinquishment from a period the lapse of time from which exceeds the period of limitation. Dhurjobutty Chowdrain v Chamroo Mundul 25 W R 217.

A plaintiff brought a suit for possession of certain lands " by establishing his howla right " and for mesne profits, against a former talookdar, a shareholder of the talook in which the lands are situated and certain ryots who paid rent to the first defendant. Held that it is not a suit to recover the occupancy of the land from which the plaintiff has been illegally ejected by the person entitled to receive the rent within the meaning of s 27 of the Act and is not governed by the limitation provided by that section. Ashanoollah v Ramdhone Bhuttacharjee 1 Calc 325

123—S.27-Question of title—Limitation.

In a suit to recover possession of certain land as the ancestral maurasi mokurari jote of the plaintiffs from which they had been dispossessed by the defendant, the latter denied the dispossession and alleged that the plaintiffs had themselves relinquished the land in question. It was found, although the alleged title was not proved that the plaintiffs had established an occupancy right, but had been dispossessed by the defendant. On appeal it was contended that the suit was barred under s. 27 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 as not having been brought within one year from the date of the dispossession. Held, that the suit involved a question of the title, and that the limitation of a year prescribed by s 27 of the Rent Act therefore did not appply. Tamizuddin Munshi v Huro Nath Pal 9 C L R 253.

124.—S 27-Suit for possession—Question of title-Limitation.

Where the plaintiff alleged that he was the holder of a jote under the defendant by whom he had been forcibly dispossessed, and sued for declaration of his title and for restoration to possession; and the defendant did not question the plaintiff's tenure, nor his original title, but denied the forcible dispossession, and alleged that the plaintiff had relinquished the land,—Held that the suit was not one to try a question of title, but was governed by the one year's period of limitation prescribed by s.27, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. 126,—Ss. 27,105, 108——Distinction between sales under S. 105 and 108.

S. 105 contemplates a decree for the entire rent due in respect of an under-tenure; and the consequence is, that what is brought to sale in execution under it is the tenure. While s. 108 contemplates a decree for money due on account of a share of rent by a share in a joint undivided estate, and what is sold is the right, title and interest of the judgment debtor in the under-tenure.

The purchaser in the latter case is entitled to sue in respect of trespass on the undertenure although his name has not been registered in the manner contemplated by S. 27.

The plaintiff purchased an under-tenure at a sale in execution of a money-decree against the holder of the under-tenure. Subsequently the under-tenure was again put up to sale in execution of a decree against the same defendant obtained by some of his landlords for their share of the rent, and the defendant No. 3 purchased at this sale. The plaintiff sued for recovery of possession.

Held, that the defendant No. 3 took nothing as against the plaintiff inasmuch as the decree was not a decree for rent, but a decree for money, and what was purchased was the right, title and interest of the holder of the under tenure which had been previously purchased by the plaintiff. 12 Cal 24; 13 B L R 146; 20 W R 380; 24 W R 407 (Note), Ref. Niladari Mahanti v Bichitranand Roy. 6 Ind Cas 605= 14 C W N 905=12 C L J 158= 37 Cal 823.

In a suit by B against A, C, D, and E for damages,—Held that the suit was one falling either under s. 139 or s. 143 of Act X of 1859, and came under s. 23 of that Act, and was cognizable under the Rent Act. All suits which are specially provided for by Act X of 1859, and which arise out of the exercise of the power of distraint, or out of any acts done under colour of the exercise of the said power, are within the provisions of s. 23 of that Act. Joy Lall Sheikh v Brojonath Paul Chowdhry. 9 W R 162.

A suit under s. 28, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, asking the Court to determine the rate of rent which plaintiff is entitled to receive, and offering to execute a pottah at that rate, must be accompanied by an unconditional offer by the plaintiff to execute a pottah at the rate directed by the Court. The omission of such an offer is fatal to the claim, and plaintiff has no right to make it a condition to the execution of such a pottah that all previous arrears should be paid at the rates to be so fixed. Relly v Judoo Nath Ghuttuck. 25 W R,175.

The suit was first brought in the Revenue Court as their co shares had not joined in the suit, the plaintiffs made them defendants and their being defendants preventing the plaintiffs from continuing the suit in the Revenue Court they instituted it afresh in the Civil Court after Bengal Act VIII of 1869 came into operation The defendants objected that under the limitation provided by s 29 of that Act no more than three years rent could be recovered but the Judge held affirming the decision of the Munsif, that the case was governed by clause 8, Act VIII of 1869 and that six years rent could be decreed Held, on special appeal to the High Court that the fact of the co shareers having made pro forma defendants did not alter the character of the suit which was to recover arrears of rent, and that, therefore the provisions of s 29, Act VIII of 1869 were applicable and a decree for three years rent only was given 172.—S. 29—Limitation—Suit for arrears of rent.

After the expiration of the period prescribed by s 29 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, a plaintiff suing for arrears of rent cannot insist on the pendency of another suit brought by him for possession of the land, as preventing limitation from running, where there has been no time during which such rent could not have been recovered if he had acted on his right of suing for it. In 12 Moore's I A 244: 2 B L R P C 10, the claimant of rent was, until the setting aside of the sale that had taken place, in the position of a person whose claim had been satisfied. The right to sue in that case had been suspended and it was therefore distinguishable from the present. The plaintiff's ancestor purchased a talukh from the government, subject to an ijara therein held by the defendants, which expired in 1866. The defendant held a patni in respect of a share in a zamindari, which share was held and the patni granted by a Hindu widow, who died in Pous 1281. The plaintiffs were the heirs who succeeded to the zamindari on the death of the widow. In Pous 1284 they brought a suit against the defendant for the purpose of setting aside the patni, and on the 16th Pous 1285 obtained a decree declaring the patni invalid, and giving them khas possession with mesne profits. This decree was however, reversed on appeal on the 6th Srabun 1288, and their suit was dismissed. In a suit by the manager of a factory to recover from a surety certain sums collected as rent by a deceased patwari, in which suit the defendant pleaded limitation,—Held that plaintiff was not entitled to reckon the year which the law gave him to bring the suit from the date on which he acquired from the surety information of the state of his accounts. If a person's ignorance of the state of his accounts is owing to his own negligence, he can claim no benefit under s. 33, Act X of 1859. Biddell v Chutterdharee Lall. 12 W R, 116.

195.—S. 30—Suit against agent for accounts.

A suit under s. 30, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, against a gomashta to obtain accounts after the agency has determined, must be brought within a year from such determination. The proviso in that section refers to suits for money, and under that proviso, where a fraudulent account has been given in by the agent, concealing the fact of the receipt of certain moneys, the zemindar has one year from the discovery of the fraud to bring his suit for such money. Jan Ali Chowdhry v Ishan Chunder Sein. 16 W R 149.

196.—S. 30—Suit to contest an account against gomashta.

In a suit to contest an account brought against a gomashta under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, the only ground on which the plaintiff can claim an allowance of time beyond the period of limitation provided in s, 30 is by showing that there was fraud in the case, and that he came to the knowledge of it within a year before the date of his action. Radha Kishore Roy v Ameer Chunder Mookhoty. 20 W R, 386.

197.-S. 30—Suit against agent—Delay after discovery of fraud of agent.

A suit against an agent for the recovery of money under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 30, though brought within three years after the termination of the agency, was held to have been barred as not having been brought within a reasonable time from the date of the discovery of the fraud alleged against the agent.

A suit against an agent, under Act X of 1859, s. 24, was resisted on the ground that the defendant's employment as tahsildar had terminated by the plaintiff having employed him as a moonshee, and the defendant relied for proof on the fact of his subsequent re-appointment as tahsildar. The lower Appellate Court construed s 33 as applicable to the case. Held that this was not a correct interpretation of the section, and that, so long as the defendant continued to be employed in the plaintiff's service, his agency had not terminated. Nilmoni Singh Deo v Ram Golam Bundopadhya. 21 W R, 154.

204.—S. 30=Act VIII (B C) of 1869, -Account, Suit against agent for--Limitation-Agent, suit for account against.

On the termination of the agency which took place on the 16th July 1875, a zamindar sued his agent who was employed in the management of his zamindaries for delivery of the accounts and papers in his hands as such agent, and obtained a decree. In execution of that decree the defendant filed his accounts, but not until the 2nd February 1878. On the 10th September of the same year, the zamindar brought a suit to recover the amount which he claimed to be due on the taking of the accounts.

Held, that inasmuch as this suit was filed more than 3 years from the termination of the agency it was barred by limitation under section 30 of Act VIII (B C) of 1869. Shoshi Bhooshun Pal v Guru Churn Mookhopadhya. 7 Cal 89: 8 C L R 285.

Pending the enquiry he executed an ekar on 23 Cheit 1287 that Rs. 1,870 were due.

In a suit instituted on the 12th, Kartick 1288 to recover that amount it was held, that the special agreement of the parties took the case out of

In April 1875, A entered into an agreement in writing with B, whereby he agreed to act as the manager of B's zamindaris and other landed properties for three years, on certain terms therein mentioned. The agreement was duly registered. On the 15th of June 1882, B sued the Administrator General of Bengal as administrator of A's estate, to recover certain sums of money set forth in detail in the plaint as having been received by A and not accounted for, stating that they had been misappropriated by A. Held that in respect of such sums as were received by A in virtue of his position as manager under the registered agreement, the limitation of six years applied; but that in respect of the sums received by him in the course of transactions which did not come within the scope of the registered agreement, the limitation of three years applied. Held, also, that the suit was not such as is contemplated by Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 30.

207.—S. 30—Forest Mehal-Accounts, suit for "Agent" under Act VIII of 1869.

Act VIII of 1869 applies to suits between landlords and tenants. The term "agent" in S. 30 means a man who is employed as such by a landlord as a landlord, that is, a person employed to assist a landlord in his dealings with the tenants. A person employed to sell timber in a Forest Mehal and credit the proceeds to his employer is not an "agent" within the Act, and to a suit against him. It was further urged that defendants, the lessees, had defaulted; that plaintiff had obtained decrees; and that defendants, having failed to pay within fifteen days, had violated the lease and were liable to be ejected. Held, that the terms of the contract were in strict accordance with the provisions of s. 78, Act X of 1859, and the plaintiff ought to have brought his suit under that section, and obtained a decree for ejectment. 240–S.52=Act X of 1859 s. 78–Cancelment of lease for breach of stipulation in payment of rent.

The property in suit had been sublet to defendant on the stipulation that, if the rent was in arrear for three kists, the lease would be liable to cancelment. Plaintiff sued to eject the lessee on the allegation that the lease was forfeited. Held, that as the only ground given for cancelment was non payment of arrears of rent, the case fell under s. 78 Act X of 1859, and as the amount due had been paid into Court, defendant was entitled to the protection afforded by the latter portion of that section. Kumla Sahoy v. Ramruttun Neogy 11 W R 201.

241 S 52-Act X of 1859 s 78-Ejectment for forfeiture of lease by breach of its conditions—Suit for cancelment of lease.

M granted a lease of certain lands to R for a term of thirteen years on the 25 th of November 1870. One of the conditions of the lease was that rent was to be paid harvest by harvest, otherwise the lessee would be liable to ejectment. On the 12th of September 1873, M obtained a decree against R for arrears of rent which became due in May. On the day following, M instituted a suit under cl 5 s. 23 Act X of 1859, for the cancelment of the lease and the ejectment of R on account of the non-payment of rent when due, according to the terms of the lease. R paid into Court the amount of the arrear on the 18 th of September i e within fifteen days from the date of the decree, and in the course of the suit under s 23 cl 5. In special appeal the suit was dismissed, it being held that the circumstances of the case brought it within the operation of the provisions of ss 21 and 78 of Act X of 1859, which were applicable in deciding it. Ramdyal v Mushtak Ahmad. 6 N W 326.

ars awarded to the plaintiff. Held that the amended decree was the final decree in the suit, and that the raiyat was entitled, under s. 78; Act X of 1859, to fifteen days from its date for payment of the arrears with costs and interests. Radha Mohun Mundle v. 243:—S.52=Act X of 1859 s 78—Suit for ejectment—Stay of execution.

The latter part of Act X of 1859 s 78 which enacts that " in all cases of suits for the ejectment of raiyat, or cancelment of a lease the decree shall specify the amount of arrears and if such amount,together with interest and cost of suit be paid into Court within fifteen days from the date of the decree, execution shall be-stayed" applies not only to suits for ejectment of the raiyat or cancelment of the lease on account of the non-payment of arrears of rent but to all suits for ejectment brought by the lessor on account of a breach of the conditions of his lease by the defendant. Fitzpatbrick v Gowan 1 Ind Jur N 420, 6 W R Act S 64.

244.—S.52=Act X of 1859, s.78-Omission to specify previous unsatisfied decree.

Where in a suit for the rent of the current year and for ejectment under s 78, Act X of 1859, supported by a previous unsatisfied decree, a decree was passed for the rent of the current year without including the amount claimed under the previous unsatisfied decree, and the plaintiff neither applied to the lower Court to amend its decree nor appealed against that part of it,—Held that the defendant, having paid the amount of arrear specified in the decree, had saved himself from ejectment. Savi v Mohesh Chunder Bose W R 1864, Act X 29.

245.—S.52=Act X of 1859, s 78-Computation of time.—

In calculating the fifteen days allowed for payment of arrears of rent by s 78 of Act X of 1859, the day on which the decree was passed should be excluded from the computation.

246-S 52=Act X of 1859,s.78-Stay of execution.

It is not necessary to declare in a decree given under s 78 of Act X of 1859 that fifteen days' time should be allowed to the tenant. But the decree must specify the amount of the arrear, and payment of this, with costs and interest as decree, within fifteen days, ipso facto stays execution. Seetul Singh v Thakoor Tewary 1 N W Part 2 p 31; Ed 1873, 89. 247—S 52=Act X of 1859 s. 78—Interest on deposit

When a tenant is sued for arrears of rent even though he should deposit the rent in Court during the pendency of the suit, he is still liable to have the decree passed against him, as the arrear was admittedly due when the suit was brought. Interest to date of deposit in Court and costs of suits being paid within fifteen days, execution would be avoided. Sheo Nath Singh v Ram Thul Rae. 1 N W Part 2 p 39: Ed 1873, 97.

248-S.52=Act X of 1859 s.78-Stay of execution —Private agreements—Suits to enforce.

S. 78 of Act X of 1859 contains a positive direction of law by which the Revenue Courts are required in all suits for ejectment for non—payment of rent, clearly to specify in the decree the amount of rent default in payment of which has conferred a right of re-entry on the landlord, and to stay execution of their decrees if the amount found due, with interest and costs, be paid into Court within the time therein specified. This overrides all private agreements to the contrary or rather renders their enforcement by suit in the Revenue Court impossible Lulloo Singh v Thakoor Pershad 2 N W 249.

249-S.78=Act X of 1859 s.78-Stay of execution of decree.—

The Court has discretion to stay execution on other grounds than those on which it is bound to do so under s 52 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869.

Execution may be stayed on a decree for arrears of rent by payment of the amount, under s 78 Act X of 1859, by a purchaser from the tenant of his interest in the terms, Sarodapersad Roy Chowdhry v Nobinchand Dutt Marsh 417; 2 Hay 527.

251.—S. 52=Payment into Court Liability to ejectment.

Payment into Court by a judgment—debtor, within fifteen days from the date of decree, of rent, interest, and costs, with a protest as to the sum improperly charged against him as interest, is a sufficient payment under s. 52, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, to save him from liability to be ejected from his tenure.

252-S.52=Act X of 1659, s 78-Stay of execution as to part of decree-Extension of time for payment.

The Court, whose duty it is to execute a decree, is bound to execute it in the shape in which the decree comes before it, and has no authority to permanently stay the execution of any portion thereof,—e g., where a decree is for money and for ejectment in the event of non-payment within fifteen days, the Court executing is not competent to extend the period for payment in order to save the judgment-debtor from the alternative consequence.

253.-S.52-Practice—Act VIII (B C) of 1869, section 52—Limitation-Courts, closing of.

In a suit under section 52 of Act VIII (B C) of 1869, a decree was obtained for arrears of rent on the 23rd September 1878. The Court was legally closed from the 26th September to the 28th of October, and on the day it opened, the dependent deposited in Court the amount of the decree with interest and costs, and asked to have execution stayed. Held, that the defendant was entitled under the above section to 15 clear days for making the payment, and that under the circumstances, he was entitled to a stay of execution.

The plaintiffs sued to recover possession of certain land held by the defendants under a mokurari lease on the ground of forfeiture by reason of breach of the covenant therein contained "In case of non-payment of one year's rent and its falling into arrear, the mokurrari settlement will be cancelled, and in that case we, the declarents, the mokurraridars, shall have no claim to the nazarana money."

Held, that on payment of the arrears due and the costs of the proceedings within a time fixed by the Court the defendants were entitled in equity to relief against forfeiture. 4 C L R 469 followed. Maoomed Ameer v Peryag Singh 7 Calc 566=9 C L R 185.

The mere omission to pay rent for five years does not of itself amount to forfeiture of a raiyat's right of occupancy, and will not be sufficient to sustain an action by the landlord for the recovery of the raiyat's holding. A raiyat having a right of occupancy cannot be legally ejected unless under an order regularly obtained under s. 52 of the Rent Law,—— that is, under a decree for arrears of rent unsatisfied within fifteen days from the passing of the decree. 9 Cal 88; 11 C L R 326, followed.

258 S.52-Ejectment proviso in lease for forfeiture—Release from effect of forfeiture.—

A se-patni was granted to B by A, who held a dar-patni containing the following conditions, viz.: "I shall pay rent month by month; should I fail in that, I shall pay interest on instalments overdue at 1 per cent per month. I shall pay the rent in full by the close of every year; should I neglect to make the payments, you will, of your own authority, take over possession of the said dar-patni talukh after the expiration of one month of the next succeeding year, and I shall have no complaint against your doing so". Upon non-payment of rent for the year 1281, a suit for khas possession of the lands was brought against A and B. The defendants claimed an equitable right to prevent forfeiture by paying all arrears according to the terms of the dar-patni, together with all costs. Held, that, whether or not the provisions of the Rent Law actually applied to the case, the Court was bound by the analogy of that law to apply in favour of the defendants an equity similar to the equity there given, and accordingly a decree was passed, that if the defendants should pay the whole of the rent due up to date, with interest according to the conditions of the dar-patni, together with the costs in the High Court and Courts below, they should be released from the effect of the forfeiture.

259-S.52-Suit for ejectment from land assigned under a contract for building.—

The only suits for ejectment contemplated by Bengal Act VIII of 1869 are those consequent on the non-payment of arrears of rent, but not a suit for ejectment from land assigned for building purposes brought upon a contract (a kabuliat) by which the defendant had bound himself to give up the land when required by the plaintiff to do so on receipt of a year's rent and the cost of carrying away the building materials

262-S. 52-Suit for arrears of rent and for ejectment-Payment into Court-Suit to cancel lease.—

Where a suit is brought both to recover arrears of rent and to eject the raiyat, it falls under the purview of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 52, and not within s. 22; and if decreed, the defendant is entitled to pay into Court, within fifteen days from the date of decree, the arrear with interest and costs. Where the lower Court's decree was altered to this effect by a decision of the High Court, the fifteen days were held to date from the later decision. Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 52 (as answering to Act X of 1859, s. 78), applies to cases in which it is sought to cancel a lease for non-payment of rent, as well as to all suits for ejectment. Abdur Ruhman v. The tenant paid the decretal amount into Court within fifteen days of the appellate decree. Held, that, inasmuch as the appellate decree must be presumed to incorporate the terms of the original decree, and was the only decree of which execution could be taken, the tenant (judgment-debtor), having paid the decretal amount within fifteen days of that decree, was protected from ejectment. Noor Ali Chowdhuri v. 281—S. 58—Application for execution of decree for arrears of rent—Proper application—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 235, 237, 245—Limitation.

Within the period of three years from the date of a decree for arrears of rent under Rs. 500, the judgment-debtor applied for execution of his decree without giving a list of the properties which he sought to attach, but stating that a list was filed with a previous application, and praying that that application might be put up with the present one. Subsequently, upon an order made by the Court, a fresh list was filed after the period of a year had elapsed. Held, that, though the application was not in strict accordance with the provisions of s. 237 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was still an application under s. 235, and that execution of the decree was not barred, but that it must be limited to the property specified in the previous application. 12 C L R 279, followed. Hurry Churn Bose v. Application having been made in December 1877, for the sale of moveable property of the judgment-debtor which had been attached in execution of a decree passed in June 1876 in a rent suit under Act VIII (B C) of 1869, it was, on the 13th March 1878, directed that the judgment-creditor should proceed against the tenure in respect of which the decree had been made, and on the 15th March the attachment was withdrawn. Although the amount of the decree and the costs were under Rs. 500, the judgment-creditor, on the 19th August 1879, again applied for execution treating the decree as for an account exceeding Rs. 500, that costs of an appeal being added to the costs originally directed by the decree. Held, distinguishing the cases of 3 C L R 189, and 3 C L R 261, that the application was barred under Act VIII (B C) of 1869, Section 58, the attachment and execution proceedings not having been allowed to subsist. Held, further, that the costs of appeal could not be added to the costs under the original decree so as to bring the case within the latter portion of Section 58 of that Act. Kadumbini Babya v. 285—S. 58—Rent Recovery Act, Section 92—Execution, application for—Struck off—Second application, 3 years after the date of judgment—Continuation.—

The petitioner brought a suit against his tenant, the opposite party for rent under the provisions of Act X of 1859 and obtained a decree on the 22nd January 1903. On the 28th August 1905, he made an application for execution of the decree, paying for the attachment of both moveable and immoveable property. The Deputy Collector struck off the execution case on the ground that it was more than 6 months old. On the 22nd February 1906, the decree holder put in another application which was dismissed on the 9th April as barred under the provision of section 92 of Act X of 1859.

Held, The application of the 22nd February 1906, is one in continuation or furtherance of the former application of the 28th August 1905 and hence the execution proceedings are not barred.

The word "issued" in section 92 of Act X of 1859 should not have a strict legal interpretation put upon it. It means " sued out " or " applied for" with success that is, that no application for a process of execution shall be successful unless the application for it is made or it is sued out, within a fixed time.

It is sufficient to save limitation under section 92 of Act X of 1859, if the application for execution was made within 3 years from the date of the judgment. The plaintiff made a complaint to the Magistrate against the defendant, his landlord, for forcibly carrying away his crops; whereupon the defendant was tried, convicted of theft, and punished. The plaintiff then instituted a suit against the defendant in the Munsif's Court, apparently under s. 95 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, and obtained a decree declaring the distraint to be illegal, and directing the crops to be given up to him. The defendant offered to give up a smaller quantity than was mentioned in the decree. The plaintiff refused to take the same, and brought a suit in the Small Cause Court to recover the value of the quantity he had claimed before the Munsif and something additional. Held, that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction, and that the suit ought to have been brought under s. 98 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. Hyder Ali v. 303.–S. 102–Special appeal–Additional Judge–District Judge—Bengal Civil Courts Act VI of 1871—Appeal.

Held (Jackson, J., dissenting) that an additional Judge invested with the powers given to him by Act VI of 1871 is a District Judge within the meaning of s. 102 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, and no appeal lies from his decision in suits of the nature described in that section.

304.–S.102–Special appeal–Right to enhance or vary the rent.

The question in a suit for arrears of rent as to a right to convert the money-rent into a rent payable in kind is a question which, if determined, renders the suit appealable.

Elahee Buksh v Jaffur Aly. 1 N W 109: Ed. 1873, 157.

305.–S. 102 Special appeal–Right to enhance or vary rent.

A special appeal was held to lie to the High Court under s. 102, Bengal Act VIII of 1869 in a suit for rent below Rs. 100 in which the question of right to enhance had been determined.

Watson & Co. v Ram Dhun Ghose. 17 W R 495.

306.–S. 102–Special appeal—Question of title.

In this case the Judge dismissed plaintiff's suit on the ground that no notice had been served on defendant, the nature of the suit being not one for enhancement, but to recover rent at rates previously settled, and no notice being therefore required. The value of the suit was under Rs. 100, and the High Court held that the Judge had not decided any right to vary or enhance the rent, and therefore they could not interfere, there being no appeal under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 102. Goluck Chunder Dutt v Meah Raja Mijee. 17 W R 119.

307.—S. 102—Special appeal—Question between parties having conflicting claims.

In a suit for rent less than Rs.100, the decision turned upon whether, in a former suit against the plaintiff by a third party, a decree had been recovered for possession of a portion of the land now in dispute. Held that, as neither the land nor the rent of such portion was claimed by the defendant, the question as to title was not decided between parties having "conflicting claims" thereto; consequently there was no right of appeal. Reedoynath Dooripa v Puddo Lochun Chuckerbutty. 22 W R 205.

308.—S. 102 Special appeal–Question of title.

The issue whether or not there has been a binding enhancement of rent, and whether or not the tenant has paid at the enhanced rate, involves no question of title or of right to enhance or vary the rent, and the appeal in such a suit properly lies to the Collector. Bahadur Singh v Hura. 3 N W 73. Ager Singh v Boojhawun. 4 N W 61.

309.—S. 102—Special appeal—Decision as to varying rent.

In a suit for arrears of rent on the basis of a shironamah, where the raiyat denied that he had executed that document, and produced evidence to show that the rates mentioned in it were not correct,—Held that there was no question of right to vary the rent, and that the case therefore did not come under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 102. Nitressur Singh v Jhotee Tely. 23 W R 343.

but there is a question as to whether it is payable by instalments or in a lump sum, the decision cannot be said to involve a question of "right to enhance or vary the rent." Peari Mohun Mookhopadhya v Madhub Chunder Baboo. 23 W R 385.

311.—S. 102—Special appeal—Question of fact—Question of nature of rent.

In a suit for arrears of rent, where the question was whether the defendants were holding on payment of nugdi rents or as bhouli tenants.—Held that the decision was a finding of fact. Held, further, that, as the suit was for an amount under Rs 100, and as no question to vary the rate was determined, nor any question of title as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, there was no special appeal.

Shumbul Singh v Toondun Singh. 24 W R 469.

312.—S. 102-Special appeal—"Right to vary rent."

A suit for rent under Rs.100 is not taken out of the purview of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 102 by the fact of the rate of rent having been varied by the decision of the Court, unless the Judge determined "the right to vary the rent."

314—S. 102-Special appeal—Question as to variation of rent.

In a suit for arrears of rent under Rs.100 in which the question was whether the landlord had the right to raise and had raised the rent, and the Judge decided that there had been no alteration in the rent,—Held no appeal lay to the High Court. Roy Jung Bahadoor v Jugdeo Roy. 25 W R 247.

316—S. 102—Special appeal-Co-sharer—Suit for rent.

The plaintiff, one of several co-sharers of a talukh, sued to recover her share of rent, making her co-sharers, who resisted her claim, defendants. The first Court raised and tried questions of title, between the plaintiff, her co-sharers, and the raiyat, and decided in favour of the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court, without expressing any opinion on the rights of the parties, dismissed the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable. On special appeal it was contended that no appeal would lie, as the amount of the claim was less than R100, and no question of title was determined by the judgment; but this objection was overruled on the ground that the decree of the lower Appellate Court, dismissing the suit, had the effect of deciding the question of title against the plaintiff. On appeal under cl 15 of the Letters Patent,-Held that the judgment, rather than the decree, is to be looked at in applying s. 102, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. No appeal lay from the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, inasmuch as that judgment showed not only that no question of title was determined, but that the Judge did not even consider it. Karim Sheikh v Mukhoda Soondery Dassee 15 B L R 111: 23 W R 268

The lower Court considered that the defendants' allegation was well founded. Held that, although the value of the suit was under Rs. 100, an appeal was not barred by the provisions of s. 102 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, as the lower Court had determined a question of law as to whether the tenure was gujasta. Bijjo Nath Sahoo v Ramdour Roy. 7 C L R 369.

The suit between A and B having been decided against A, the District Judge dismissed his suits against the tenants. Held, on appeal, that no question of title could be said to have been decided in such suits, and that consequently no second appeal lay. Durga Narain Misser v Goburdhun Ghose. 9 C L R 86.

324—S. 102—Special appeal—Parties having conflicting claims.

In execution of a decree obtained in a suit valued at over Rs. 100 for recovery of arrears of rent due in respect of a non-saleable tenure, the decree-holder applied for sale of some other immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, without making any attempt to execute the decree against the person or the moveable property of the judgment-debtor as required by s. 109 of Act X of 1859 and had it sold, and it was purchased by a third party. 1—Ss 41, 62-Order-Suit for confirmation of possession-Relief inconsistent with plaint.-

S. 62 of the Survey Act is a bar to a suit by a plaintiff against whom an order determining a boundary dispute has been made under this Act, for confirmation of possession on the allegation that he has been in continuous possession from or before the order, such an order having, under S. 41 of that Act, the effect of a Civil Court decree, which is binding on the parties as regards the question of possession.

When the plaintiff sues for confirmation of possession on declaration of title, alleging that he is in possession, and proves his title but fails to prove possession, the Court ought not to award him recovery of possession, unless on the facts alleged in the plaint the action amounts to one for restoration of possession. 2-Survey Act, v (B C) of 1875, sections 44, 45 clause (b) and section 62 & s. 3-Jurisdiction of Revenue Officer-Butwara Proceedings-Boundary Dispute as to.

Upon an application professedly made under the Survey Act, V (B C) of 1875, the Collector, professing to proceed under that Act, laid down a boundary between two mouzahs on the lines of a boundary made many years before in a Butwara Proceeding between the proprietors of the mouzath who made the application. The plaintiff, who was the proprietor of the other mouzah, although he appeared and made objections before the Collector but did not appeal against his order, now brought a suit to have the boundary rectified.

Held, that the Collector had no jurisdiction under Act, V (B C) of 1875, to determine the boundary as laid down in the Butwara Proceedings so as to bind the plaintiff; and that accordingly the suit was not barred by section 62 of that Act. Clause (b) of section 45 of Act v (B C) of 1875 applies to a survey or some similar proceeding taken by a Revenue Officer for some public purpose, and not to such a proceeding as a butwara. Hurri Prasad v. Bengal Acts-(Tenancy Act VIII of 1885)-Contd.

1—Bengal Tenancy Act—Arrear of putni rent due to a co-sharer Zemindar—Suit by him under Act VIII of 1885 to recover the whole rent of the tenure—Refusal of his co-sharer Zemindar to join him as plaintiffs to bring the same—Law applicable to the case—Agreement to pay shares in the putni rent separately—Its effect on the right to sue and on the tenure.

The appellant, a co-sharer in a Zamindari interest, in consequence of the putni rent falling into arrear so far as the share which should have come to him was concerned, brought a suit making the putnidars defendants and joining as co-defendants his co-sharers in the Zemindari on the ground that they refused to join him as plaintiffs. The suit was framed as one under the Bengal Tenancy Act to recover the whole rent of the tenure and for that purpose to bring to sale the tenure itself. The plaint also asked in the alternative for a decree for the appellant's share of the rent.

Held, that the appellant was competent to bring a suit, under the Bengal Tenancy Act for the whole rent due in respect of the property in suit.

Held, also that the law applicable to the present case must apparently be that by the express terms of the Bengal Tenancy Act in the event of the rent being unpaid the owners of the Zemindari interest were entitled, by suit under that Act to bring a putni to sale with consequences prescribed by that Act, and it was a general rule—a rule not derived from the Bengal Tenancy Act, but from quite another branch of law namely, the general principles of legal procedure —that a sharer, whose co-sharers refuse to join him as plaintiffs, and sue for the whole rent on the tenure, unless there was something to exclude the case from the operation of those rules.

Upon a contention that the case excluded from the operation of those general rule on the ground that by express or implied agreement between the Zemindars and the putnidars, the sharers in the putni rent of the several Zemindars were to be paid and so far as they were paid at all, were in fact, paid separately.

Held, that the right to bring the tenure to sale for arrears of rent remained intact, and also the right of one sharer to sue; making this co-sharers defendants when they would not join as plaintiffs.

Their Lordships had no inclination to question the course of rulings in Bengal that agreement, either expressly proved or implied by the conduct of the parties, might establish the right to sue separately for the shares of rent receiveable by the separate share-holders.

Their Lordships thought that it was clearly a sound view of the law, as clearly laid down in Bengal, that such an agreement, expressed or implied, merely affected the right to sue separately for rent, and in no other respect modified the terms of the holding. Raja Pramada Nath Roy v Raja Ramani Kanta Roy. 10 Bom L R 66=12 C W N 249=35 Cal 331 P C=35 I A 73=7 C L J 139= 18 M L J 43=3 M L T 151

37.—Bengal Tenancy Act s. 5-S. 166-Avoidance of encumbrance by purchaser, one of co-sharers of tenure—Jote-Tenure or holding-Begal Tenancy Act VIII of 1885, s.5

One of the several tenure-holders who purchases the teuure at a sale for arrears on default committed in payment of rent of the same holding, cannot claim the advantageous position which is provided by the last portion of s. 66 of Act VIII of 1869 (Bengal). The principle is that no man should benefit by a wrong done by himself, though he is only one of the several people responsible for it. The description of a property as "jote" does not necessarily show that it is simply an ordinary holding and not a tenure. Where the jote exceeds 100 bighas in area, the presumption in the Bengal Tenancy Act should be applied under which the holding, until the contrary is shown, must be regarded as a tenure.

40. Ss.5, 49,—Presumption—Written lease.

The presumption in s. 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act can be rebutted by the conditions of the lease which may indicate the creation of raiyati interest. And such raiyati interest is not affected by the person acquiring putni and durputni interest in the same portion of the estate after acquiring raiyati interest. There is no merger. A written lease without fixing the term is a lease from year to year and falls within cl. (b) of s.49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Idugazi Doctor v Chandra Kali Sundrani. 8 C W N 139.

41.—Ss. 5 (5), 45, 115—Zurpeshji lease-Tenant if may acquire occupancy—Proprietor's private land-Admission by tenant, decision upon, if should be reverse.

Held. (affirming to High Court)—That the tenant's possession under a Zurpeshgi lease, which merely provided for a part of the rent to be paid in advance-there being no stipulation for the payment of interest on the money so advanced—was that of cultivators and not of creditors as well; and the lands being found not to be the proprietor's private lands, there was nothing to prevent the tenants acquiring the occupancy right therein.

When the presumption raised by S. 5 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act was met by a finding rebutting such presumption, the High Court was right in holding that the tenant was a raiyat and not a tenure holder, although the area exceeded 100 bighas.

With regard to another plot, the Court of first instance had held it to be the proprietor's private land, dealing with the matter on the footing of an admission made at the trial by the tenant's defendants:

Held—That the High Court had erred in going behind that admission and re-opening the question as to whether it was the private land of the proprietor. Damodar Narayan Chowdhri v Dalgliesh. 15 C W N 345 (P C)= 9 M L T 364=8 A L J 441=13 C L J 512= 13 Bom L R 396.

Where no question as to entry of a rent settled, or an omission to settle rent is concerned, a suit by a tenant for a declaration that an entry in the record-of-rights describing him as a tenure-holder is erroneous and for a declaration that he is an occupancy raiyat is not a suit under S. 104-H, but falls within the category of suits alluded to in the proviso to S. 111-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and may be brought within six years.

Held—That the tenant, who was admittedly in occupation of 1815 bighas of land, had succeeded in rebutting the presumption under S 5 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and established that he was an occupancy raiyat.

Per N. Chatterjea, J. It is only in cases where the terms of the lease creating the tenancy are ambiguous or in cases where there is no written lease, and it is not clear what the original purpose of the tenancy was, that the Court should look into the subsequent conduct of the parties and surrounding circumstances to determine the nature of the tenancy. Once, however, the original grant is clearly shown to be a raiyati by a lease unambiguous in its terms, or by other evidence where there is no written lease, the mere fact that the tenants subsequenly sublet the land would not alter the character of the tenancy. There is nothing to prevent the landlord and tenant, notwithstanding the existence of an unambiguous lease, to alter the original nature of the tenancy by agreement, and there may possibly be cases where subsequent conduct may be set up as evidence of such agreement. But where no such agreement is set up and it is clearly proved that the land was originally acquired by the tenant for cultivating it himself or by hired servants or by members of his family, the character of the tenancy is not affected by the mere fact that the land was subsequently let out to tenants. 15 C W N 218, Explained.

The only test of a raiyati interest is to see in what condition the land was when the tenancy was created if raiyat were already in possession of the land and the interest, created was a right to collect the rents from them; that is not a raiyati interest but if the tenant was let into physical possession of the land, that would be a raiyati interest. The words of s 5 Cl 5 of the Bengal Tennacy Act afford no ground for holding that the fact that the quantity of the land exceeds 100 bighas, is conclusive evidence that the land forms a tenure.

In determining the question of the character of the holding, not only the origin of the tenancy should be taken into consideration but also the subsequent conduct of the parties in regard to the land.

Where 200 bighas of jungle land were leased for the purpose of being brought into cultivation, Held that the words would not necessarily imply that the tenant was to bring the lands under cultivation himself or by members of his own family or by his servants, and that the intention might be to bring under cultivation by establishing tenants thereon.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, payable by certain fractional shareholders in a Talook, the Zemindar put in as evidence several road cess returns which had been filed on behalf of another fractional shareholder and which showed that the tenants were receiving from subtenants considerably higher rent than they were paying to the Zemindar, -and this was found to be the only reliable evidence produced by either party Held, that the returns, though not conclusive, prima facie showed that the existing rate was not fair or equitable and this evidence shifted the onus on the tenants to rebut any presumption raised by the returns by producing the collector's papers. As the tenants had not done this, the Court was justified under s. 114 (g) of the Evidence Act, to award enhanced rate on the basis of the returns.

53—Sec. 7—Enhancement of rent of tenure—Permanent tenure, evidence of.

In a suit for the enhancement of the rent of a tenure, it was proved that (1) the tenancy had been created for purposes of reclamation, but when it originated, could not be determined, (2) the tenancy was not limited in duration and had descended from father to son and from son to grandson, (3) that the rent fixed in respect of the lands originally comprised in the tenancy had naver been altered,(4) excess land reclaimed from time to time had been included in the tenancy and rent had been assessed thereon, but at each settlement the rent assessed at the previous settlement had been left untouched, (5) that the rent was progressive, the full amount being reached in the fourth year and the parties agreeing that the lessee should thenceforth continue to pay the full amount and (6) the lessee was entitled to hold excess lands at a rate fixed in the contract.

Held that from these circumstances the inference might legitimately be drawn that the tenure was permanent, the rent had been fixed in perpetuity and was not liable to be enhanced.

Bengal Acts-(Tenancy Act VIII of 1885) S. 10-Concld.

Before a Court can hold that there has been a repeal of one enactment by another by implication, it must be satisfied that the provisions of the two enactments are so inconsistent or repugnant that they cannot stand together.

S. 10 of the Transfer of Property Act has not been repealed by implication by Ss. 10 and 11 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The provision in the former Act saving conditions restraining alienation in leases where the condition is for the benefit of the lessor, is not inconsistent with or repugnant to the provisions of the latter Act, which gives to lessors general powers of alienation and the two provisions in the two acts are capable of standing together.

A permanent lease provided that the lessee should not transfer the land to anybody, and that, should he do so, he would lose all his interest in the land which would become the khas land of the lessor. The lessee having transferred the land the lessor brought a suit for ejectment.

In the absence of a contention that the provisions of S 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act have been strictly complied with, it is not necessary for the Court to take evidence to determine whether a portion of the holding was sold.

The landlord is not bound to recognise any sub division of the holding, unless the provisions of Ss 12 and 17 of the Act have been strictly complied with, or to sue to recover rent of the holding from anybody except the persons whom the landlord has recognised as the tenants.

A consent given by a landlord, by a solenama decree, to a transfer of the whole of a holding or tenure, cannot be taken as his written consent to the division or distribution of the rent of that holding, even though, possibly, under the law, the tenants may be entitled as holders of a parmanent tenure to make a transfer of a portion of their

A landlord is not bound to join persons who are mere benamidars and have no beneficial interest in the tenure as parties defendants in a suit for rent, and the true character of the decree obtained by him cannot be affected by their absence from the suit.

Upon a sale in execution of a permanent tenure under a decree other than a decree for arrears of rent due in respect thereof, the transferee in favour of the purchaser is completed upon payment of the fee, irrespective of its acceptance by the landlord.

As soon as the title of the purchaser has been perfected, the landlord is bound to look to the transferee for payment of rent which has accrued due since that date.

Under the law as it stood before the Bengal Tenancy Act was passed, the landlord was entitled to look to his recorded tenant for all rent, until the name of the transferee had been recorded in his books.

S. 13 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies to transfers of all permanent tenures, and it is immaterial whether the name of the tenant at the time of the sale has or has not been previously recorded in the books of the landlord.

Bengal Acts-(Tenancy Act VIII of 1885) S. 13-Concld.

The unrecorded transferee of a transferable tenure is in no sense a trespasser but is a tenant though his name is not on the books of the landlord, who is entitled to recognition at the hands of the landlord.

If the landlord, in spite of notice that the tenure has passed into the hands of a transferee who has deposited the fee, chooses to bring a suit for rent against the recorded tenant, he does so at his own risk, and has no reasonable ground for complaint if it ultimately turns out that the suit has not been properly constituted and the decree made therein cannot operate as a decree for rent. When a landlord finds that the name of one person is borne on his books as that of the tenant, but the fee has been paid and notice served at the instance of a purchaser of the tenure as the property of a person whose name has not been registered, there is no reason why he should not join the transferee as a party defendant to a suit for rent, so as to avoid possible future dispute as to the frame of the suit and the effect of the decree.

If persons who are interested in the tenure at the date of the institution of the suit for rent are not joined as parties defendants, the decree can operate only as a decree for money.

The mere circumstance that the notice to annul incumbrances is signed by a Deputy Collector will not invalidate it, if he purports to act on behalf of the Collector.

A notice under S. 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act will not be regarded as a valid and legal notice, if it is shewn that the Deputy Collector acted in excess of the powers conferred on him, and not otherwise. 33 Cal 580, Ref: 16 Cal 612; 19 Cal 17; 21 Cal 433, Ref: 21 W R 94; 27 Cal 789, Ref: W R Gap Act X Rulings 98; 8 W R 96, 17 W R 169, 9 C W N 134, Ref. 27 Cal 545, Ref. 32 Cal 911; 29 Cal 813 Fol. 2 C L J 99; 28 Cal 66, Ref: Giris Chandra Guha v. the defendants for recovery of rents and cesses whether and when maintainable.—

It is the duty of the persons succeeding by inheritance to a permanent tenure to notify the succession, and it is not the duty of the superior landlord to find out who all the heirs of a deceased tenure-holder are. There is no law which compels a landlord in order that he might succeed in a suit for rent to sue all the heirs of a deceased tenure-holder when he has no notice who the heirs are. Where, as in this case, the defendant was admittedly one of the heirs and in possession as such, he is liable for the rent, and he cannot defeat the plaintiff's suit by showing that there were other heirs equally liable, unless he also shows that their names were notified to the landlord as successors of the original holders, or that they have been paying rent and getting receipts as successors. Khetter Mohan Pal v. An idol may be regarded as a juridical person capable of holding property, but it is only in an ideal sense that property is so held; the possession and management of the dedicated property belong to the shebait in whom is vested the right to bring suits for the protection of the property. The shebait has consequently, though not the legal property, yet title as manager of the endowment.

The defence was that as neither the plaintiffs nor their predecessor, their mother had complied with the requirements of section 15 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, they were debarred by section 16 of the Act from maintaining the suit. Held, it cannot be said that the plaintiffs are claiming rent that fell due during their mother's life-time as the holders of the tenure. They are claiming that rent as the representatives of the holder of the tenure for the time being or as the representatives of their father, entitled to the rent which accrued due during his widow's life-time, but which was not recovered by her and which, therefore, became part of their father's estate. To show that a raiyat has under section 21 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, acquired a right of occupancy in a holding, it is not sufficient to show that he has got other occupancy holding in the same village; what is required to be shown is whether the tenant is a settled raiyat or not within the meaning of section 20, and has, as such, acquired a right of occupancy in the jote in dispute.

Per Rampini J:—An occupancy right may be acquired by purchase but the right of a settled raiyat can be acquired only by a continuous holding of land in the village for twelve years. The presumption under clause 7 of section 20, of having held the land for twelve years, arises only when the other occupancy holdings are held under the same landlord. Kuldip Singh v Chhatur Singh Roy. 3 C L J 285.

A non-transferable occupancy holding under the plaintiff belonged to B, who sublet a portion of the same to defendants. Nos. 1 and 2 then sold the holding to a third party who again sold the same to defendant No. 1. The plaintiff sued for recovery of possession, and it was contended in defence that the effect of the transfer of the holding is that of abandonment which should be considered to be a transfer in favour of the landlord, who is bound to sue for evicting the defendants as the original tenants would have been bound to do, that is, after notice under S 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Held, that what had taken place in the present case was not tantamount to a sale by the tenant in favour of the landlord, and was not to be clothed with the same legal effect.

Plaintiff a jotedar under the Government, let out a portion of his jote to a raiyat as Chukanidar who again sublet a portion of his holding to the defendant, without the consent of the plaintiff,and otherwise than by a registered instrument. Subsequently the raiyat having surrendered the portion of his holding which he had sublet to the defendant, plaintiff brought this suit for recovery of khas possession.

Held, neither Sec 22 nor Sec 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applied to the case.The landlord was entitled to Khas possession and no notice to quit was necessary.

A jotedar under the Government is not necessarily a "proprietor or a permanent tenure holder" within the meaning of Sec 22 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

A raiyat under a jotedar cannot be regarded as an occupany raiyat.

A chukani right does not necessarily mean a right of occupancy.

The terms, "transfer succession or otherwise." in Section 22 do not mean and include a,"surrender"; the expression "or otherwise" as used in the section means "or in a similar way."

Sec. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act refers to a suit in ejectment brought by the immediate landlord of the under-raiyat and has no application to a suit like the present, where the plaintiff is not such immediate landlord.

Held, further:-Under S 86. clause 7, the whole or a part of holding may be surrendered and there is no distinction in principle as to the landlord's right of re-entry under clause 5, whether the surrender is of the entire or of a part of the holding.

Even when the surrender is of a portion of a holding, there is no provision of the law which makes it obligatory upon the landlord to serve a notice to quit upon the under-raiyat before he can be ejected from such portion. 4 C W N 667 Appl: 31 Cal 932 Dist. Badan Chandra Das v Rajeswari Debya. 2 C L J 570.

Held, by a majority of the Full Bench (Brett and Mitra, JJ., dissenting)—that the heritable nature of the interest of a non-occupancy raiyat if it existed before the Bengal Tenancy Act, has not been destroyed by that Act, and if it did not so exist, it has not been created by the Act Sec. 26 of the Act expressly makes the right of occupancy raiyat heritable and therefore by necessary implication the right of a non occupancy raiyat is not heritable.

He paid rent at the same rate till 1893 when he executed a registered kabuliat, by which he agreed to pay enhancement of rent which was more than two annas in a rupee. In a suit brought against the defendant tenant on the registered kabuliat—Held that, inas much as the enhancement in s 29 of the Act refers to enhancement after the promulgation of the Act, if in this case the enhancement which was made in 1885 was before the Act came into operation, it would not bar an enhancement of rent during the period of fifteen years from the date thereof as contemplated by Sec 29, clause (3). But if it was made after the Act came into operation it would also not bar a subsequent enhancement within fifteen years from the date thereof, as the previous contract was only an oral one and was ineffectual and not binding on the defendant. That having regard to s 29, clause (b) the kabuliat was bad in law as the enhancement was more than two annas in the rupee, and the rent agreed to be paid then was an enhanced rent. The plaintiff would, regardless of the kabuliat, be entitled to recover rent at the rate paid by the defendant for more than three years, in light of the provisions of Ss. 27 and 29, proviso (1). Mothura Mohun Lahiri v Mati Sarkar

143—S. 29, cl. (b)—Agreement by tenant for settlement of bona fide dispute as to rent—Recitals in agreement, whether conclusive—Burden of proof on landlord—Strict proof that case is taken out of statute—Proof by independent evidence.

An agreement to pay a certain amount of rent entered into by a raiyat for settlement of a dispute as to the nature of the existing rent with a view to avoid further litigation, is not an agreement to enhance the rent within cl (b) of S. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

But if the landlord relies upon this principle, he must establish satisfactorily that circumstances exist which render the provisions of the statute inapplicable.

The recitals contained in an agreement executed by a tenant are not conclusive upon matters affected by the instrument It is obligatory upon the landlord to give independent evidence to show that there was a bona fide dispute in existence at the date of the execution of the agreement, the settlement whereof would take the case out of the provisions of the S. 29.

If it is shown that the origin and incidents of a tenancy are unknown, the view may very well be taken that there is a bona fide dispute as to the amount of rent. But the mere circumstance that the tenant claims that the rent is so much, while the landlord asserts that it is otherwise, does not conclusively show that there is a bona fide dispute as to rent. 11 C L J 106; 5 Ind Cas 309; 18 Cal. 333; 28 Cal 90 Foll

Held, that the second agreement was not in violation of the provisions of section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, even if the increase exceeded by more than two annas in the rupee, the amount which the tenant had been paying before, for this was no enhancement of the rent of the holding within the meaning of the section; and that the jama of the holding was what was lawfully agreed to and stated in the kabuliat, and if the parties agreed that a portion of it should be held in abeyance for a time it would not be unlawful for them to enter into a subsequent agreement that either the whole of the amount that was kept in abeyance or a portion thereof should be paid by the one to the other.

A Revenue Officer can hardly be expected to know the requirements of the Civil Courts, and it is proper that the Civil Courts, in directing a local inquiry under cl. Bengal Acts-(Tenancy Act VIII of 1885) S. 50-Contd.

Quere, Whether the word 'recorded' in section 115 of the Bengal Tenancy Act means recorded after all chances of an amendment of the record under any other provisions of the chapter are over, including a suit as contemplated by section 111 of said Act?

Per Coxe J—The particulars in respect of a tenancy, which were the subject of a dispute under section 105 are not recorded within the meaning of section 115 until a note of all decisions of disputes under section 105 has been made under section 107 cl. (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

A decision by a Revenue officer in a proceeding under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act that a tenant is a raiyat at fixed rates, may be regarded as a matter that should be incorporated in the Record under section 107 cl. (2) of the Act, as amended in 1898, and that therefore, where such proceedings were pending, the Record may be regarded as incomplete under section 115 and the tenant is entitled to plead the benefit of section 50 of the said Act. Pirthi Chand Chowdhury v Sheikh Basarat Ali and Kinu Chandra Chatterjee v Mohesh Dutta Jha 10 C L J 343=13 C W N 1149=3 Ind Cas 449=37 Cal 30 (F B).

198—S.50, Cl. (2)—Uniform rent—Presumption—Proof from particular year:—

Where a tenant has paid rent for over twenty years prior to the date of suit at a uniform rate which has not changed, the presumption of law under S.50 Cl.(2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act would arise if there is no allegation or proof that a tenancy commenced in a particular year after the permanent settlment. The mere fact that the tenant shows by documentary evidence that the rate of rent has not changed from a particular year would not preclude him from the benefit of the presumption given by Cl. (2) of S.50. Sheikh Mongala v. Maharaja Kumud Chander Singh Bahadur. 5 C W N 60.

Held that S. 50 of the Act has no application to such a case. Sarat Chandra Ghose v. Shyama Chand Singha. 10 C W N 930.

Notes.—Ref: 9 C L J 467; Foll 2 Ind Cas 992.

200—*S.*50—Ejectment, suit for-Raiyat holding at fixed rate—Presumption—Tenancy held for about 25 years—Inference as to rent fixed in perpetuity—Holding, transferability of—Custom or usage—Usage, benefit of, attaches to existing tenancy—Document, effect of, misunderstanding, if a question of law.

From the mere fact that a tenancy has been held for about 25 years before the date of transfer at a uniform rate of rent, it cannot be inferred that the rent was fixed in perpetuity.

The presumption mentioned in S. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies only to cases which may be called suits or proceedings under the Bengal Tenancy Act. A suit for ejectment on the allegation that a tenant of non-transferable holding sold it to the defendant and has abandoned land, is not a suit or proceeding under the Bengal Tenancy Act.

In cases where S. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not directly applicable, the Court may act on a similar presumption if the facts justify the necessary inference.

Though the misconstruction of a document which is the foundation of the suit or which is in the nature of a contract or a document of title is a ground for second appeal, a second appeal does not lie, because the Judge in the Court of appeal below has misunderstood the effect of documentary evidence.

In order to prove a custom or usage of transferability, it is necessary to prove that transfers have been made to the knowlegdge and without the consent of the landlord, and that they have been recognised by him without the payment of nazar or upon payment of nazar also fixed by contract. It is not necessary to prove that the landlord has actually made an objection to a transfer and has been unsuccessful.

The usage or custom must be obligatory;otherwise, it cannot be said to have acquired the imperative character of law. Hence a growing usage of transferability is of no avail against the landlord; the usage to be effective must have already grown up.

The principle upon which contractual obligations are allowed to be modified by custom or usage is that such custom or usage may enter into the body of a contract without being expressly inserted, as both parties are supposed to know it and to intend to be bound by it. A usage may grow up so as to affect a pre-existing contract or incidents of tenancies under the Bengal Tenancy Act. In the case of usages of transferability of holdings, they can grow up only by the acquiescence in the first instance of the landlord himself, they are at first matters of choice with him, but may acquire an obligatory element or a binding force after he has acquiesced in the conduct of his tenants for a sufficient length of time. Hence a usage of transferability, after it has grown up, affects not merely tenancies created thereafter but also existing tenancies.

201—Enhancement of rent, suit for-Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) Secs 50 and 52—Enhancement, grounds of exemption from onus.—Report of Commissioner not challenged in the first Court should be accepted as correct.

When a tenant claims exemption from enhancement of rent under section 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act the, onus lies on him to prove that he has held the tenure at a rent or rate of rent which has not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement or for 20 years or more preceding the suit.

When the report of a Commissioner as to the prevailing rate of rent was not challenged by either side in the first Court and was acted upon by it without further corroborative evidence the Lower appellate Court ought not to have gone behind that report and examined the materials on which the report was founded and come to a different finding without allowing the parties opportunity to adduce evidence in support of or to rebut it. Govinda Priya Chowdhurani v. 203—S. 50—Applicabitity—Suit for ejectment of transferee from tenant without seeking relief against tenant:—

S. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) has no application to a suit brought by a landlord by which he seeks to eject the transferees from his tenant on the ground that they were trespassers and does not practically seek any relief at all against the tenant when the suit is brought under the general law and not under any special provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The object of the Legislature in providing for the presumption as to fixity of rent mentioned in S. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) was to provide in suits or proceedings under the Act, that is in suits or proceedings between landlords and tenants as such, an easy method of determination of the rights of the parties.

It does not follow that in cases to which the section has no application, it is not open to the Court to draw any appropriate inference from the fact proved by the evidence on the record. 30 Cal 801; 11 C W N 242; 12 C W N 432; 12 C L J 107; 14 C W N 884 Ref. Nityananda Pal v Nanda Kumar Chowdhuri. 13 C L J 415.

205—S. 50—Presumption of fixity of rent—Abwab—Jalaparabi.

Where a tenant has paid Rs 23-14-1¼ gds as rent for 60 years before suit, but in the rent receipts up to 1282 B S, the amount was stated to be the total rent jalaparabi and exchange to convert sicca rupees into the Company's coin, but after that year, the details were omitted.

Held, that, assuming that jalaparabi is an abwab, there is nothing to warrant the conclusion that it is not still being realized as an abwab; that it cannot be assumed merely from the form of the receipts that the tenant must necessarily have consented to pay the whole sum as the consolidated rent of her land; and that therefore the tenant is entitled to the presumption under S. 50 of Bengal Tenancy Act. Brindamoyi Dassya v Maharaja Nripanda Narayan Bhup Bahadur. A tenant is entitled even though the proceeding was taken under S. 105 to a second appeal provided that questions were raised and decided under S. 106.

The words "until the contrary is shown" in S 50 mean that either it must be shown that the rate had been raised at sometime after the creation of the tenancy and prior to the suit or that the tenancy was created after the time of the permanent settlement and do not cover any conduct of the tenant, that is, it cannot be found that the presumption has been rebutted by any conduct of the tenant.

A finding without any consideration of the evidence and without giving any reasons for differing from the first Court, cannot be accepted.

Although the provisions of S. 50, cl. (2), Bengal Tenancy Act, apply only to suits or proceedings under the Act, it does not follow that a Court is precluded from drawing an inference, from the fact of long payment of rent, at an uniform rate, that the jote has been held at a fixed rent since the permanent settlement.

Although the defendant set up a false pattah, dated some time before the permanent settlement yet he is not precluded from asking the Court to draw an inference as to the fixity of rent, if he has proved other facts which would give rise to such an inference. Where a raiyat surrenders his holding, the landlord can re-enter by ejecting the under-raiyat without a notice to quit, if not protected by S. 85 or S. 86, cl (b), of the Bengal Tenancy Act. 4 C W N 667; 2 C L J 570, Fol. 5 C W N 858, Fol.

Although the presumption mentioned in S. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies only to cases which may be called suits or proceedings under the Act, yet even in cases where that section is not directly applicable, the Court may act on a similar presumption, if the fact justfy the necessary inference.

A suit for ejectment on the allegation that the tenant of a non-transferable holding has sold it to the defendant and has abandoned the land, is not a suit or proceeding under the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Though the misconstruction of a document which is the foundation of a suit or which is in the nature of a contract or document of title is a ground for second appeal, a second appeal does not lie because some portion of the evidence is in writing and the Judge in the Court of appeal below makes a mistake as to the meaning of it.

In a suit for ejectment on the ground that the tenant of a non-transferable holding has sold it to the defendant, the only circumstance that the tenancy has been held for about 25 years before the date of transfer at a uniform rate of rent is by itself insufficient to justify the inference that the rent was fixed in perpetuity.

In order to prove a custom or usage of transferability, what is necessary to prove is that such transfers have been made to the knowledge and without the consent of the landlord and that they have been recognised by him either without the payment of nazar or upon payment of a nazar also fixed by custom.

It is not necessary to prove that the landlord has actually made an objection to a transfer and has been unsuccessful.

A growing usage of transferability is of no avail against the landlord ; the usage to be effective must have already grown up.

But a usage of transferability, after it has grown up, affects not merely tenancies created thereafter, but also existing tenancies to which the benefit of the usage attaches. 25 Cal 744; 2 C W N 580 ; 30 Cal 801 , 35 Cal 763 , 12 C W N 432, relied upon. 10 C W N 930, Fol. 19 W R 222 ; 1 C L J 232 : 32 Cal 719 ; 4 C L J 198; 4 Ind Cas 732 . 10 C L J 593, Fol. 8 C W N 214 ; 8 C W N 235, relied upon. 10 C W N 497 : 10 C W N 719 , 4 C L J 306 33 Cal 1094 , 12 C W N 878, Fol. Buzlul Karim v Satish Chandra Giri Mohant 10 Ind Cas 325

A suit was brought by some of several joint land-lords against one of several joint tenants for recovery of the plaintiff landlord's share of the rent payable for the defendant-tenant's share of the tenure under a previous arrangement. The question is whether the tenant defendant can claim abatement under the provisions of section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act in such a suit. Held, the expression Tenant' in section 52 does not include the case by a mere co-sharer tenant who has only a fractional share in the tenure; it means the tenant of the tenure, not one of many tenants. To hold that it applied to a co-sharer tenant would result in much confusion, and almost endless litigation. The tenant defendant cannot claim abatement under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Held, by a majority of the Full Bench (Rampini C J and Mitra J. dissenting)—that if a valid tender has been made and improperly refused, it is not obligatory upon the tenant to follow up the tender by a deposit in Court under section 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. if the tender is kept good, it is sufficient to stop interest from the date of the tender.

In order to prove that the tender was kept good, it was not necessary for the defendant to prove that it was repeated in respect of prior instalments as each subsequent instalment fell due and was tendered. It was sufficient to prove that after tender, each instalment was kept in hand by the defendant ready to be paid to the plaintiff on demand.

Section 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is a enabling section framed for the protection and benefit of the tenant and not a mandatory one imposing penalty for failure to comply with its provisions.

A rent which is tendered with the intention of paying it to the person to whom it is due at the time when it is due, but which is improperly not received by the person to whom it is due, and to whom it is tendered is not an arrear within the meaning of sub-section 3 of the section 54 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

The definition of "arrear" involves the idea

not merely of money unpaid, but of unpaid at the due time. The term "arrear" involves the existence of some default on the part of the debtor.

Though the language of section 21 of Act VIII of 1869 (B C), differs from that of section 67 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the law as to tender has not been altered by the later Act.

Per Woolerjee J—The Bengal Tenancy Act is not a complete Code, even in respect of the law of landlord and tenant It does not profess to incorporate the general principles of the law of contract and the doctrines of equity jurisprudence, in so far as they may have to be applied in the determination of disputes between landlord and tenant.

The general doctrine of tender is applicable to cases between landlord and tenant, and the rules relating to tender are the same in the case of rent as in other contracts

The effect of the alteration in the provisions as to interest was to take away the discretion formerly vested in the Courts, but this does not in any way affect the case of tender. When a valid tender is established and it is proved to have been kept good, the matter is beyond the domain of discretion of the Courts: the tenant is entitled to claim as a matter of right, that interest should be refused Kripa Sindhu Mukerji v Annada Sundari Debi. 6 C L J 273= 11 C W N 983=35 Cal 34 (F B).

The provisions of S 55 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are very different from those of S. 59 of the Contract Act. Under S 59 of the Contract Act the Court may have regard, not only to the debtor's express intimation, but also to circumstances implying that the payment is to be applied to the discharge of some particular debt. Under S. 55 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the debtor must declare the year or the year and the instalment to which he wishes the payment to be created. If he does not do so, the payment may be credited to the account of such year and instalment as the landlord thinks fit.

The word "rent" in s. 65, includes road cess. A tenure-holder granted a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands within his tenure to A, and directed the tenants to pay their rents to him. Subsequently the superior landlord brought a suit for road cess against the tenure-holder, and sold the tenure under s 65 in execution of his decree. A then brought a suit against one of the tenants for arrears of rent, on the contention that all that passed under the auction sale was the right, title and interest of the tenure-holder, and that his rights under the mortgage were not affected by the sale, and he was still entitled to the rent. Held, that Ch XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act must be read with s. 65 of the Act, and that having regard to the definition in cl 5 of s. 3, "rent" as used in that section, includes road cess paya-

258.—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), Sec. 65—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) Sec, 100—Equity, can it override law—Nominal owner, authority of, to pledge property in arrears for rent—Estoppel, doctrine of.

Where one of two defendants, the father, allows his son, the other defendant, to take the lease of an under-tenure in his name from the plaintiff who is well aware that the father is the real owner of the under-tenure and that the son is only his benamidar, the plaintiff-landlord is entitled to look to the son, the recorded tenant, for the due payment of the rent, and if the under-tenure falls into arrears, the landlord may sue the recorded tenant, the son, and obtain a decree for rent which would be operative against the property in the hands of the father, the beneficial or real owner. But it is not competent to the recorded tenant, the son, to create a charge or mortgage on the property, in the event of the rent falling into arrears, in favour of the landlord. If the beneficial or real owner fails to pay the rent regularly, the nominal owner, has no implied authority to pledge the property in arrears, the creation of such a charge being neither necessary for the purpose of the tenancy nor usual for the management of the tenancy.

When, therefore a landlord accepts an instalment-bond either creating a charge or security on the property for the arrears of rent from the nominal owner with full knowledge of the true ownership he cannot be permitted to follow the property in the hands of the true owner.

A suit instituted on a kistibandi or instalment bond, part of the consideration for which was arrears of rent,is a suit not for rent but for money due under the contract, viz, the instalment-bond, by which in lieu of the original liability a new liability was substituted,and the plaintiff can have no charge on the land under the Tenancy Act.

Per Mookerjee J.—The charge referred to in section 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not such a charge as that defined by section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, and does not require to be enforced in the same manner: the only consequence which follows from the provision that rent is a first charge upon an under-tenure is, that a sale held in execution of a decree for arrears of rent produces the effects described in Chapter XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

A mortgage does whereas a charge does not involve a transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property.

A mortgagee can follow the mortgaged property in the hands of a transferee from the mortgagor,whereas a charge can be enforced against a transferee only if it is shown that he has taken with notice of the charge.

Where an instalment bond provided that the executant would be personally responsible for the payment of the money and that, in case of default it would be competent to the person in whose favour it was executed to institute a suit to obtain a decree and to recover the dues by attachment and sale of an under-tenure.

Held—That upon the terms of the bond, it did not create a mortgage, but merely effected a charge.

The words " and the transaction does not amount to a mortgage" in section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act signify that if the relation created by the instrument is not that of a mortgagor and mortgagee and immoveable property has been made security for the payment of money, there is a charge on the property; they do not mean that if the transaction on the face of it purports to be a mortgage but the instrument is not operative as such by reason of defective execution or non-compliance with the formalities prescribed by the law, the transaction is converted into a charge.

Equity will not contravene the positive enactments or requirements of law and defeat its policy by supplying,under the guise of amending defective instrument is absolutely void, even as between the parties to it.

In the face of the statutory provision contained in sec 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Courts in India will not and cannot apply indiscriminately the general equitable principle of English rule,namely, that a mortgage which is defective and is inoperative as such operates as a good equitable lien, if it shows an intention to create a charge.

The validity of equitable mortgages is recognised by the Legislature in this country only to a limited extent.

Difficulty of applying the English rule of equitable mortgages in this country pointed out and explained. Royzuddi Sheikh v Kritarthanath Mukherjee. 4 C L J 219= 33 Cal 985.

If, at the time, when a suit for rent is instituted, and a decree is made, the plaintiff is still the landlord. the fact that subsequently he sells his landlord's interest does not prevent him from obtaining the benefit of Sec. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act of bringing to sale the tenure or holding in execution of such decree. the rent containing as a first charge thereon.

One of several joint landlords obtained a decree for the entire 16 annas rent and it was ordered that the plaintiff would get 4 annas and the other proprietors the remaining 12 annas. The plaintiff took out execution only for his 4 annas share and attached the tenant's holding.

Held that the decree is justified by authority.

Held, also, that, the decree being one for the whole rent, it was open to the plaintiff to execute it whether the holding was transferable or not, and the whole tenure would have passed under S 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

But as the plaintiff seeks to execute the decree only in respect of his own share, he does proceed under the Bengal Tenancy Act for bringing

Where there is not Ghatwali tenure in existence, it having been resumed, and where there has been none at least for some years before the institution of the suit, no question arises as to any provision of the Bengal Tenancy Act affecting the incidents of a Ghatwali tenure, and sec. 181 of the Act has no application.

In order to make the rule in Sec. 50 of the Act applicable to a case two conditions must be satisfied viz., first, that the suit is one under the Bengal Tenancy Act, and secondly, that the raiyat and his predecessor in interest have held at a rent which has not been changed during the twenty years immediately preceding the institution of the suit.

There is nothing in the nature of a Ghatwali tenure to shew that as long as such a tenure existed, the presumption under Sec. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act could not by reason of Sec. 181 of the Act, arise.

Semble. If with reference to a raiyat holding under a Ghatwal, the presumption embodied in Sec. 50 cl (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act be applied, that does not in any way affect any incident of the Ghatwali tenure. The decree for ejectment passed under s. 66, cl. 2, of the Bengal Tenancy Act, need not incorporate the terms as to the ejectment being avoided by payment within fifteen days from the date of the decree. 300—S 84—Acquisition of land by landlord Reasonable and sufficient purpose—Collector's certificate-Civil Court jurisdiction and functions —The proprietors of a talukh had constructed an indigo factory and employed an European manager They applied under s 84 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, to acquire by compulsory sale a small piece of land made up of parts of several raiyati holdings within his estate The application was opposed by the proprietors of another indigo factory who had taken under leases the greater part of the lands of the village, including the holdings within which this small piece of land was comprised from the raiyats The collector of the district granted a certificate under s 84, that the purpose for which the land was acquired was reasonable and sufficient The Munsiff tried the matter as a disputed question of fact and came to the conclusion that the purpose alleged was not reasonable and sufficient and declined to authorize the purchase The District Judge on appeal, reversed the Munsif's finding Held, that no section of the Act gives a right to appeal, the order of the District Judge was without jurisdiction, and must be set aside Held by Prinsep and Ameer Ali, JJ (Petheram C J dissenting)—The certificate of a Collector under s 84 is not conclusive as to the reasonableness or the sufficiency of the purpose for which the land is to be acquired, but the Civil Court is competent to hold a judicial inquiry to determine the grounds on which a certificate is granted. The purpose must have a direct relation to the good of the particular holding and objects which might have a remote or speculative bearing upon the estate seem to me to be foreign to the scope of the Act. Held by Petheram C J—The jurisdiction of the Collector under s 84 is final and the Civil Court has only to decide, about the settlement of amount to be paid for the land and the question whether the land is bona fide required for the alleged purpose. The words "Sastisfied on the certificate" mean that the Civil Court is to be satisfied on the certificate alone, and is not at liberty to take other evidence on that question, but is to accept the decision of it by the Collector as final Goghun Mollah v Rameshur Narain Mahta 18 Cal 271.

A raiyat granted a sub lease from year to year in respect of a portion of his holding. The sub-lessee having been dispossessed by the landord under whom the raiyat held, sued for recovery of possession.

Held, that he was entitled to recover. The sub-lease was not void for all purposes, and so long as the raiyat's interest subsisted,his landlord had no right to eject the sub-lessee.

A sub-lease granted by a raiyat is void only under the circumstances specified therein as against the landlord, but is not necessarily void so far as the parties themselves are concerned. 317—S. 87-not exhaustive — Abandonment, a question of intention—Mortgage of non-transferable holding.—

The first sub-section of section 87 of the Act shows that abandonment is the effect of the act of the tenant in vacating the holding without making arrangement for payment of his rent as it falls due, and for cultivating the land.

Whether there is abandonment or not in any individual case is a question of intention to be determined upon the facts of the particular case.

In order to effect a legal abandonment and to allow a valid re-entry by the landlord, service of notice under sub-section 2 of section 87 of the Act is not necessary. The only effect of the service of notice is to make it obligatory upon the tenant to have a speedy determination of the question whether there has been an abandonment or not.

Section 87 of the Act is not exhaustive and a landlord is not a wrong-doer merely because he re-enters upon the holding before he has followed the procedure laid down in that section.

When the holding is a non-transferable one, and the ryot executes a mortgage, the mortgage is inoperative as against the landlord, but as between mortgagor and mortgagee, the mortgage is operative. 4 C W N 679 Ref:

Where the mortgagee of a non-transferable occupancy holding purchases the holding in execution of his mortgage decree and takes possession, the possession of the tenant mortgagor completely ceases, and the holding passes into the occupation of the mortgagee. As against the landlord, the mortgagee auction-purchaser is a trespasser. The landlord is entitled to sue him and to obtain a decree for ejectment; in suit the tenant who is not in occupation is not a necessary party.

Under the circumstances of the case, the abandonment of his holding by the tenant, although due to the execution sale, is a voluntary one.

318—S. 87—Ejectment, suit for—Occupancy-raiyat, sale by—Non-transferable right of occupancy—Abandonment, what amounts to — Possession of original tenant — Khas possession—Sub-lease from purchaser.—

Mere sale of a right of occupancy to a third person, notwithstanding that the vendors remain in occupation of the land under a sub-lease from the purchaser, does not amount to abandonment in law and the landlord is not entitled to re-enter by ejecting the original tenants. (9 C W N 379, 9 Cal 648, Fol.; 22 W R 22 Ref; 4 Cal 925, 24 Cal 212 Dist.). Madar Mandal v. Mahima Chandra Muzumdar. 3 C L J 343=33 Cal 531.

319—Section 87—Under-lease—Forfeiture.

Where a raiyat holding a non-transferable holding transfers it to a third person, but remains in occupation of the land as his vendee's under-raiyati, repudiates his relation as tenant, refuses to pay rent to the landlord of the raiyati holding and maintains his right to transfer a non-transferable holding and seeks by suit to re-occupy the land not as his (landlord's) tenant, but as the under-tenant of his vendee, his suit must fair. The case is not one of abandonment under Section 87.

If the raiyat transferee is willing to revert to the former state of things, to reoccupy the land and pay rent to the landlord, then a suit for possession is maintainable against the landlord.

Bengal Acts-(Tenancy Act VIII of 1885) S. 87-Concld.

The transferee of a non-transferable raiyati holding is not a tenant of the landlord and has no legal connection with the land.

A landlord, who proceeds to take possession of a holding after service of notice under s. 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, on the allegation that there has been an abandonment by the tenant, does so at his own risk He cannot be said to take possession in due course of law, so as to bar a suit by the tenant for recovery of possession under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act. Suresh Chandra Mookerji v Srimati Nesa Bibi. 11 C L J 433=6 Ind Cas 553.

321—S. 87—Whether applicable to land partly horticultural and partly homestead —Ejectment—Transferee of non-transferable holding.

S. 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act contemplates cases in which there is cultivation of the holding by the tenant, and consequently a holding, consisting of land partly horticultural and partly homestead, does not strictly come within the purview of that section.

When the tenant of a non-transferable holding executes a usufructuary mortgage of it, places the mortgagee in possession, abandons the holding and leaves the village, the landlord is entitled to treat the mortgagee as a trespasser and to ask for ejectment, although the case does not come within the purview of S. 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. 10 C W N 499; 3 C L J 223; 10 C W N 719; 4 C L J 306; 33 Cal 1094; 10 C W N 878, Fol:

The agreement was ratified by the zemindar. On the zemindar suing Defendant No 1 for measurement of the tenure and increased rent, it was objected that under the kabuliyat only the mokuraridar was entitled to sue for such measurement; Held,—That every landlord has a right under sec. 90 Bengal Tenancy Act to sue for measurement: Held, further—That by accepting the zemindar as landlord, Defendant No I had made himself liable to be sued by the zemindar. When it was further objected that the zemindar and mokuraridar were joint landlords and the zemindar could not sue alone: Held,—that though they were both landlords of Defendant No 1 they were not joint landlords within the meaning of sec, 188. That even if they were joint landlords, by their subsequent conduct, in collecting rent and suing separately, they had ceased to be so, 22 Cal 658 (1895) followed.

An application by one of the co-sharers in an estate made on 8th June 1891 for the appointment of a common manager was withdrawn as it was objected to by the other co-sharers on the 4th March 1891. The same co-sharer again applied to the Court asking that proceedings might be taken under s. 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the management of the estate might be taken over by the Court of Wards. Objection was taken by others against the appointment of a manager but consent was given as regards the Court of Wards. On the 30th March 1892 the District Judge, without making any enquiry to satisfy himself as to the necessity of the appointment of a common manager, ordered that the estate should pass into the hands of the Court of Wards. The Court of Wards at first accepted the management, but subsequently declined to act, and the Board of Revenue directed that the estate should be released. On the 13th August 1892 the Court issued notices to show cause why a common manager should not be appointed. All objected to the appointment but the representative of the minor-cosharers stated that they had agreed to appoint a private person manager of their shares. Thereupon the District Judge temporarily appointed such person as manager, until the co-owners should take steps under S. 99 to satisfy the Court that they were in a position to manage the estate property. On the 24th March 1893, the District Judge passed two orders on two applications made by two of the cosharers for the release of the estate, refusing to release it, on the ground that the management of the estate could not be conducted without injury

The plaintiff had been proprietor of an estate which was sold for arrears of Government revenue and repurchased from the then purchaser by the plaintiff in 1886. He applied under Ch X of the Bengal Tenancy Act for the measurement of the estate and the preparation of a record-of-rights, and the Revenue Officer deputed for these purposes found that a portion of the estate held by the defendant was mal land, though it was held as lakhiraj under certain sanads, and as he also found that no rent had ever been paid for it, it was entered on the record-of-rights as mal land held under those sanads as lakhiraj. The Special Judge, on appeal by the plaintiff, held that the land, having been found to be mal, should have been entered as mal land unassessed with rent. In a suit to have the land assessed with rent, it was found that the sanads, under which the defendant claimed to hold, were granted not by any predecessor, in title of the plaintiff, and were of a date anterior to the Permanent Settlement. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court) that the Special Judge had no jurisdiction to determine whether the land was mal or lakhiraj, and that his judgment as to its being mal did not therefore operate as res-judicata. 21 Cal 38, referred to 17 Cal 721, distinguished. A suit by a party whose objection under S. 103 A. Bengal Tenancy Act, to an entry in the draft record of rights has been rejected by the Revenue Officer for a declaration of his rights is not governed by Art, 14, Sch. II of the Limitation Act. The order rejecting the objection under S. 103A. Bengal Tenancy Act, having no finality is not an order of a Government officer within the meaning of Art. 14, Sch. II of the Limitation Act. Further the final publication of the record of rights merely raises a presumption of the correctness of the entry and it is not necessary to bring a suit to avoid a presumption. 370.—Secs. 103 A, 104 E, 104 H and 111A—Rent suit for judicial order—Record of rights—Res-judicata.

An order striking off a petition of objection under section 103 A of the Act for default is not a judicial order; nor does not it operate as res-judicata in a subsequent suit for rent brought by the objector, against the recorded tenant.

The first part of section 111 A of the Act prohibits suits which seek to take undue advantage of mere technical defects in the procedure leading up to or involved in the settlement proceedings.

The section further prohibits the alteration of rent once settled except to the extent was allowed by section 104H, and the proviso, in virtue of which suits of a declaratory nature may be brought, cannot be read as prohibiting suits for the recovery of arrears of rent alleged to be due from tenants.

Section 104H of the Act is designed mainly to safeguard the Government revenue and to attach reasonable finality to the fixation of the rental assets upon which the assessment of revenue is based. It does not bar a suit like the present brought against the recorded tenant for rent due. (28 Cal 471 Fol.). Nasarulla Mia v Amiruddi 3 C L J 133.

371—S. 103 (b)—No limitation as to the nature of the suit—Presumption as to correctness of entry.

There is no limitation as to the nature of the suit to which the provisions of S. 103 (b) apply. Evidence of facts,documentry and oral, of a date prior to that of the publication of the record of rights, is admissible and should be taken into consideration in determining whether the presumption under section 103 B of the Bengal Tenancy Act as amended has been rebutted or not.

Chapter X of the Act, it is found that the tenants generally are in possession of lands in excess of the areas entered in his zemindari papers and their rent receipts, does not necessarily prove that he is entitled to additional rent for the excess areas. In case of very old holdings where the boundaries are not actually ascertained by actual survey, it would be incumbent upon the zemindar who seeks an enhancement of rent on excess lands very many years after the original settlement of the ryots to show that the lands held by the tenants fall within that description; that is to say, that they are in excess of the lands originally let to them in consequence of some encroachment or some alluvial increment, or that the previous settlement was made on the basis of a measurement and the rates of rents as applied to the area then determined, while on a fresh measurement made by the same length of measure it has been found that he is entitled to receive additional rent which by carelessness or neglect or some other cause he had hitherto lost. A more liberal interpretation should be put upon the word "permanently" and it should be construed with reference to existing conditions. A deterioration is permanent even if it is capable of being removed by the application and skill. It is the duty of the Settlement Officer while determining the liability of additional rent, to consider the length of time during which the tenancy has lasted without dispute as to rent or area. No doubt it is only an occupancy ryot who is authosised by the Act to bring a suit under section 38, but the principles laid down in that section ought clearly to be taken into consideration in all proceedings for the settlement of rent, whatever the status of the ryots. Gouri Pattra v Reily.

From an order disposing of such an objection there is no appeal and no second appeal, and the order cannot have the effect of res judicata. A dispute under S. 106 is to be 'heard' and 'decided' by the Revenue Officer under the procedure laid down in the Civil Procedure Code for the trial of suits and is subject to appeal and second appeal, and an order disposing of such a 'dispute' will have the effect of res judicata. 24 Cal 462 considered and explained. Karban Ali v Jafar Ali. 5 C W N 798=28 Cal 471.

In proceedings by the landlord for settlement of rent under s. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act as it stood before its amendment by Act I (B C) of 1907, the tenants were in practice allowed to take objections which would properly come under s. 106 of the Act; and when, in such a proceeding, the lower Courts decided any such matter, a second appeal would be entertained by the High Court. A tenant in such a proceeding is entitled to the benefit of the presumption of fixity of rent arising under s. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act from proof of uniform payment of rent for twenty years, s 115 of the Act not displacing such a presumption in a proceeding under s. 105 or s. 106. Quere:—Whether the words "recorded under this chapter" in s. 115 mean "recorded after all chances of amendment of the, record under any other provision of the chapter are over, including a suit as contemplated by s. 111." 389.—Secs. 105, 109 as amended by Act III (B C) of 1898—Civil Court, jurisdiction—Act creating new jurisdiction—Interlocutory order.

Under section 109 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as amended by Act III (B C of 1898) and as it stood before the changes made by the Eastern Bengal and Assam Tenancy Amendment Act of 1908 came into force the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is ousted only in respect of any matter which is or has already been the subject of a proceeding under any of the four sections 105 to 108. 8 C L J 322, 35 Cal 1013 Diss.

A proceeding under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, which deals solely with the question of fair and equitable rent, does not bar a Civil suit in which questions are raised as to the area and other incidents of the holding of the tenant.

In the case of an Act which creates a new jurisdiction, a new procedure, new forms or new remedies there prescribed and no others must be followed.

When a party has elected to take the benefit of an interlocutory order, he cannot at the same time by an appeal against such order nullify the final decree which he omits to challenge directly. When a final decree has been made, the party aggrieved, ought, at that stage to prefer an appeal against that decree, as in such appeal the propriety of an interlocutory order also may be questioned. But this principle does not bar a civil suit for determination of questions of area and title of a holding because an order under the settlement of fair and equitable rent has been allowed to become final. Pandab Dowari Das v Ananda Kishun Chakrabutty. 12 C L J 195=14 C W N 897= 7 Ind Cas 102.

Plaintiffs initiated proceedings under sec. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act against the landlord and the Defendants Nos. 2 to 9 who claimed to be rival tenants of the land, to have their names recorded as tenants in the settlement proceedings. The Settlement Officer held that the Plaintiffs were the tenants and made an order in Plaintiffs' favour. On appeal by Defendants Nos. 2 to 9, and not by the landlord, the Special Judge reversed the decision and ordered that the names of Defendants Nos. 2 to 9, who he held were the tenants, be registered The Plaintiffs thereupon brought the present suit to have their rights declared as tenants of the land: Held—That the previous decision of the Special Judge not having been a decision between the parties, i.e., as between the tenants on the one hand and the landlord on the other, it could not operate as res judicata in the present suit Mohunt Jagannath Ramanuj Das v. 402—S. 106—Suit between rival proprietors —Scope of suit—Question of possession or title—Limitation——Limitation Act (XV of 1877). S. 22—Substitution of executor in place of supposed legal representative—New defendant.

In a suit under S 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act certain lands were alleged to have been erroneously recorded as part of mouzah P, and it was prayed that the record-of-rights be amended and the disputed lands entered as part of plaintiff's own mouzah R from the record of which the same had been omitted. This suit was instituted more than two months after the final publication of the record of-rights for mouzah R. but within two months of the final publication of the record of rights for mouzah P.

Held, that the suit was not time barred.

In such a suit the Reveue Officer and in case the suit is transfered to the Civil Court, the Civil Court is confined to question of possession and cannot be asked to adjudicate upon the title of rival proprietors.

The suit was originally instituted against the person whose name was entered in the record-of rights. But it appeared that this person was the widow of the deceased proprietor, and her name was entered as representing the estate of her deceased husband.

Held, that the executors to the estate of the deceased proprietor who were substituted as defendants were not new defendants within S. 22 Limitation Act. Mohunt Padmalay Ramanuja Das v. Lakmi Rani. 12 C W N 8.

A record-of-rights having been prepared in 1896 the landlord applied in 1897 for the correction of an entry under S, 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act as it then was. After the Amending Act of 1898 was passed the case was referred to the Civil Court under the proviso to S. 106 of the Act as amended.

Held, that the Court has jurisdiction to try, notwithstanding that the proceedings were commenced prior to the passing of the Amending Act which first empowered a reference to the Civil Court.

In matters of procedure, an Amending Act would affect legal proceedings instituted under the repealed provision Rahimuddin Sarkar v. Jagat Kishore Acharya. 12 C W N 987.

An undisputed entry in a record of rights prepared under the provisions of Chap X of the Bengal Tenancy Act VIII of 1885 (before amendment) did not fall under sec. 107 of that Act. The presumption in favour of its accuracy raised by sec. 109 of the Act would be sufficiently rebutted by a decree passed in a contested suit between the parties. Sec. 109 of Act VIII of 1885 laid down a rule of evidence, and could not override the rules of res-judicata which are of general application. Ghaneshyam Misser v. 411—Ss. 107, 109—Record of rights—Decision of Revenue Officer, uncontested proceeding—Effect of—Decree—Presumption of accuracy.—

The proceedings referred to in S. 107 of the Bengal Tenancy Act mean contested proceedings in which there is an adjudication on disputed points. The decision of a Revenue officer in an uncontested proceeding has not the effect of a decree under that section and the entry in the Record-of-rights pursuant to such decision cannot override the effect of a contested Civil Court decree between the same parties. The effect of such a decision and entry would be that, under S. 109 of the Act, there would be a presumption in favour of their accuracy until the contrary

A grant of a fishery right or right of a pasturage or the like may be made independently of an interest in land.

A grant of trees as distinct from the land in which the grantor reserves every forest right except the one which is granted is nevertheless the grant of a forest rights within the meaning of S. 193 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and a suit for the recovery of money payable in respect of such forest rights is governed by the three years' rule of limitation laid down in Sch. III, Art. 2, cl. (b) of the Act.

The provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act applicable to suits for the recovery of arrears of rent are, having regard to the phraseology of S. 193 of the Act, designedly made applicable to suits for the recovery of sums that are not rent; and money payable in respect of forest rights is not rent within the meaning of S. 3 (5) of the Act.

The question of limitation, raised in the written statement but abnadoned in the Court of first instance, is a clear question of law, and it could be raised in the Court of Appeal.

Under S. 184, sub-S. 1 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it is obligatory upon the Court to dismiss the suit on the ground of limitation, although limitation has not been pleaded.

Refusal by a counsel or pleader to urge a question of law is a mere admission of law which is not binding upon the party, and the party may raise the question in appeal although not raised in the lower Court, specially where the question of limitation obviously arises upon the admitted facts of the case.

Certain co-sharer landlords in suit for rent stated that they had not been able to obtain precise information as to what might be due to their co-sharers whom they made proforma defendant, but they believe that nothing was due to him, and that they consequently sued for what was due to themselves but they offered to increase the valuation of the suit if it should turn out in the end that rent was still due to their co-sharer. Neither the co-sharer nor the tenant entered appearance and an exparte decree was passed.

Held, that, as the co-sharer did not appear, the plaintiffs were entitled to proceed on the assumption that nothing was due to him, and the decree, therefore, was a decree for the whole sum then due to the entire body of landlords, and the plaintiffs were entitled to treat the decree as one for arrears of rent in respect of the entire holding within the meaning of s. 170, sub s. (1) so as to exclude the application of r. 58 of O XXI of the C P C 1908. Nunda Lal v Kala Chand. 8 Ind Cas 50.

445.—Sec. 148, clause (h),—Application subsequent to the Act for execution by assignee.

Section 148, clause (h) of the Bengal Tenancy Act governs an application for the execution of a rent decree by an assignee of the decree, unless the landlord's interest in the land has become and is vested in him, when such application is made after Act VIII of 1885 came into force, even though the decree was made before the Act.

When an assignee of a rent decree, obtained against the recorded tenants, has brought to sale the tenure in arrears and the execution Court has erroneously overruled the objection of the judgment debtor that section 148 clause (h) was an effective bar to the proceedings, such erroneous order, though binding upon the judgment debtors is not binding against their unrecorded co-sharers who are consequently competent to question the legality of the sale.

Quære.—Whether section 148, clause (h) absolutely bars an execution at the instance of an assignee of a rent decree who is not also an assignee of the landlord's interest in the land, or whether it merely prevents the execution proceedings from having the effect of proceedings in execution of a rent decree. S. 149 of the Bengal Tenancy Act provides a very simple and expeditious machinery for the purpose of protecting a tenant against the harassment of litigation consequent on rival claims of title to the reversion of the tenant's interest.

Sub-S. (3) of S. 149 of the Act contemplates a suit which culminates not in a decree but in an order of a limited kind, an order restraining payment out of the money. It is not necessary to decide the question of title in issuing an injunction under that section.

In a suit brought under S. 149, sub-S. (3) of the Act, in which the plaintiff keeps within the terms of the section and asks only for the relief contemplated by it, no question of title can be decided. It would be otherwise if the suit be framed as one for determination of the plaintiff's title.

When in a proceeding under Ss. 244 and 311 C P C., on an application by a prior purchaser of a holding, the sale thereof in execution of a rent decree in a suit valued at below Rs. 50. is set aside, the order setting aside the sale decides a question relating to the title to the land. or to some interest in the land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto (the applicant and the auction purchaser) within meaning of s. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and an appeal lies against such order. In such a case, the Court is to consider, not what the original decree decided, but what the order appealed against did decide, and in such a case, the ex parte character of the original decree would not make the slightest difference.

sum below Rs. 50. In execution of the decree, the judgment-debtors' holding was sold and purchased by the decree-holder himself. The judgment-debtors applied under ss. 244 and 311, C P C to have the sale set aside on the ground of irregularity and fraud. The sale was set aside by the Munsiff. On appeal, a preliminary objection was taken that, under s. 153, Bengal Tenancy Act, no appeal lay against such order. The question was referred to the Full Bench for its opinion. Held, the order of the Court below was to the effect that the landlord acquired no title to the property in question under his purchase. That was a decision of a question relating to title to land or to some interest therein, and as such, was appealable under the proviso to s. 153 of the Act. Per Rampini, J.-The order under reference did not decide a question relating to an interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto within the meaning of s. 153. It is not a suit by a co-sharer landlord, but a suit by one who seeks to establish his right as a separated landlord.

In such a suit it is for the Court to consider whether such separation has in fact taken place, if so on what terms, and then to assess the fair rent properly payable by the tenant and finally to decide whether there are in fact any arrears due and to give judgment accordingly. Lala Dhanukdhari Lal v Baburam Ahir 10 C L J 629=4 Ind Cas 475.

illegality and irregularity in the trial of the case, it is a proper one for interference under s. 115. In a suit for rent the defendant denied the title of the plaintiff saying that he was the benamidar for his daughter. There was no issue raised in the first Court as to whether the defendant was estopped from denying the plaintiff's title. The Court of appeal below held as a matter of law that the defendant was estopped from denying the plaintiff's title. Held that it was irregular on the part of the Court to hold this, in the absence of any finding whether or not the defendant was inducted into the land by the plaintiff, or if he was so inducted, into what land he was inducted or whether there was an attornment to the plaintiff and as to the question of benami as bearing upon the question of estoppel. Held further that it was a material irregularity on the part of a Court to come to a finding under a serious misapprehension as to actual facts. An admission without being aware of the circumstances is not binding. A previous deposition of the defendant who did not appear in a subsequent case was admitted without any proof whatever that it was his deposition. held, that this was an irregularity within s. 115. Before awarding damages under s. 186-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Court should find as a fact as to whether there was reasonable or probable cause and state its ground for coming to that conclusion. Sibu Sant v. The provisions of S. 153-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act are, having reference to the words of S.193 of that Act, applicable to suits for recovery of rents of jalkar (fishery).

In an application to set asid an exparte decree for rent of a jalkar (fishery), it is the bounden duty of the next friend of a minor to put forward a statement of the injury sustained by the applicant by reason of the decree or judgment, that is to say he is bound to state that the rent which he was sued for, was not due from him or that it had been paid or paid in part, or that the

A suit in respect of the rent of a tank, where the lease is not only of the water but of the land underneath and of the fruits of trees on the banks of the tank and of the right to rear fish, is not one governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act, and s 153 does not bar an appeal.

The right over fishery in s. 193 of the Act is the right to rear and to catch fish, without any reference to or connection with the land underneath or bordering on the water.

Where in an appeal from a decree of the first Court in a suit for arrers of rent in respect of a tank, the lower appellate Court passed a decree dismissing the appeal as not maintainable under s.153 of the Act, and a second appeal was preferred against that decree:

The decree of the lower appellate Court did not decide the question as to whether the plaintiff or the defendant was the jotedar under the superior landlord, but said that the plaintiff was entitled to recover so much money from the defendants in respect of the plaint land.

487—S. 153—Second appeal—Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819), Ss. 11, 15—Annulment of intermediate tenure——Where tenure can be avoided otherwise than by suit—Intention to avoid—Overt act.

In a suit for rent the defendant No 1 was the tenant and the defendant No 2 was said to hold an intermediate tenure which the plaintiff alleged he had annulled under Ss. 11 and 15 of the Patni Regulation. The suit was dismissed by the lower appellate Court on the ground that the suit was not maintainable as the under tenure had not been previously annulled by a suit. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court:

Held, that it was a question such as is covered by S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that a second appeal lay.

Under-tenures are not ipso facto avoided by a sale under the Patni Regulation. But it is clear that they can be avoided otherwise than by a suit. They can be avoided when the purchaser by some overt act indicates his intention to exercise his power of avoidance. It is not necessary that the purchaser should give any notice or do any act before bringing his suit.

The present suit itself is sufficient annulment of the defendant No 2's under-tenure.

If the purchaser issues a proclamation under cl. 2 of s. 15 of the Patni Regulation, that would be an overt act indicating his intention to exercise his power of avoidance of any under-tenure mentioned in the proclamation.

An under-tenure cannot be avoided unless the intention of the purchaser is communicated to the under-tenant. 23 W R 268 Dist, 9 Cal 683, Fol:

Where the suit was for ejectment from certain land, but the plaint contained other prayers, namely, for a declaration that the defendant had no right to build houses on the land, and for an injunction on him to remove houses he had built thereon, and the suit for ejectment failed from the insufficiency of the notice under s.155, the Court held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a declaration or injunction asked for. Pershad Singh v Ram Pertab Roy. 22 Cal 77.

Per Petheram C J, Prinsep Pigot and Ghose JJ—An admission of Tenancy in order to give jurisdiction under s.158 does not bring the case within the section, the object of the section being to enable the Court to ascertain what are the incidents of the existing arrangement between landlord and his tenant, and not to enable the Court, in effect, to make a new contract for parties between whom no contract was in existence at and before the date of application. On examination of the several sections of Chap. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act commencing from section 159.

Held, that the landlord in order to take advantage of the special provisions relating to sales for arrears of rent, must cause the sale of each holding or tenure separately, having obtained a decree as regards the rent of each tenure of holding. Accordingly when a landlord having the same tenant holding different jotes or tenures under him instituted one suit for the rents of all the jotes or tenures and obtained a decree, the sales held in execution of the decree do not avoid incumbrances created by the tenant.

Where one part of the sale certificate described the interest transferred as the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property mentioned in the Schedule, but in another part it was explicitly stated that the property transferred was one of which the rent was in arrear;

Held, that what was intended to be sold and was actually sold was the defaulting tenure described as the property of the judgment-debtor

Held, that the recitals in the kabuliyat merely set out the ordinary incidents of a putni grant as laid down in S 3 of the Putni Regulation, and did not give the putnidar an express authority in writing by the landlords to create a mortgage, and the mortgage cerated in favour of the plaintiff by the putnidar was not a " protected interest " within the meaning of S 160, cl.(g) of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

A lien created by a tenant on his holding is an incumbrance as defined in S 161 of the Bengal Tenancy Act

The purchaser of a holding at sale held in execution of a rent decree must, therefore annul any mortgage created by the tenant as provided by S 167, and the mortgage is not ipso facto annulled by the sale

If the purchaser does not take necessary steps to get the incumbrance annulled within the peirod limited the incumbrance stands and can be enforced against the purchaser A landlord who purchases the holding is in no better position than any other purchaser

Until the notice has been properly served under S 167 upon the incumbrancer, the incumbrance, stands.

S 73 of the Transfer of Property Act only gives a right to the mortgagee over the residues of the sale proceeds, and refers to cases where the law otherwise provides that the effect of the sale is to nullify a mortgage , it is not intended in any way to enlarge the interest of the purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue of rent

The production of the order sheet of a proceeding under S 167 is not sufficient to prove the annulment of an incumbrance. The proceedings before the Collector are summary and not binding

There is nothing in the law which disentitles a landlord to a first charge, because after the accrual of the rents he sued for, he parted with his interest in the zemindari.

The character of the decree a suitor obtains depends on the nature of the claim, and of his right to the relief sought for, and is not altered by any change in his position which may have taken place subsequent to the accrual of his right to sue.

Avoidance of incumbrance—Money-decree.

When there are several tenures held by the same tenant, the landlord may institute one suit for the rent of all the tenures. But he cannot put the tenures to sale under the procedure laid down in Ch. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act, in execution of the decree obtained in such a suit, so as to enable the purchaser to avoid incumbrances under s. 167, Bengal Tenancy Act. A sale under the provisions of that Chapter can take place only when a separate decree has been obtained for the arrears of each tenure or holding and the same is sold separately in execution of such a decree.

561.—Prior and puisne mortgagee—Purchase by each at mortgage sale—Rights inter se—Partial redemption—Redemption price—Payment by puisne mortgagee to save property from rent sale if may be taken into account.

A first mortgagee obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged properties and purchased the same in execution, but when he proceeded to take possession was successfully resisted (i) by a second mortgagee who had mean-while sued on his mortgage, obtained a decree and purchased some of the properties in execution, and (ii) by certain other persons who had purchased some of the other properties from the mortgagor. None of these had been made parties in the first mortgagee's suit, the latter not having had notice of their interest in the mortgaged properties. Held —That it was not obligatory on the first mortgagee to institute a fresh suit for sale on his mortgage against these persons, and a suit for recovery of possession of the properties on the basis of his purchase was maintainable, 9 C W N 728: = 32 Cal 891 (1905) followed. But inasmuch as the Plaintiff had already enforced that mortgage and the mortgage-debt had been thereby converted into a judgment-debt, he was entitled to the contract rate of interest, only up to the date of the decree in the previous suit, and interest at the Court rate subsequent thereto up to the date of payment to be fixed by the decree in the present suit. 10 C W N 592 s. c. 33 Cal 590; 11 C W N 249: s. c. 5 C L J 106 (1906), followed. 8 Cal 79 (88) (1881), not followed. Held—That in taking accounts credit ought not to be given to the Defendants for payments alleged to have been made under sec. 171, Bengal Tenancy Act, to save the properties from sale in execution of a rent decree, inasmuch as the first mortgagee was not bound by law to pay the amount within the meaning of sec. 69 of the Contract Act.

No inflexible rule can be formulated that an order under S.173 is or is not appealable as a decree. The test to be applied in the circumstances of each case is, what is the true nature of the question raised, that is, whether the question relates to the execution of the decree, and who are the parties or their representatives.

An unrecorded co-sharer in a tenancy is not a representative-in-interest of the recorded tenant within the meaning of S. 47 of the C. P. C. (1908). Therefore, where an application was made by an un-recorded co sharer for the setting aside of a sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor, the recorded tenant, had purchased the holding through another person, and the Court sets aside the sale, the order was not appealable. 587,—S. 174-Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), S 311—Application under both sections-Withdrawal of latter—Effect—Appeal.

An order under s 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is appealable if the question is between the parties to the suit or their representatives, and the question raised in a question relating to execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree.

The word "applies" in the proviso to s. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act means "applies and prosecutes."

time—Sale, setting aside of, on appeal—Appeal if lies against order setting aside sale—Civ Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), S. 47—Inconsistent position, if may be allowed to be taken—Order, effect of—Compensation, decree-holders purchasers, if entitled to—Costs of decree, vakalatnama, if recoverable—Poundage-fee.

An application by the judgment-debtor, to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree for rent, on deposit of the judgment debt and compensation under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, was dismissed by the Court of first instance, on the ground that the necessary deposit was not made within thirty days of the sale, the sum deposited proving insufficient and the balance having been paid after thirty days of the sale. On appeal by the judgment-debtors, the appellate Court held that the Court had power to extend the time, and set aside the sale as prayed by the judgment-debtors; the decree-holders purchasers appealed.

Held, that, the judgment-debtors having appealed to the lower appellate Court on the assumption that the adverse order of the Court of first instance had been made under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act read with S. 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is not competent to them to urge that the order in their favour by the lower appellate Court was, as a matter of fact, made without jurisdiction, and that although the appeal preferred by them was incompetent, it is not open to the decree-holders to assail that order by way of appeal. It is not open to a party litigant to assume inconsistent positions of this character, having succeeded in the lower appellate Court on the assumption that the order of the original Court was of a particular description, they cannot be permitted to turn round and assume an entirely different and inconsistent position.

The order made by the original Court dismissing the application of the judgment-debtors to set aside the sale under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is to be treated as one within the scope of S 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and in the nature of a decree against which a first appeal and a second appeal lie under the law.

Whether an order in execution proceedings is within the scope of S. 47 of the Code of 1908 depends upon its nature and contents. If it decids a question relating to the execution, satisfaction or discharge of the decree, and if the decision has been given between parties to the suit or their representatives in interest, the order of the Court falls within the scope of S. 47, and is a decree within the meaning of S 2.

It is not open to the Court to extend the time within which a judgment debtor is required to make a deposit under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, or Rule 89 of Order 21 of the Code of 1908.

The position, however, may be different if the party has been prevented from making the deposit by reason of the action of the Court, because in such a contigency the Court is guided by the principle that an act of the Court prejudices no man.

S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies to all purchasers whether they are decree-holders or strangers to the execution-proceedings, and the decree-holder auction-purchaser is entitled to get five per cent, upon the purchase money, just like any other auction-purchaser.

S. 174 makes it obligatory upon the judgment-debtors to deposit the amount recoverable under the decree with costs, and the costs here referred to are costs properly incurred by the decree-holder subsequent to the decree and in the course of execution proceedings.

A copy of the decree is not, ordinarily, necessary for the purpose of the execution proceedings, and the decree-holders are not entitled to charge the amount spent by them in obtaining a copy of the decree, specially when not required by the Court to produce one, as part of the costs mentioned in S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

An execution proceeding is essentially a continuation of the suit.

The authority of a pleader engaged in the suit does not terminate with the decree, but it is competent to him to appear on behalf of his client, in the course of execution proceedings without a fresh authority.

A fresh vakalatnama, or authority to a pleader being unnecessary for the purpose of executing the decree, the costs for vakalatnama are not costs chargeable by the decree-holder under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

The poundage-fee paid by the decree-holder in respect of the execution sale at which they purchased cannot be treated as an integral part of the costs incurred by them and the decree-holders are not entitled to claim the money from the judgment-debtors.

When a sale of immoveable property is set aside under Order 21, rules 89, 91 and 92 of the Code of 1908, or under S.174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the decree-holder becomes entitled to a refund of the fee The decree-holders are not entitled, in the event of a reversal of the sale, to recover from the judgment-debtor the poundage-fee. If the sale is reversed, the decree-holder will forthwith become entitled to a refund of this money. If, on the other hand, the sale is not set aside, he will not be entitled to a refund. In either event, he is not entitled to claim the money from the judgment-debtor. A sale was held in execution of a rent-decree and the judgment-debtor made a deposit under S. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Subsequently, the judgment-debtor made an application for leave to withdraw the deposit and thereupon the Court refused to set aside the sale. Then the present petitioner appeared and alleged that he had purchased the property long ago and that the deposit was made with his money. The Court dismissed his petition on the ground that he had no locus standi.

Held that, in the interests of justice, the petitioner ought to be allowed to use the name of the judgment-debtor and to make a fresh deposit now within seven days from the arrival of the record in the Court below. Adhar Chandra v. Ram Charan, 10 Ind Cas 526.

The occupation of land which is included in a Ghatwali tenure and which had been held under a Ghatwal for more than 12 years by a raiyat, does not necessarily confer on him a right of occupancy.

The Bengal Tenancy Act does not expressly lay down any rule of law with respect to acquisition of either occupancy or non-occupancy right in land held by Ghatwals as service tenures, and the incidents of a Ghatwali tenure, which are declared by Sec. 181 of that Act not to be affected by the provisions of Act are nowhere specified.

Subsequent to the certain of the original holding, defendants took possesion of certain lands by gradual encroachment. Plaintiffs brought a suit for recovery of their share of the encroached lands or for assessment of rent, and made their co-sharers parties Held, that it was altogether a new holding, and the rent that would be assessed upon that would be a new rent in respect of the new holding, and a suit for assessment of rent is not an act that is authorized by s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and s.52 was not applicable. 14 Cal 201, 14 Cal 203 note, and 15 Cal 47, referred to. The plaintiffs, who were some only of several joint-landlords, brought a suit to enhance the rent and to recover their share of the rent at the enhanced rate for a specified period. Held, that having regard to the provisions of s. 188 of the Act, the plaintiffs could not maintain the suit. In a suit brought by one co-sharer, who was entitled under the kabuliat to collect his rent separately, to recover arears and also to collect the rent for fresh lands brought under cultivation the tenant objected that having regard to the provisions of s. 188, the suit could not lie at the instance of the plaintiff alone. Held, that the suit did not lie. It was not a suit for enhancement of rent in the ordinary sense of the term, nor was it a suit for additional rent for excess lands and as the plaintiff was entitled to collect his share separately, there was no reason why he should not be entitled to claim his share separately, not upon any fresh adjustment of the rent inconsistent with the continuance of the old tenancy, but upon an ascertainment of rent payable in accordance with the terms of the original letting. 4 Cal 96, and 17 Cal 695, distinguished.

Plaintiff, the co-plaintiff, defendant No 1, and other persons, who also were defendants, held a tenure, under which defendant No, 1 held an under tenure. Plaintiff brought this suit for the whole of the rent, claiming only his own share of it, making those co-sharers defendants who did not join as plaintiffs. The terms of the defendant's pottah were that, the whole of the lands being brought under cultivation, the landlords would be at liberty to measure the lands of the ganti, and, if the land be found greater in quantity than 150 bighas the tenant would pay rent at the rate of 10 annas per bigha. The lands being found greater than the said quantity, the plaintiff prayed for a decree for rent at that rate for the whole area. The defendant pleaded inter alia that the plaintiff, as a fractional sharer in the landlord's interest, could not sue him alone. Held, that the suit was maintainable at the instance of the plaintiff alone, and that it was not a suit to alter the rent under the provisions of s. 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. 19 Cal 755 relied upon; 17 Cal 695, dist.

621-S.188-Partition of estates-Joint-landlords.

A tenure was held under a zamindari which originally formed one entire estate. The estate was subsequently partitioned by the revenue authorities into four several estates. The rent of the tenure was thereupon allotted proportionately to each of the four estates thus formed, although the land forming the tenure remained undivided. In a suit for enhancement of the rent of the tenure brought by the proprietor of some of the estates, —Held, that the effect of the partition of the parent estate was to create separate and distinct tenures out of the original single tenure under the proprietors of each of the estates; that the proprietors of the several estates were not joint landlords of the tenure within the meaning of s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and that therefore a suit for enhancement of rent would lie by a proprietor of one of the estates in respect of the rent allotted to his estate. 22 W R 530 and 5 Cal 273 followed.

622—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) s. 188—Joint landlord—Suit for apportionment of rent & arrears of rent.

S. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act lays down that joint landlords can only sue for the rent collectively or by common agent. But it does not prescribe that the relation of joint landlord is to endure for ever or does not prohibit joint landlords from ceasing to be joint, or from suing for their shares of the rent separately when they have ceased or wish to cease, to be joint landlords. When a defendant is subject to a joint liability, it would without doubt be unjust to allow him to be sued by one of his joint creditors who would not release him from his liability to his other creditors. But there would seem to be no reason why the creditors should not be allowed to sever their mutual relations, and sue their debtor separately for their shares of the debt, provided this be done in such a manner as to free the debtor from all further liability to any of them.

putni rent separately—Its effect on the right to sue on the tenure.

Appellant, a co-sharer in a zemindari interest in consequence of the putni rent falling into arrear so far as the share which should have come to him was concerned, brought a suit making the putnidars defendants and joining as co-defendants his co-sharers in the zemindari on the ground that they refuse to join him as plaintiffs. The suit was framed as one under the Bengal Tenancy Act to recover the whole rent of the tenure, and for purpose to bring to sale the tenure itself. The plaint also asked in the alternative for a decree for the appellant's share of the rent:

Held, that the appellant was competent to bring a suit, under the Bengal Tenancy Act, for the whole rent due to respect of the property in suit.

Held, also, that the law applicable to the present case must apparently be that by the express terms of the Bengal Tenancy Act in the event of the rent being unpaid the owners of the zemindari interest were entitled, by suit under that Act, to bring a putni to sale, with consequences prescribed by that Act, and it was a general rule—a rule not derived from the Bengal Tenancy Act, but from quite another branch of law, namely, the general principles of legal procedure—that a share, whose co sharers refuse to join him as plaintiffs, should bring him into the suit as defendants, and sue for the whole rent of the tenure, unless there was something to exclude the case from the operation of those rules.

It was contended that the case was excluded from the operation of those general rules on the ground that by express or implied agreement between the zemindars and the putnidars, the share in the putni rent of the several zemindars were to be paid, and so far as they were paid at all, were in fact, paid separately.

Held, that the right to bring the tenure for sale for arrears of rent remained intact, and also the right of one sharer to making his co-sharers defendants when they would not join as plaintiffs.

Their Lordships had no inclination to question the course of rulings in Bengal that agreement, either expressly proved or implied by the conduct of the parties might eastablish the right to sue separately for the share of rent receivable by the separate share-holders.

Their Lordships thought that it was clearly a sound view of the law, as clearly laid down in Bengal that such an arrangement, expressed or implied merely affected the right to sue separately for rent, and in no other respect modified the terms of the holding. Raja Pramada Nath Roy v Raja Raman Kant Roy. 35 Cal 331=35 I A 78=7 C L J 139=3 M L T 151=10 Bom L R 66=18 M L J 43.

625—S. 188-Enhancement of rent-Co-sharer landlord—Suit for enhancement of rent by one co-sharer landlord by making others as defendants whether maintainable—"Acting together" meaning of.

The institution of a suit for enhancement of rent is a thing authorized by the Bengal Tenancy Act, in the case of tenure-holders as well as in the case of occupancy raiyats.

The Act prohibits one or some of two or more joint landlords from suing to enhance the rent, unless both or all of the fractional landlords join in the suit as co-plaintiffs.

Therefore, a suit for enhancement of rent brought by one of the joint landlords, making the other landlords, who do not concur with him, defendants, will not lie. 35 I. A. 73 ; 12 C W N 240; 10 Bom. Held, that there is nothing to prevent the co-sharers from reverting to their original condition if they are all agreed; and a suit brought by all the co-sharers for the recovery of the entire rent is maintainable.

An arrangement, under which fractional shares to the rent are paid separately to different co-sharers, does not bind the parties for all time, and may be put an end to by the tenants or by the landlords collectively, though not by one of the landlords against the consent of the others. 4 Cal 96; 17 Cal 695 and 9 C W N 84 Ref. Shyama Charan Bhattacharya v Akhoy Kumar Mitter 10 C W N 787=3 C L J 627 ciples of legal procedure. Agreement, either expressly proved or implied by the conduct of the parties, may establish the right of co-sharer landlords to sue separately for the shares of rent receivable by them. Although, in an action on a contract, all the parties jointly interested therein ought to be brought before the Court, the rule is otherwise in an action for damages for wrong independent of contract. Where several persons are entitled to sue in respect of a wrong done to them jointly as for instance in the case of injury to their joint property by trespass, conversion or negligence, it is not necessary that they should all join as plaintiffs in the action. In 1865 the plaintiff sued and obtained a decree for payment of additional rent for excess land held by the defendant, and, on the 29th March 1877, instituted another suit against the defendant for khas possession of newly-accreted lands, or, in the alternative, for an assessment of rent thereon according to the terms of the defendant's kabuliat. This suit was dismissed on the 29th June 1881; but, on appeal to the High Court, this decision was reversed on the 11th May 1883, and khas possession was given to the plaintiff. On appeal, the Privy Council, on the 24th July 1886, reversed the decree for khas possession, and declared the plaintiff entitled to a decree, fixing the extent of the excess lands and assessing rent therefor in terms of the kabuliat, such rent to be payable from and after the 28th March 1878, and remitting the case for a finding as to the extent of the excess lands. The Subordinate Judge, to whom the case was remitted, gave the plaintiff a decree on the 21st March 1887 for increased rent in respect of 2 kanis 7 gundahs 2 cowries of excess land. On the 14th July 1887, the plaintiff instituted a suit to recover excess rent for the years 1878 to 1886, and for rent at the old rate plus the excess rent for a portion of the year 1887. Held that the suit, so far as the rent for 1878 to 1883 was concerned, was barred by limitation. Hurro Kumar Ghose v Kali Krishna Thakur. 17 Cal 251.

A landlord sued his patnidar on the 13th April 1891 for the recovery of the arrears of rent for the last year under the Regulation VIII of 1819 in the Collector's Court and prayed for the sale of the patni taluk. The patni taluk was purchased by the landlord himself on the 1st of May 1891. But the whole of the arrears were not recovered and again a suit was brought for the recovery of the balance due. The defendant pleaded limitation. Held—that the suit was governed by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act s. 184, and sch. III art 2 (b). The period of limitation being 3 years from the last day of the Bengali year in which the arrears fall due. Hence the suit was barred by limitation.

There is no presumption that a letter, which was posted properly addressed, and the presumption that the letter reached the addressee, has no application till it is established that the letter was properly addressed.

Before the presumption of due service can be applied, it is necessary to prove that the notice was sent in a cover which was properly addressed.

The presumption that a notice sent by post was duly served is not a conclusive presumption of law; it is merely a presumption of fact; and whether it arises in a particular case or not, depends upon all the circumstances.

An exparte entry in the order sheet is by no means conclusive evidence, if it is admissible in evidence at all, as against the landlord, who was not a party to the proceedings for deposit under section 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Having regard to ss 143, 144 and 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, there is a special procedure laid down for rent suits; therefore decrees in rent suits are decrees under art 6 of Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The words 'final decree' in the above article of the Act refer to the final decree in the suit and does not include an order in appeal upon an application to set aside that decree under s 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A decree-holder applied on the 27th May 1889 for execution of an exparte rent decree for a sum under Rs 500 obtained on the 30th May 1888. In execution thereof certain properties of the judgment debtor were attached,and the 31st. of August 1889 was fixed as the date of sale. The judgment-debtor then applied to have the exparte decree set aside and pending the disposal of that application the sale was stayed on the 31st October 1889 the Court further ordered striking the execution case off the file,of its own motion for convenience. On the 28th December 1889 the application to set aside the decree was rejected and this order was confirmed on 16th May 1890 in appeal. The decree-holder again applied to execute the decree on the 21st January 1892, with a prayer that his application might be taken to be in continuation of his former application of the 27th May 1889, Held that the application must be taken as a continuation of the former execution proceedings, so far at least as regards the property mentioned in the former application but as regards other properties, it must be held to be barred as not having been made within three years from the date of the decree i. e. 30th May 1888. Baikanta Nath Mittra v Aughore Nath Bose 21 Calc 387.

1—Conditional bequest — Humble request—Vesting of legacy·—

Where a testator makes a bequest to A for maintenance contingent on A's suit against the testator for division of estate terminating in the latter's favour and on A humbly applying for subsistence:—Held, that the bequest does not vest in A until the conditions are fulfilled. An application by A asserting that the testator is under a duty to maintain him and asking for twelve times as much as is contained in the will is not a humble request. An application by A's representative or son is not a fulfilment of the condition.— Veerabhadra Raju v. Chiranjeevi Raju. 15 M L J 111=28 Mad 173= 32 I A 105 (P C).

2—Non-transferable, bequest of, if void or voidable—Void and voidable transaction, nature of—Recognition by landlord of transfer.

When a transfer of a non-transferable occupancy holding takes place, the transaction is in law voidable at the option of the landlord only. Hence the heir of an occupancy raiyat of such holding is bound by a bequest of the holding made by the latter in favour of a stranger.

If a transaction is void, no rights in favour of either party can grow under it, nor can it form the foundation of any estoppel. It is not necessary to have it set aside; its invalidity may be set up whenever it is sought to be enforced. It is incapable of being confirmed or ratified.

If a transaction is voidable. it is valid and binding upon the parties and persons deriving title through them whether by descent. purchase or otherwise, until it is avoided.

The transfer of an occupancy holding which is not transferable by local custom, may be validated by the consent of the landlord.

When the landlord recognises the transfer as valid, he recognises the transfer of the existing occupancy right as valid transaction. (4 C W N 679; 2 C W N 279, 6 C W N 624; 11 C W N 76 relied on.). Hari Das Bairagi v Udoy Chandra Das. 8 C L J 261=12 C W N 1086

A consent given by the heirs of a Mahomedan testator whereby the latter disposes of by his will more than one third of his given property to a stranger, even if the consent is after the property is attached in execution of a decree against the heirs, does not amount to an alienation within the meaning of S. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. Daulatram v. 5.—Partition—Self-acquisition - Bequest of self-acquired property to sons—Presumption in favour of ancestral nature of estate taken;—

A, a Hindu father bequeathed his self acquired property to his sons. The will said they were to take the property in severalty, but its terms were otherwise consistent with ordinary rules of inheritance. One of the sons gifted some of the property. His sons sued to set aside the gift,as the property was property in which he had an interest by birth. Held, (1) that a Hindu can give or will away his self-acquired property as he pleases. Observations to the contrary in 3 M H C. R. 50 are no longer law. (2) He can leave it to descend to his sons as ancestral property. or can preserve for it that quality by will. The question whether he intended to pass it as ancestral or self-acquired property is one of intention turning on the construction of the deed of gift. The presumption is that he intended it to have the character of ancestral estate. If partition is made by the father on the footing that the property is partible, though there is in point of law a disposition made by the father, the intention of the farher will be taken to be that the quality of the ancestral property shall remain. So the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Nagalingam Pillai v Ramchandra Tewar. 24 Mad 429.

7.—Hindu Law—Hindu widow—Alienation, power of, over immoveable property,—Bequest by husband—Will, construction of, grant of—Absolute power, express or implied—Restrictions imposed upon power of alienation-Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), Sec. 82. Though a mere gift of immoveable property by a Hindu-husband to his wife, does not carry with it the power of alienation, yet where any such property is given by the husband to the wife, with express power of alienation, or when this power is implied by the grant, she would acquire an absolute power of disposal over the property, and when the gift is made by a will, the legatee is entitled under the provisions of sec. 82 of the Indian Succession Act, to the whole interest of the testator unless it appears from the will that only a restricted interest was intended to be given.

Where a will does not in express terms convey any estate of inheritance to a Hindu widow, still the widow will be entitled to alienate the property at her pleasure if there is no restriction imposed by the terms of the will, so far as the power of alienation is concerned.

Upon a construction of the will in this case which provided as follows "If neither of them (the wives) have any children then both my wives will enjoy and appropriate at their will the entire property moveable and immoveable in equal shares in full proprietary rights. In the absence of one, the other will similarly enjoy and appropriate at her will the entire aforesaid property in full proprietary right. In event of her death, my next reversionary heir will have such moveable and immoveable property as will remain." Held—That an absolute power of alienation was intended to be conferred on the widows. 1 C W N 387=24 Cal 834, 24 Cal 406, 4 C W N 387. Saroda Sundari Dassi v Kristo Jivan Pal. 5 C W N 300.

8.—Hindu Law—Will—Construction of—Hindu widow—Life estate to a widow—Power to adopt, effect of:—On the construction of a will by a Hindu:—

Held:-that the testator's intention was to give his widow an ordinary life estate and not that of a Hindu widow and a contrary intention cannot be inferred from the mere fact that power was given to the widow to adopt a son and so divest herself of the estate: and that the testator's intention was that the gift to the subsequent legatee should vest at once but be liable to be divested in case a son should be adopted. 10.—Bequest to daughters and their respective sons—Restriction of descent to male issues—Absolute or limited gift.

In construing the Will of a Hindu it is not improper to take into consideration what are known to be the ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus with respect to the devolution of property. It may be assumed that a Hindu generally desires that an estate, specially an ancestral estate, shall be retained in his family, and it may be assumed that a Hindu knows that as a general rule, at all events, woman do not take absolute estates of inheritance which they are enabled to alienate. L R 2 I A 7 (1874), followed. In the Will of Hindu drawn up in the English language, and probably by an English Solicitor who was one of the attesting witnesses, it was provided, in case of the failure of a prior bequest in favour of a son to be adopted to the testator, (which bequest in fact failed) that the estate was to be made over to and divided between his two daughters in equal shares, "to whom and their respective sons he gave, devised and bequeathed the same." There was a proviso that in the event of one of the daughters dying without leaving any male issue surviving, the share of the deceased daughter was to go to surviving daughter and her sons—to the exclusion in both cases of female issue. Further that "in the case of the death of either daughter leaving sons, the share of such daughter was to be paid to such of her son or sons, share and share alike." Held—That under the Will the testator's daughters whom he incontestably intended to benefit were to have no more than what is generally known to be a woman's estate in his property. That the testator intended to create in their favour an estate for life with a remainder over to their sons. That in the events that happened, the daughters were entitled to the testator's estate in equal shares for life and with the benefit of survivorship between themselves.

7.-Damages for procuring breach

In a suit for damages for breach of betrothal contract the Lower Court awarded damages against the parents of the girl, and also against her husband,on the ground that by marrying her had promoted the breach of contract. Held, that the suit as against the husband would not lie. Jhangie Ram v Dass Ram. 8.—Marriage brocage contract.

Where defendant agreed, in consideration of receiving Rs. 200, to find a wife for plaintiff, and the money was paid, but defendant did not perform his part of the contract,and it was found by the Court trying the case that defendant never intended procuring a wife for the plaintiff, but obtained the money under false pretences. Held, that a suit to recover back the sum of Rs, 200 (plaintiff having discovered the agreement to be void), was maintainable, but the Judges (Boulnois and Lindsey, JJ.,) considered the contract opposed to public policy. Gahu v Haku P R 86 of 1875.

9.—Suit for breach-Marriage of plaintiff after contract to another woman, pleaded in bar.

Plaintiff sued for damages for breach of betrothal contract. The plea was, that the plaintiff had married another woman, and for that reason defendant refused to complete the contract. Held, that by law and custom, the plea was no bar to plaintiff's suit, but that the subsequent marriage went in mitigation of damages. The parties were Muhammadans of the Hissar district.

10.—Betrothal Contract, breach of—Money paid under void agreement-Act IX of 1872, Section 57—Promises to do things legal and also other things illegal.

Where money has been paid by a bridegroom to the bride's father in consideration of the marriage of the latter's daughter, and the promised marriage has not been performed : Held, that such money can be recovered back by suit.

Betrothal-Contd.

The transaction between the parties comprises to distinct and separable sets of promises within the meaning of Section 57 of the Contract Act, and while one set, that relating to the marriage, is lawful, and amounts to a contract, the other set, that relating to the pecuniary consideration, may be unlawful as opposed to public policy,and therefore a void agreement. But whether such agreement be void or not, the person who paid the money is in either case entitled to recover it back in the event of the father of the girl refusing to celebrate the marriage. Kahna v Kahn Singh. P R 106 of 1879.

11.—Suit for damages for breach-Defendant justifying his refusal to carry out the contract by Custom—Onus probandi—Custom of Aroras—Riwaj-i-am.

In a suit for damages for breach of a betrothal contract, the parties to which were Aroras, it appeared that the existence of the contract and the subsequent refusal to perform it were facts not denied by the defendant, the father of the girl, but that the contention was, that owing to physical infirmities produced by supervening disease, viz, small-pox, contracted by plaintiff about two years after the betrothal, the plaintiff was not a fit person to contract marriage, and that the father of the girl was therefore excused by custom, from performing his promise of giving the plaintiff his daughter in marriage. It was admitted that the custom by which the parties were governed in matters relating to contracts of betrothal was correctly stated in the Riwaj-i-am prepared at Settlement, which provided that "if after betrothal the "boy or girl * * * * * contracts any "disease whereby the healthy condition of the "body may be permanently impaired * * * "* * the other party is at liberty to cancel "the betrothal"

Held, that the defendant, upon whom the onus under the circumstances lay, had failed to prove that the boy's health of body was permanently impaired, and that therefore the custom as embodied in the Riwaj-i-am justified him in refusing to perform the contract to give his daughter in marriage to the plaintiff's son.

13—Breach of promise to marry—Procuring Breach of Contract—Liability of the mother for inducing person not to marry—Malice—Justification—Presence of malice is a removal of the justification,

It is well-established doctrine that the procuring of a breach of contract by a third party is an actionable wrong and the relationship of the party who procures the breach and the party who commits the breach as mother and son does not exclude the operation of the doctrine. 1—Aden Courts Act 11 of 1864, Ss. 8, 15—Resident's Court at Aden—Suit for declaration and injunction—Claim valued for Court Fee purposes at Rs 130—Court Fess Act (VII of 1870) S. 7, Sub-S. 4, Cls (c) and (d)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1877), S 8—Reference to the High Court by the Resident—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), S. 115—High Court of Bombay-Revisional powers.

The plaintiff sued for a declaration and injunction with regard to certain property worth upwards of Rs. 50,000. The claim was valued at Rs 130 and the plaint was engrossed on a stamp paper of Rs. 10 under the provisions of the Court-Fees Act, S. 7, Sub-S (4), Cls (c) and (d). The first Court rejected the claim on the ground that the plaint was not properly stamped. The plaintiff appealed to the Court of the Political Resident at Aden and shortly after this the plaintiff applied under S. 8 of the Aden Act II of 1864 for reference of the following questions in the appeal for decision of the High Court of Bombay, namely: "Is the plaint sufficiently stamped, and was the order of the Court, rejecting the plaint under S. 54, Cl, (b), of the Civil Procedure Code without making an order as to what the requisite stamp should be, legal?". The Resident, however, dismissed the appeal under S 551 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882: Held that the Resident's Court was subordinate to the High Court of Bombay which had, therefore, the power of revision, under S. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, with regard to questions that should be submitted by the Resident under S. 8 of the Aden Act II of 1864. Held further, that as under S. 15 of the Aden Act, the Court of the Resident was to be guided by the spirit and principle of the laws and Regulations in force in the Presidency of Bombay and administered in the Courts of that Presidency not established by Royal Charter, and in the High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal from these Courts, the provisions of the Suits Valuation Act, S. 8, are "the law for the time being in force for the valuation of claims" as required in S. 8 of the Aden Act II of 1864. Held further that the assuming that the plaintiff's claim had been correctly valued under the Court-Fees Act, as appeared to be the case on a consideration of the reported decisions of this High Court, her claim estimated according to the law for the time being in force would be Rs. 130, and was, therefore, a claim which did not fulfil the requirements of S. 8 of the Aden Act, so as to give the plaintiff a right to demand the statement of the case upon any question of fact or law arising in her suit. Rahimbai Jamalbhoy v Mariam Abdul Rasool. The plaintiff's father died, possessed of a 4 anna share in a jote in Bhutan Duars. During their minority their elder brothers sold that jote to first three defendants in fraud of the rights of the plaintiffs, and the purchasers took possession of the jote accordingly and had entries made in their own names in the record-of-rights. The plaintiffs brought this suit under Act XVI of 1869 against the defendants to recover their share in the jote. The lower Appellate Court, without going into the merits, dismissed the case as not cognizable in view of the provisions of Act XVI of 1869 and the Repealing Act VII of 1895. On appeal therefrom,—Held, that the notification extending the Civil Procedure Code to Jalpaiguri had not the effect of introducing the Civil Procedure Code to the Bhutan Duars, although the latter are a part of Jalpaiguri, inasmuch as Act XVI of 1869, which was then in force in the Bhutan Duars, excluded that jurisdiction in express terms. But the effect of the repeal of Act XVI (without any qualification) by Bengal Act VII of 1895 has left the Civil Procedure to be administered in the Bhutan Duars. That the plaintiffs are not precluded by the entry in the record-of-rights from obtaining relief against the defendants. An entry in a record under Act XVI of 1869 in order to be conclusive evidence of any right interest, or other matter must be one which has been honestly and fairly obtained. Brojo Kanto Das v Tufaun Das. 4 C W N 287.

5—Dishonour of cheque taken in payment of bill of exchange when due.

The defendant endorsed to the plaintiff a bill of exchange drawn by N S & Co and accepted by C N & Co. The bill, at the time it was endorsed to the plaintiff by the defendant, bore the previous endorsement of N S & Co to the defendant. The bill fell due on December 3rd, 1870, which was a Saturday, and on that day the plaintiff sent his jemadar to C N & Co the acceptors to present the bill for payment. The bill was taken by A, one of the members of the firm of C N & Co., who gave a cheque for the amount and took a receipt from plaintiff's jemadar, striking out the signature of C N & Co as acceptors, but without the plaintiff's consent. The plaintiff's jemadar took the cheque immediately to the bank, but the bank was closed. Thereupon he returned to C N & Co; and informed them that the bank was closed and demanded cash. The plaintiff alleged that it was then stated that the cheque would be honoured on Monday. The plaintiff's jemadar then went and informed the gomastha of the plaintiff of what had been done. The plaintiff's gomashta sent him to the defendant's firm to give him notice of what had taken place. It was alleged that at this interview the defendant's liability was admitted in case the cheque was not honoured, and the plaintiff's jemadar was advised to wait until Monday, the defendant stating that he also had a cheque for Rs7,000 from C N & Co. This was denied by the defendant. On Monday 5th December, the cheque was presented to the bank for payment, and was dishonoured. The plaintiff's gomashta went to the defendant's koti, and gave notice of the dishonour of the bill and cheque, and asked him to pay the amount of the bill. The defendant asked for the bill, and the plaintiff's gomastha went to C N & Co, and brought back the bill, with the name of C N & co., which had been struck out, replaced. The defendant, seeing the bill was overdue, refused to pay the amount. The cheque was thereupon returned to C N & Co., and the bill retained by the plaintiff, who, on 6th December, caused written notice of dishonour to be given to the defendant. Held that the cheque must be taken to have been merely a conditional payment, and when it was dishonoured, the liability of the original bill revived. Held, also, that reasonable notice of dishonour was given, whether the bill to be taken to have been dishonoured on the Saturday or on the Monday. Somarimull v Bhairo Das Johurry. 7 B L R 431

Certain bills of exchange drawn by A in 1870 and 1873, were accepted by B for the accommodation of A, and endorsed by him to the Bank of Bengal. In May 1876, A, by letter agreed to execute a mortgage of a certain portion of his property, consisting of a share in a Privy Council decree, to B, and in the meantime to hold such property at the disposal of B, his successors and assigns. A became unable to meet his liabilities and in August 1876, executed a conveyance of all his property to the Official Trust for the benefit of his creditors. The bank assented to and executed this deed after it had been assented to and executed by some of his other creditors. The deed did not contain any composition with or release by the creditors, nor any agreement on their part not to sue A. 7—Bill of exchange—Holder and acceptor—Accommodation acceptor—Con-tract to treat the acceptor as surety–Principal and surety.

The general rule is that the acceptor of a bill of exchange is the principal debtor and the drawer the surety. A contract to the contrary may be entered into between these two parties inverting their positions, and such a contract may be proved in proceedings between them. No such contract can be set up as between the acceptor and the holder.

Mere notice of the defendant's position as an accommodation acceptor is not sufficient to preclude the holder from treating him as a principal debtor. He cannot be so precluded, in the absence of evidence proving that there is a contract under which he is bound to treat the acceptor as a surety. Bellew v Bank of Upper India Limited Lucknow. 13 O C 206=7 Ind Cas 727.

Where there is no acceptance, no cause of action can arise to the payee against the drawee. Nor is the legal relation between the drawer and the payee altered by a partial acceptance, the contract being in its nature indivisible; much less can any mere promise to pay part at a future time in any way satisfy the payee's claim, or postpone his right to reimbursement of his loss from the drawer. Sheth Kahandas Narandas v Dahyabhai 3 Bom 182.

(5) SUIT ON BILL BY INDORSEE FOR VALUE AGAINST ACCEPTOR.

9—Sale by indorsee of goods against which bill drawn—Acceptor entitled to credit for amount of proceeds of sale.

J consigned goods to defendant, and for the price drew on the defendant two bills of exchange each for the sum of Rs 1,406-4 0. payable thirty days after sight, which were duly accepted by defendant. J indorsed the bills for value to the plaintiffs, who, in default of payment by defendant sold the goods and credited him the amount realized. After giving him credit for the amount, there remained due by the defendant to the plaintiffs, in respect of the said bills, a sum of Rs 1,017. The plaintiffs abandoned Rs 17 of this amount, and sued the defendant for R 1,000 in the Small Cause Court at Bombay. In that suit the defendant pleaded that the goods, in respect of which the bills were drawn, were damaged, and that he had, therefore, refused to accept them as he was entitled to do. The Judge thereupon dismissed the suit on the authority of 6 Bom., O. C., 53, holding that the plaintiffs could not under the circumstances, give the defendant credit for the goods, and that the claim was not, therefore, within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court The plaintiffs then brought the present suit in the High Court upon the bills of exchange, alleging that they held the proceeds of the goods for the consignor. The defendant contended that in no case could the plaintiffs recover from him more than the amount of the bills, less the proceeds of the goods. Held that the defendant was entitled to credit for the net proceeds of the sale of the goods. The plaintiffs had by the sale already realized part of the amount due to them ; and to allow them now to recover from the defendant the whole amount due on the bills would be to permit them to reallze this part of their claim a second time : in that case they would be bound to hand over the amount so realized to the drawers. But the drawers, when they negotiated the bills with the plaintiffs got all they were entitled to, and would have to account, in equity, to the defendant for anything further obtained by them. Held, therefore, that the defendant was exonerated to the amount of the proceeds of the goods, but was liable for the remainder of the sum claimed by the plaintiffs.

On the 29th April 1889, the plaintiff's brother-in-law, E, purchased from the defendant's branch at Mauritius a bill of exchange drawn on their Bank at Bombay payable on demand to the plaintiff's order in Bombay. The bill was on the following terms:—"The New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited, Mauritius, 29th April 1889. On demand pay this first of exchange (second of same tenor and date being unpaid) to the order of Sulleman Hussein six hundred and forty rupees for value received. For the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited. To the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited, Bombay". E sent the bill by registered post to Bombay addressed to the plaintiff. During its transmission it was stolen. On the 18th May it was presented by some person to the defendant's Bank in Bombay bearing a forged endorsement in blank of the plaintiff, and it was paid by the Bank. The plaintiff, as soon as he heard of the loss of the bill, made inquiry at the Bank, and was told that the bill had been paid. On being shown the endorsement, the plaintiff pronounced it to be a forgery, and demanded payment of the bill, which the Bank refused. He thereupon filed this suit against the Bank as drawers of the bill. Held, (1) that the document was an " ambiguous instrument" within the meaning of s. 17 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), and that the plaintiff had elected to treat it as a bill of exchange. (2) That, treating the document as a bill of exhange, the defendants, as drawers, were discharged by the payment to the de facto holder who presented it for payment.

(10) Drawer's right to maintain a suit.

15—Bill of exchange—Failure of acceptor to pay—Suit for compensation—Maintainability by drawer—Plea involving collateral enquiry.

Plaintiffs drew a bill upon a bank, which was accepted by the defendants, for value of certain articles supplied to the defendants, and at the same time, plaintiffs guaranteed to replace defective articles, if any, supplied by them. On the bill being presented for payment, the defendants dishonoured it on the ground that the articles were defective. Plaintiffs sued the defendants upon the bill, without the bill having been assigned to them by the Bank.

(10) Drawer's right to maintain a suit—Concld.

Held, that the plaintiffs being drawers of the bill were parties to the same, and having suffered loss by the failure of the defendants as acceptors to pay the amount of the bill at maturity, were entitled to be compensated by the defendants under S. 32 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

Held, also, the amount due in money in respect of the defective articles supplied cannot be ascertained without collateral enquiry and the defendants cannot therefore raise this plea of failure of consideration in these proceedings, under S. 45 of the Act.

16—Letter of credit—Change of the bill from document against payment to documents against acceptance—Change made without the consent of the drawer—Drawee refusing to pay—Liability of drawer.

The plaintiff purchased a bill of exchange drawn by the defendant on the firm of Schmolze Richman & Co. of London in terms of a letter of credit issued by the latter at the instance of T. Smart & Co. of London. The bill of exchange was accompained by bills of lading and invoice of the consignment and was sent to the plaintiff's office at London. It was marked D. P., i. e, documents to be delivered against payment of the bill. The drawees refused to accept the same, on the ground that the terms of the letter of credit was D A., i e, documents against acceptance.

The plaintiffs, with the consent of the agent T. Smart & Co of London subsequently changed the bill into D. A., which was then accepted by the drawees. The bill fell due on the 13th February 1901, when the drawees having failed in the meanwhile refused payment. The plaintiffs then brought a suit to recover the amount of the bill of exchange from the defendant.

Held, that the common intention of the parties was that the bill should be treated as D. P., and the alteration made in London without the consent and confirmation of defendant made it impossible for the plaintiff to recover. Meaha v. National Bank of India, 5 Bom L R 524.

(11) Invalidity of assent signed on copies of bill.

17—Bills of exchange—Acceptance by drawee—Acceptance taken on copies of bills not a valid acceptance—Bills endorsed over to a drawee in case of need—Holder in due course—The drawer can maintain the suit without disclosing his principal as a holder in due course—Bills accepted need not be dishonoured—and protested—Liability of acceptor at maturity of the bills—Assent not signed on bills but on copies—Assent not valid:—

The plaintiff sued to recover on certain bills drawn on the defendant and endorsed over to the plaintiff, the defendant having failed to pay them. In one of the suits, the acceptance by the defendant was signed upon the original bill, but in others it was merely on copies of the bills. The lower appellate Court threw out the first suit on the ground that the plaintiff was suing as agent for the London firm Francis Times and Co., without disclosing his principals, so that the suits were defective in form, and secondly that the suits were not competent as the bills had never been dishonoured and protested. The remaining suits were dismissed upon the ground that the acceptance was written on copies of the bills. Held, (1) that the bills were endorsed over to the plaintiff by the Bank in whose favour they were drawn, so that he was a holder deriving title from a holder in due course, and as such he was competent to sue under S 53. (2) That bills were made payable in Bombay and consequently, under Ss. 134 and 32 the acceptor became liable at the maturity of the bills. Presentment is not necessary to charge the acceptor. The acceptor was the principal debtor and his liability was independent of presentment. (3) That whereas S. 7 lays down that the acceptance shall be signed either upon the bill or upon one of its parts, the defendant's assent was signed only upon copies of the bill and a material requirement of the law was omitted with the result that there was no valid acceptance.

(13) Liability of indorsee

19.—Forged indorsement—Liability of indorsee—Holder in due course—Act XXVI of 1881, Sections 8, 9, 15, 16.

One M. D. purchased a bill of exchange payable to the order of G, from one N., who had stolen it, and who, representing himself as G., indorsed the bill in G.'s name to M. D, who acted in good faith, believing N.'s representations to be true, and giving value for the bill. M. D. then negotiated the bill, and a person deriving title from him received payment of the sum payable to G.

Held, that there being no indorsement by G, who was the "holder" as defined in Section 8 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, and it being impossible to regard N.'s forgery of G.'s name as an indorsement, N. having no power to indorse, M. D. was not the "indorsee" of the bill and could not be held to be its "holder in due course," and was therefore liable to G. for the value of the bill. Gobinda v Maya Das. P R 28 of 1884.

(14) Necessity of re-endorsement

20.—Bill of exchange endorsed to one party—Dishonour—Re-endorsement to drawer, if a condition necessary to drawer suing the acceptor.

J drew a bill of exchange to his order and S accepted the bill. J endorsed the bill to C. and Co. When the bill was presented for payment, it was dishonoured and duly protested for non-payment. Then C. & Co., debited J's account with the amount of the bill and returned the bill to J without re-endorsing it.

In a suit by J, to recover the amount of the bill from S, the acceptor, objection was taken that, as C. & Co. did not re-endorse it to J, J had no right to sue.

Held, that, even in the absence of a re-endorsement to J, he was entitled to sue the acceptor

The owners of a steamer by their bill of lading stipulated that they would not land specie, but would deliver it on presentation of bills of lading, or carry it on at the consignee's risk, if delivery were not taken during the steamer's stay in port. The steamer arrived in port late on Saturday, and sailed at daybreak on Monday without delivering the specie shipped by the plaintiff, who sued for damages. Held that the Lord's Day Act, 29 Chas. II. ch, 7, did not apply to Moulmein; and that, even if it had done so, it could not prevent the shipowners from availing themselves of the stipulation they had made, and that no action for damages was maintainable against them. Grasemann v. 5—Time-charter—Sub-charter—Bill of lading freight—owner's lien for unpaid money by time-charterers.

By a charter entered into by the owners of SS. Bomby and Issabhoy Thaver and Co., the owners agreed to let and the charterers agreed to hire the ship for six calendar months. The conditions of the charter were, among others, the following:—

(1) In default of the monthly payment of Rs. 18, 000, the owners were entitled to withdraw the steamer from the service of the charterers without prejudice to any claim the owners might otherwise have against them.

(2) The captain, though appointed by the owners, was to be under the orders and directions of the charterers as regards employment, agency or other arrangements. Bills of lading were to be signed at any rate of freight the charterers or their agents might direct without prejudice to that charter.

(3) The charterers were to have the option of sub-letting the steamer.

(4) The owners were to have a lien upon all cargoes for freight or charter money due under the charter. The ship was then sub-chartered to the plaintiff for a round voyage from Saigon to Reunion and back from Mauritius to Bombay. Freight was to be payable for the whole voyage at the rate of Rs. 1-8-0 per bag of 168 lbs. calculated only on the cargo, shipped from Saigon to Reunion. There was to be no freight payable by the sub-charterer to the time-charterers for any other cargo. The steamer completed this voyage and arrived at Bombay having on board a quantity of sugar put on board by the sub-charterer at Mauritius, and for which he had received bills of lading from the captain. The freight was prepaid by the sub-charterer in Mauritius: thus when the ship arrived in Bombay nothing remained to be paid by the sub-charterers to the owners in respect of the bill of lading freight. But something was due from the sub-charterer to the timecharterers, for money payable under the sub-charter. And the time-charterers owned a month's freight to the owners. For the payment of this latter sum, the owners claimed a lien on the sub-charterer's sugar on board SS. Bombay:

Held. (1)t hat under the circumstances the ship owners must be taken to have contracted with the sub-charterer that his sugar should be carried to Bombay in that ship on the terms of the bills of lading

(2) that the bills of lading were not mere receipts for goods given to a charterer already bound to the ship-owner by a charter-party entered into between them and which the captain had no authority to depart from.

(3) that, therefore, unless the fact that the sub-charterer had notice of the time-charter makes a difference, which on the facts here made out, the bills of lading entitled him to have his goods delivered to him on payment of the bills of lading freight.

(4)that the words "without prejudice to this charter" meant that the rights of shipowners against the time-charterers, and vice versa, were to be preserved.

Notice by a shipper of a charter-party has not the effect of incorporating into the bill of lading any terms which are inconsistent with it and which the captain was not bound to embody in the bill of lading. If the charter-party shows that the captain exceeded his authority in signing the bill of lading, and the shipper knew this, he cannot enforce the terms of the bill of lading uncontrolled by the charter-party. If the shipper knew that there was a charter-party, and had an opportunity of reading it, and did not trouble himself about it, he might be treated as knowing its contents.

A right to seize one person's goods for another person's debt must be clearly and distinctly conferred before a Court of Justice can be expected to recognize it.

6—Insufficiency of package—Negligence.—

The defendants by a condition annexed to their bill of lading stipulated that they should not be responsible for "leakage or breakage or other consequences arising from the insufficiency of the address or package." The plaintiff shipped for conveyance from Hong-Kong to Bombay certain goods on board a steamer of the defendants in packages which were proved to be insufficient. These goods in accordance with a condition to that effect contained in the bill of lading, were transhipped at Galle. On their being landed in Bombay, it was found that all the packages were broken, and in a much more damaged condition than is usual in the case of such goods carried from Hong-Kong to Bombay in similar packages. The contents had to a large extent escaped from the packages, but were otherwise uninjured. Held that, under a bill of lading in the above form, the onus of proving that the packages were insufficient and that the injury which they had sustained was the consequence of such insufficiency lay upon the defendants, but that, when the result of the evidence on both sides was to leave it in doubt whether the injury was caused by negligence or was the consequence of the insufficiency of the packages, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. P. & O Steam Navigation Co. v Somaji Vishram. 5 B H C O C 113.

Notes:—Ref: 3 Bom 120.

7—Insufficiency of package—Negligence, Evidence of.—

The defendants carry between Hong-Kong and Bombay. By a condition annexed to their bill of lading they stipulated that they should not be responsible for damage to goods arising from insufficiency of package. The plaintiff shipped certain goods in the defendants' steamer in packages which, though in fact insufficient, were packages of the kind ordinarily used for the conveyance of such goods from Hong-Kong to Bombay. On their being landed in Bombay, it was found that the packages were more or less broken, ond contents injured, and had to a small extent escaped from the packages. In an action brought to recover damages in respect of such injury, it was held that evidence of mercantile usage or of custom would be admissible to show that the words

"insufficiency of package" should not be taken in their ordinary sense, but as meaning insufficient according to a special custom of the China trade. Held, also, that the evidence of those packages being ordinary China packages, and of such packages having always been carried by the defendants without objection, was not sufficient, in the absence of proof of negligence, to fix the defendants with liability for damage done to them, there being no proof that it had been the practice either of the defendants or any other ship-owners protected by a similar clause in their bill of lading to make compensation for injury to goods contained in such packages. P & O. 8—Carriers by sea—Liability for damage to goods.—

Negligence—A steam navigation company was employed by plaintiff to carry cargo from Calcutta to Rangoon and to deliver it into the receiving ship, or to land it at the consignee's expense, their liability ceasing as soon as the goods were free from the ship's tackle. When the ship arrived at port, the consignee not having had his own boats alongside, the goods were put into other boats, one of which, through the negligence of the boatmen, was swamped and the contents damaged. Plaintiff sued for damages. Held that, as defendants were not shown to have neglected the duty of taking reasonable and proper care in the selection of boats, they were not liable for the loss incurred. Bulloch Brothers & Co. v Toay Aung. 24 W R 74.

9—Exemption from damage occasioned by neglect of Company's servants—Suit to recover goods destroyed—Contract Act s. 151—In a bill of lading, of a shipping company in which the plaintiff shipped two plate-glass cases there was a clause to the following effect:—"carried and delivered subject to the conditions after mentioned . . . loss or damage for any act neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot, master or mariners or other servants of the company, etc., excepted" In landing one of the two cases was entirely damaged on account of the negligence of the company's servants, and so the plaintiff sued the defendant company for damage. The defendant company (who were not subject to the Carrier's act) relied on the clause in their bill of lading. Held that the company were protected by their bill of lading, the terms of which had been accepted by the plaintiff. Jellicoe v British India Steam Navigation. Co. 10 Cal 489.

10—Liability of, for negligence damage to goods—Bill of lading—Provision to exemption from liability, effect of.—

The appellant's goods some bags of rice were shipped in Rangoon in a steamer belonging to the defendant company, for delivery to his agents at Tuticorin. On arrival there the goods were landed by the Company's servants during heavy rains and allowed to remain on the foreshore in a wet condition. Consequently the bags became damaged and were destroyed on the orders of the Municipal authorities as being unfit for consumption. Plaintiff sued the company for damages.

The bill of lading ran thus:

The company were not liable as to accidents loss or damage from any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the servants of the company &c. &c. "In all cases and under all circumstances, the liability of the Company shall absolutely cease, when the goods are free of ship's tackle, and, thereupon, the goods shall be, for all purposes and in every respect, at the risk of the shipper or consignee."

Held, per Subrahmania Aiyar, J—The Company, in landing the goods as they did without pre-cautions to prevent damage to them, failed to take the same care of the plaintiff's goods as a prudent person would, in similar circumstances have taken of like goods of his own, and the damage was, therefore, the result of the Company's negligence for which they were liable. The terms of the Bill of lading put an end to the Company's liability as carriers when the goods leave the ship's tackle, but constitutes their subsequent possession, until delivery, as that of bailees. 10 Q B 256. 11—Liability of master—Negligence-Onus probandi—Estoppel.—

The defendant, master of the steamer Scindia, signed a bill of lading, by which he agreed with C & Co. of London to deliver at Calcutta to them or their order four casks brass wire, which were shipped on board the Scindia. The casks were described in the bill of lading as bearing a certain mark, beneath which was the word "Calcutta" as being the port of destination, and they were stated as being carried subject to the following exceptions;—"The ship is not liable for obliteration or absence of marks, numbers, address or description of goods shipped: and expenses and losses by detention of ship or cargo, caused by incorrect marking, or by incomplete or incorrect description of the goods. In case any part of the within goods cannot be found during the ship's stay at the port of destination, they are, when found, to be sent back by first steamer at the ship's risk and expense, and subject to any proved claim for loss of market. The ship shall not be liable for incorrect delivery, unless each package shall have been distinctly marked by the shippers before shipment with the port of destination." The bill of lading was endorsed by C & Co. to the plaintiff a trader in Calcutta, who, on the arrival of the Scindia at that port, applied for delivery of the four casks; and it then appeared that they had been landed at Colombo. In a suit to recover the price of the goods,—Held the defendant was estopped from alleging that the casks were not marked as stated in the bill of lading. It was open, however, to the defendant to prove that the casks did not on their arrival at Colombo bear the word "Calcutta," and thus to bring himself within the clause in the bill of lading exempting the ship from liability for obliteration or absence of marks; but on proof of this, in order to disentitle the plaintiff to succeed, the defendant must show that the absence or obliteration caused the landing at Colombo. It was found on the evidence that he had failed to do this; and a decree was given for the plaintiff.

negligence—Whether the terms are contrary to public policy—Letters Patent Appeal—Whether confined to points differed.

Plaintiffs consigned some bags with the defendant's ship under a Bill of lading to be carried from Rangoon to Tuticorin. On arrival at Tuticorin some 246 bags were destroyed by the Municipal authorities after they had been landed on account of their damaged condition caused by rain. The plaintiffs claimed damages alleging that the damage was occasioned by the negligence of the defendants or their agents.

The Bill of Lading provided that the defendants were not liable for accidents, loss or damage from any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the Pilot, Master, or Mariners or other servants of the defendants. It further provided as a footnote that in all cases and under all circumstances the liability of the company shall absolutely cease when the goods are free of the ship's tackle.

Held, per Chief Justice and Sankaran Nair J, that there was no evidence to show that the bags were ready for delivery by being separated from the rest and if they were, when and on the facts, the defendants were negligent.

Held, per Wallis J, that the action was really in the nature of a claim for failure to deliver in good order and condition and it was for the plaintiffs to prove that the condition of the bags when put at their disposal was such as to justify them in refusing to take delivery and this onus they have failed to discharge.

Held, further per Chief Justice, that the general provision in the body of the Bill of Lading exempting defendants from any liability for any act, neglect or default whatsoever referred only to the neglect or default of the defendants' servants engaged in or connected with the navigation of the ship and after the bags left the ship's tackle, the question of the liability of the defendants must be governed by the special conditions at the foot of the Bill of Lading.

Held, further that if a carrier wishes to exempt himself from liability for the negligence of his servants, he must insert in his contract in one form or another provisions which in express terms exempt him from such liability.

Held, per Wallis J. that the words in the Bill of Lading viz, "that the liability of the Company shall cease when the goods leave the ship's tackle" do not impose upon the defendants liability for the negligence of their servants after the goods leave the ship's tackle, and that the express terms in the body of the Bill protects defendants from all liability.

Held, further per Chief Justice and Wallis J. that in India as in England, a carrier can exempt himself from liability for the negligence of his servants

Held, per Sankaran Nair J. that the question was not concluded by authority in India and that the English Common Law ought not to be followed when it is opposed to the principle followed and acted upon by the Indian Legislature.

Held, further that a contract exempting a shipowner from the consequences of the negligence of himself or his servants in not taking reasonable care or the care referred to in sec. 151 of the Indian Contract Act, is opposed to public policy and is void under sec. 23 of the Indian Contract Act. Validity of the exemption clause, tested by the Indian Contract Act and the reasons of the English rule to the contrary considered and held unsuited to the conditions of India.

Held, further by the Full Bench, that on an appeal from judgment of two Judges of the High Court who have differred in opinion, the appeal is not confined to the point upon which the learned Judges differed and that the whole case is open on appeal. November and duly delivered the sugar in Bombay The sugar however was found to be damaged by water which was due to its having been stowed in immediate proximity to a quantity of wet timber. The plaintiffs sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for the damage so caused. The defendants sheltered themselves under the terms of the exemptive clause in their bill of lading of the 28th November, which clause ran as follows:—"The act of God, the Queen's enemies .....and all the perils, dangers, accidents of the sea, ...and accidents, loss, or damage from any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master or mariners, or other servants of the Company, or from any deviation, excepted." The plaintiffs contended that a bill of lading did not relate to or cover the period of loading, and that, even if it did, the exception relied upon in this bill of lading related only to negligence subsequent to the commencement of the voyage. They also contended that the ship was not a ship "reasonably fit for the voyage" within the meaning of the rule laid down in 3 Ap. Ca, 72. In the Small Cause Court judgment was given in plaintiffs' favour. On appeal to the High Court on the case stated. this judgment was reversed. Held that this was not a case to which the rule laid down in L R 3 Ap Ca 72, applied, as there was no question here of any defect inherent in the ship. It was simply a case of negligent and improper stowage. Held, further, following 7 Bom O C 186, that the reasonable mode of construing the contract evidence by a bill of lading was to hold the exceptions to be coextensive with the liability, and that there was no evidence to be found in this bill of lading of any other intention Held further that the goods were covered by the bill of lading from the time they were put on board to be loaded; consequently, the defendants were protected from liability under the exemptive clause. 2 A and E., 393, and 4 C P D 182, commented on and followed. Hassanbhoy Visram v British India Steam Navigation Company. 13 Bom 571.

14.—Bill of Lading—Liability of Shipping Company.

(4) Construction—Contd.

The obligation of a Shipping Company to deliver goods in good order and condition is subject expressly to the conditions inserted in a Bill of Lading. In a case where a cask of brandy was shipped in good order at Madras, but on arrival at Calcutta was found empty, it was Held that the company was protected by the special words inserted in the bill of lading "Hogshed brandy covered with gunny, not responsible for condition and contents."

Cutler Palmer & Co. v. British India Steam Navigation Co. 25 Cal 654= 2 C W N 423.

15.—Liability for loss—Absence of negligence.

A & Co. at Madras shipped by the B. I S. N. steamer Mahratta a box of coral, to be delivered to their Agent M at Bimlipatam. At the time of shipment they declared the value and paid enhanced freight on account of such value. By the bill of lading the company undertook to deliver the case in good order at Bimlipatam to the consignee M, subject to certain conditions annexed. By one of these conditions, if the consignee did not take delivery when the ship was ready to discharge, the goods might be warehoused at the merchant's risk, and the company's liability was to cease when the goods left the ship's side. The consignee did not take delivery at the ship's side, and the company's agent at Bimlipatam took the case to the Custom House, as he was bound to do by the regulations of the port. If the Superintendent of the Custom House had known that the case contained corals, it would have been placed in an inner room, but the company's agent did not know the contents of the case, and therefore was unable to give any such information to the Superintendent. While the case was lying at the Custom House, application was made on plaintiff's behalf to the Company's agent for delivery of the case upon the usual guarantee. The agent refused to deliver the case without the production of the bill of lading. Afterwards the bill of lading was received from Madras, and the case was delivered up. At some time between its leaving the ship's side and delivery to the consignee, the case was opened and a portion of the contents stolen Held that the defendants were not liable.

16.—Declaration of value and nature of contents.

A was the consignee and holder of a bill of lading signed by B at Bombay, as master of the steam-vessel John Bright, for the safe carriage and delivery of a box addressed to A, which in fact contained diamonds of the value of 11,670, three rubies, and three emeralds, in all of the value of R.15,940. On the face of the bill of lading was printed, "This bill of lading is issued subject to the following conditions." One condition was that a "written declaration of the contents and value of the goods is required by the owner, and must be delivered by the shipper to the owner's agents with the bills of lading. A wrong description of contents or false declaration of value shall release the owner from all responsibility in case of loss, etc., and the goods shall be charged double freight on the real value which freight shall be paid previous to delivery." The declaration in this case was contended in the following letter from the shipper to the agent of the shipowner:—"Dear Sir,—Be good enough to give me an order for a small box containing diamonds to the value of about R.14,000, to be shipped on board the steamer John Bright for Calcutta. Yours, etc." The box was lost by the negligence of B or his servants. In a suit by A to recover "the value of the goods, viz., R,14,000,"—Held, that all the shipowner was entitled to was that the shipper should make a declaration of what bona fide he believed to be the value. The declaration as to contents was not vitiated by the omission to enumerate all the different species of articles contained in the box. Upon the evidence, the declaration as to the value and nature of the contents was bona fide; therefore A was entitled to recover the value of the diamonds lost.

Dhunjeebhoy Byramjee Metha v Betham 2 Ind Jur N S 305.

17.—Leakage—Breakage—Damage caused by leakage from other goods.

Piece-goods were carried from London to Bombay under a bill of lading, the exceptions in which protected the Master from "leakage, breakage, rust, decay, loss, or damage from machinery, boilers , . . misfeasance, error in judgment, negligence of default of . . . persons in the service of the ship . . . and the ship not being liable for any consequences of causes therein excepted, however originating." The piece-goods, on their arrival in Bombay, were found to be damaged by oil and by chafing,—i. e., by rubbing against other goods in the hold,—but there was no evidence to show how such damage was occasioned. Held that the term "leakage" did not include leakage from other goods on to the piece-goods, nor did "breakage" include damage caused by chafing, and that, as no negligence was proved, the master was not protected by the exception "damage from negligence."

Graham v Hille. 10 B H C 60.

18.—Leakage, Damage done by—Provision for place of claim, Effect of, on jurisdiction of Court.

Plaintiff shipped some bales of cloth from Calcutta to Rangoon under a bill of lading by which the defendants were bound to deliver,—accidents, loss or damages from fire, machinery, boilers, steam, and all the accidents of the sea, rivers, land carriage and steam navigation, etc. excepted. On the voyage one of the boilers burst, and steam and water escaping, some of the bales were damaged. Held that the damage was within the exceptions of the bill of lading, and therefore that the defendants were not liable to make good the loss. Quære—Whether, notwithstanding the exceptions in the bill of lading, the defendants might not have been made liable in a suit on the implied warranty if it had been proved as a fact that the boiler was not reasonably fit for the voyage. British India Steam Navigation Co. v Ibrahim Moosum. 8 W R 35.

19.—Exception in bill of lading—Seaworthiness—Suit for damage to goods by leakage while ship in dock.

The plaintiffs' goods were loaded in the defendants' steamer then lying in dock to be carried from Bombay to certain ports in East Africa. At the time of loading, the ship was apparently in a sound and seaworthy condition. Two days after the goods had been put on board, and when the ship was still in dock, it sprung a leak, and the water came into the hold and damaged the plaintiffs' goods. The ship was taken to the dry dock, the cargo was shifted, and the leak repaired. It appeared that the leak had arisen from the fact that one of the plates of the ship had been worn thin in one particular spot, so that, when the cargo was put on board, and the ship lay deeper in the water, the pressure became so great that a hole was made, and the water rushed in. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages. The defendants pleaded (1) that the ship was in a seaworthy condition when the goods were put on board; (2) that they were protected by the bill of lading, which contained the following exception:—viz., "Accident, loss and damage from vermin, barratry, jettison, collision, fire, machinery, boilers, steam and all the perils, dangers and accidents of the sea, rivers, land carriage and steam navigation of whatever nature and kind and accident, loss or damage from any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot, master or mariners or other servants of the Company or from any deviation excepted." Held that the defendants were liable. While the ship was in dock, it was not seaworthy, and the exception in the bill of lading did not limit the implied warranty of seaworthiness. Vithuldas Gober v Bombay and Persia Steam Navigation Co. 19 Bom 639.

20.—Carrier by sea—Bill of Lading—Loss by fire—Liabilities of ship—Owners for goods after being landed.

The Defendants, who were ship-owners under a bill of lading undertook to carry and deliver to the Plaintiffs certain goods, subject, inter alia to the following conditions -Viz, that the defendants should not be liable for loss from the "act of God, the Queen's enemies, restraint of Princes or Rulers, pirates robbers by sea or land,—accidents, loss and damage from vermin, barratry, jettison, collision, fire, machinery &c.," and that the goods were to be taken from the steamer's tackles by the consignees—failing which the steamer's Agents were at liberty to land them at the godowns on arrival at its destination, the vessel went at once alongside the wharf & landed the goods into godowns hired by defendants from the custom House, no opportunity having been afforded to the plaintiffs to take delivery from the ship tackle Shortly after being landed, the goods were destroyed by fire in the godowns, but through no fault of the defendants.

It was proved that the plaintiffs had paid the wharfage and godowns rent.

Held, that the plaintiffs had, by their conduct in so paying the wharfage and godown rent, acquiesced in the goods being placed in the godowns instead of being delivered over the ship's side, and that the defendants were not liable for the loss, the goods having been destroyed by fire while in their hands as wharfingers, and through no fault or neglect on their part.

Chinhong & Co v Sen Moh & Co. 4 Cal 736=3 C L R 585.

21.—Carriers by sea-Bill of Lading construction of—loss by fire-Libilities of ship-owner for goods after being landed.

Goods were shipped in the defendants steamer, under a bill of lading which contained a clause protecting the ship—owners from loss occasioned by fire and a further clause to the effect that the goods "are to be landed from the steamer's tackle by the consignees as fast as the steamer can discharge, failing which, the steamer's agents were to be at liberty to land them into godowns,—the cost of lighterage godown rent &c, thereby incurred to be borne by the respective consignees.

The steamer duly arrived at its destination on the afternoon of the 11th December and at once proceeded to discharge its cargo. It does not appear that notice of arrival was given to the plaintiff, who was the consignee of the goods. On the 12th the plaintiff applied for delivery but was informed that the goods had been landed into the go-downs and delivery could not be given as they were covered up by other cargo. On the evening of the 12th the go downs were burned down and goods destroyed. In a suit by the plaintiff for damages for short delivery, held that the defendants were entitled under the bill of lading for the speedy discharge of the steamer, to land and wharf the goods though not to charge for landing and wharfage unless the plaintiff had an opportunity of landing the goods himself.

22.—Loss by fire before delivery—Exemption from liability.

The defendant received goods on board his steamer under a bill of lading which exempted him from liability for loss occasioned "by the act of God, the Queen's enemies, fire, and all and every other dangers and accidents of the seas, rivers, and navigation of what-soever kind or nature," and lawfully landed them on the 23.—Delivery in dock—"Landing or cranage charges" —Practice of dock to recover from consignee—Liability of ship-owner.

Certain boilers consigned to the plaintiff in Bombay were shipped at Liverpool in two steamers belonging to the same owners, under two bills of lading in these terms "Shipped in good order and condition, etc., to be delivered, subject to the exceptions and conditions hereinafter mentioned, in the like good order and condition, from the ship's tackles (where the ship's responsibility shall cease) at the aforesaid port of Bombay,'. etc. One of the exceptions and conditions above referred to was as follows:—"The ship-owner shall have the option of discharging in dock, and of making delivery of the goods under the bills of lading either over the ship's side or from lighters, or a store-ship, or custom-house, or warehouse, at merchant's risk." Freight was prepaid in Liverpool. On their arrival at Bombay, the two steamers went into the Prince's Dock belonging to the Port Trust, and discharged the boilers, by means of the Port Trust cranes, on to the dock wharves. The plaintiff subsequently sent to remove the boilers, but was not allowed by the dock authorities to do so until he had paid to them various sums, amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 930, on account, as stated in the bill furnished him by the Port Trust, of "landing charges" for the said boilers. The bills also contained certain additional charges for "wharfage." These the plaintiff was ready to pay, but the "landing charges" he paid only under protest, and in order to get possession of his goods, and now sought to recover the same from the defendants, who represented the ship-owners. It was the practice of the Port Trust to recover

these charges in all cases from the consignees of goods discharged in their dock, and the charge was said to be levied on all goods landed on the wharves of the dock, whether by the dock's cranes or by the ship's own tackles. The charge was incurred the moment the goods touched the wharf. In their rates, sanctioned by Government, which by their Act the Port Trust were entitled to charge, this charge was called, not a "landing charge," but a "dock and cranage" charge. Had the plaintiff been given delivery of these goods in the stream, and afterwards himself landed them at any wharf belonging to the Port Trust in the Port of Bombay, the Port Trust would have sought to have made the same charge for allowing the goods to be landed, whether that was done by their appliances or not. Held that the ship-owner, and not the consignee, was bound to pay these charges, they being in reality charges for work and labour done in and about the landing of the goods—an operation which, under the bills of lading was within the duty of the ship-owner. Per Latham, J.—The ship having elected to discharge in the dock, it was her duty to land the goods on the wharf. Every charge which had to be incurred before that could be done was a charge antecedent to delivery, and one, therefore, which must be paid by the ship-owner. Scott v. Finlay. 7 Bom 386.

24—"Weight, contents, and value unknown" —Act IX of 1856, s. 3—Assignee of bill of lading for value.

A bill of lading purporting to be for 50 tons of coals and containing a printed clause, "weight, contents, and value unknown," and similar words written above the signature of the master, does not amount to an admission by the master that he has received 50 tons of coal on board. Upon the true construction of the Bills of Lading Act (IX of 1856), s. 3, a bill of lading in the above form is not, in the hands of a consignee for value, conclusive evidence against the master of the shipment of 50 tons. Nicol & Co v Castle. 9 B H C 321.

K V at Moulmein consigned to the plaintiff at Bompay 135 logs of teak timber shipped on board the defendant's ship. The bill of lading, which was signed by the defendant,described the logs as marked K V and measuring tons 115-12 -10 and it provided for the payment of freight thereon at Bombay, at the rate of Rs 17 per ton of 0 cubic feet on right delivery. The last clause of the bill of lading was in the handwriting of the defendant,and was as follows:—"Marks, number, quantity and measurement unkown; all other conditions as per charter party." The charter party was expressed to be between the owners of the ship and Messrs. B of Rangoon as charterers of the whole ship, and provided for the payment of freight " at the rate of Rs 18 per ton of 50 cubic feet for all timber,one rate throughout except 100 tons broken stowage at half freight, by intake measurement." On arrival of the ship at Bombay the plaintiff, as consignee of the timber and holder of the bill of lading, paid the defendant (the captain of the ship) Rs 1500 on account of freight and took delivery of the 135 logs. On measuring them he found that, according to his method of measurement, the total measurment of the 135 logs came only to tons 58-27-11-6 and not tons 115-12-10 as mentioned in the bill of lading. He claimed, therefore, to be chargeable with freight only on smaller quantity (viz Rs 995-8) and to recover from the defendant the difference (viz Rs 504-8) between that sum and Rs. I 500 paid on account as for an overpayment of freight. It was proved that all the timber on board had been measured at Moulmein by an employee of the charterers acting apparently as agent of all the different shippers, and that the measurements in the bills of lading were supplied by this person to the defendant as the measurements of the different consignments. It was also proved that the 135 logs received and measured by the plaintiff in Bombay were the same logs that were shipped under the bill of lading, and that the plaintiffs measurement of them was correct according to the mode of measurement which he adopted. There was no evidence as to what was the mode of measurement followed at Moulmein, nor, except the statements in the bill of lading as to what was the actual intake measurement of the timber there. Held, that the effect of the last clause in the bill of lading was to incorporate into that document the cause of the charter-party which provided that freight should be payable on the intake measurement; that the burden of proving what the intake measurement actually was lay upon the plaintiff, who sought to recover back money which he alleged, he had paid in excess of what was due; and that, in the absence of such evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, the statement of quantity contained in the bill of lading was prima facie evidence of the intake measurement of the timber. Cursetji Rustomji Setna v Williams.

26—Freight, Payment of-Lien of ship-owner.

Where a bill of lading dated at the port of shipment,contains the words "freight for the said goods being paid here" it operates as a receipt for the freight The ship-owner is not bound to deliver the same to the shipper until payment of the sum to be charged for the carriage of the goods;but such sum is not freight, and the shipowner has no lien for the amount upon the goods,nor the bill of lading which represents them. Soomar Jaffer v. Abdool Kurreem. 1 Ind Jur N S 230.

27– Freight, Lien for on cargo—Advances on account of freight—Master's lien for freight-Charter-party.

By a charter-party made in London, the ship W was chartered to carry a cargo from Liverpool to Calcutta where she was to load from the factors of the charterer a full homeward cargo to be carried by her to Europe. Freight for the whole round, out and home, was made payable on safe delivery of the homeward cargo, but at so much per ton of the outward cargo delivered in Calcutta. The master was to have a lien on the cargo for freight etc, cash not exceeding £800 was to be advanced to the ship in Calcutta on account of freight, but subject to insurance, and £600 was to be advanced by the charterer's acceptance at three months, or in cash under discount,at charterer's option,on the sailing of the vessel from Liverpool,less five per cent for insurance. The charterer himself loaded the ship,and the master signed a bill of lading which declared the cargo to be shipped by the charterer to be delivered at Calcutta, as the agents of the charterer might direct, unto order or to his assigns, freight to be paid as per charter party. In the margin of the bill was written "Received in advance of the within freight £600 as per charter party. " The £600 had been paid,not in cash, but by the charterer's bill at three months. The charterer became bankrupt and the bill was dishonoured,and the fact of the bankruptcy and dishonour was known in Calcutta when the ship arrived there. On the ship's arrival in Calcutta J O & Co, who were the holders for value of the bill of lading, demanded delivery of the cargo. The master claimed a right of lien and refused to deliver unless, J O & Co, would pay the £600 bill which had been dishonoured, and would further advance, £800 for the ship's use and load a homeward cargo, according to the terms of the charter party. Held that J O & Co took the bill of lading with notice of the charter party, but that, under the circumstances, the master had no lien, and was bound to deliver the cargo to J O & Co. Ogle v Nashholm. Bourke O C 171.

28.—Freight, Lien for. on cargo-Advances on account of right—Lien of owners.

Goods were shipped deliverable to the order of the shippers or their assigns. The bill of lading stated that " freight for said goods was to be paid as per charter party, with average accustomed, reserving lien in full on cargo for full amount as stipulated therein."The charter party showed "that H & Co undertook to supply a full cargo for the ship,and that R H, agent for the ship,agreed with H & Co that the said ship should proceed to London dock, or any other suitable dock, for loading salt at party's option, or so near thereto as she can safely get,to be at all times afloat and in safety, and then load for the charterer's agent a full and complete cargo of salt, not exceeding what the master considers sufficient cargo which the charterers engage to ship,not exceeding what she can reasonably carry with her stores,provisions and furniture, and being so loaded shall therewith proceed to Calcutta, or so near thereto as she may safely get, and there deliver as per bills of lading, and on being paid freight at the rate of twenty three shillngs per ton. " The freight to be paid thus: "£500 by charterer's acceptance at two months on sailing less 2½ per cent insurance; or cash on sailing less 5 per cent interest and insurance,at charterer's option and the balance in cash on delivery as master requires,at current rate of exchange;2 percent, commission to charterers in lieu of consigment". Held that "a sum of money payable before the arrival of the ship at her port of discharge, and payable by the shippers of the goods at the port of shipment, is not freight in the strict legal acceptation of the term, with all the incidents of freight in giving the ship-owner the right of lien, unless it is stipulated for." Here the owners had a lien upon the goods for freight, notwithstanding that the bill of exchange for £500 had been given.

Thomas v Ogle Bourke A O C 100.

29—Freigt, Lien for, on cargo—Advances on account of freight—Dishonour of bills.

The captain of a ship has no lien on the cargo in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated, to be advanced, and advanced by bills afterwards dishonoured, nor in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated to be advanced at the port of discharge. A lien cannot arise in any case when the master has not a right to retain the goods till the freight is paid. Such advances are not freight, but advances to be made under discount, and upon the security of the captain's bill on the freighter. The master has no lien at law or in equity in respect of breaches of covenants, in the charter-party, other than those relating to the payment of freight for goods actually carried. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company v Small Bourke O C 309.

30—Claim for short delivery-Place for preferring claim—Condition precedent.

Where a bill of lading contained a clause to the follwing effect:—" Any claim for short delivery or damage done to goods,and all other claims whatsoever, to be made at the port of Calcutta, and at no other port, and the goods are shipped and this bill of lading granted subject to this express condition," it was held by the Recorder of Rangoon to operate so as to make the preferring of a claim in Calcutta a condition precedent to a suit in this Court. Held by the High Court that this opinion was correct, and that a suit for short delivery under the bill of lading could not be maintained without a claim being made in Clacutta. Mahomed Ishmailjee Nada v British India Steam Navigation Company 9 W R 396.

31—Short delivery of goods—No evidence as to how goods were lost—Burden of proof—" Or otherwise," meaning of.

on board the defendants' steam-ship Java for carriage to Zanzibar On arrival of the Java at Zanzibar, the goods were landed by the defendant company and placed in the customs godown, where the plaintiff in due course demanded delivery. Some of the bags were not forthcoming, but the evidence did not show how the loss had occurred. The bill of lading contained the following condition:—"The company's liability shall cease as soon as the packages are free of the ship's tackle, after which they shall not be responsible for any loss or damage, however caused. If stored in receiving ship. godown or upon any wharf, all risks of fire, dacoity, vermin or otherwise shall be with the merchant, and the usual charges shall be paid before delivery of the goods. Fire insurance will be covered by the company's agents on application." In a suit brought by the plaintiff for short delivery of goods,-Held that the defendants were liable. They did not show how the loss occurred, and as it might have occurred from causes not covered by the exception (e. g., from misdelivery),they did not bring themselves within the protecion afforded by the exemption. The general words " or otherwise " contained in the tenth clause of the bill of lading could not be read so as to cover all possible losses for that would make them include wilful misconduct on the part of the defendant's servants and general words are not read with such an extended meaning. Nor would they include misdelivery, for that was provided for in the eighth clause.

32—Claim for short delivery—Place for preferring claim.

A bill of lading contained a provision that any claim for short delivery or for damage done to goods should be made at the port of Calcutta, and not elsewhere. Held that this clause did not affect the plaintiff's right of suit in the Court at Rangoon, and that, if the defendants meant to object that no claim had been made in Calcutta before the commencement of the suit, they should have done so in proper time, viz.,in their written statement. An objection on that ground taken for the first time at the hearing of the appeal was disallowed. British India Steam Navigation Co. v Ibrahim Moosum 8 W R 35.

33—Claim for short delivery to be made at a certain place within a certain time—Reasonable condition—Common carrier, Liability of-Carriers Act, 111 of 1865.

A stipulation by persons carrying on extensive business as carriers that they should be apprised of claims made on them for default on the part of their servants, at a specified place and no other, and within a time which will render enquiry likely to be attended with some result, is not unreasonable. The defendants were owners of a fleet of steam-ships plying periodically along the coast of British India, by which they undertook to convey for freight parcels of goods for all persons indifferently from and to specified ports. They stipulated in their bills of lading that claims for short delivery should be made at the port of Calcutta only, within one month after delivery of any portion of the goods entered in the bill of lading. Held,in a suit against defendants for compensation for value of goods short delivered, that this was not an unreasonable stipulation, and that a claim made on the agents of the defendants who were authorized only to retain the goods, receive freight, and give delivery, was not a sufficient compliance with the condition. Held, also, that defendants were common carriers, though not for the purposes of the Indian Carriers Act, and that their character of carriers continued so long as the goods remained in their hands and undelivered. British India Steam Navigation Company v Hajee Mahomed Essack & Co. 3 Mad 107.

On the 18th July 1901, the defendants, at plaintiff's request, wrote to their Jeddah agent for the 35 cases,and handed up the letter to plaintiff for being forwarded to Jeddah. 35—Delivery of goods to consignee—Cargo unclaimed on arrival of ship—Rights of ship-owner to land goods—Damages by rain—Madras Harbour Trust Act (Madras Act II of 1886).

The defendant's steam-ship arrived at Madras on 4th December 1891, bringing bags of grain consigned to the plaintiffs under a bill of lading by which the defendants were to have the option of delivering the goods into a receiving ship or landing them at consignee's risk and expense, and their liability was to cease when the goods were free of the ship's tackle. The plaintiffs, on the date of the arrival of the goods were not authorized to receive them. The plaintiffs set up a custom that cargo of this description ought to be landed on the beach; but as this could not be done in the absence of the consignees, the defendants landed it the same day on the pier and delivered it into the custody of the Madras Harbour Trust for storage, pending delivery to the consignees. On the 8th of December 1891, heavy rain fell, and on the same date plaintiffs learnt that the cargo had been delivered on the pier. When the plaintiffs came to take delivery on that day, a considerable portion had been damaged by rain, for which they now sued the defendants. Held (1) that where the consignees were unable to take delivery in the ordinary way on the beach, the master of a ship has the option of landing and warehousing the goods, and that delivery to the Harbour Trust for custody was not wrongful; (2) that in the absence of proof that the defendants were negligent, or that they failed to deliver the goods, the suit must be dismissed. British India Steam Navigation Company v. Ibrahim Sulaiman 19 Mad 169.

36.—'Or otherwise' cannot include wilful misconduct.

When a company was sued for non-delivery and the defence pleaded non-liability justified by the words "or otherwise" in the bill of lading which provided "all risks of fire, dacoity, vermin or otherwise shall be with the merchant" held that the words "or otherwise" do not include all possible losses; that they do not include wilful misconduct on the company's part nor do they include misdelivery. E. I. S. N. Co. Ld. v. Ratansi. 1896 P J 272.

37—Bill of Lading—Stipulation relieving ship-owner from liability as soon as goods free of ship's tackle and before delivery, if enforceable—"Landing agents" at Penang, how far agents of ship-owners—Loss of goods after delivery to landing agent but before delivery to consignee.

Where the bill of lading provided that "in all cases and under all circumstances the liability of the ship-owner shall absolutely cease when the goods are free of the ship's tackle, and thereupon the goods shall be at the risk for all purposes and in every respect of the shipper or consignee," and the goods were delivered overside into lighters and taken to the wharf and kept by a "landing agent," and then disposed of without the production of a bill of lading or a delivery order in fraud of the persons entitled.

Held.—That there was no reason why the clause providing for cessor of liability of the ship-owner on the goods being free of the ship's tackle should not be held operative and effectual although they might have been lost before delivery to the persons entitled. The stipulation was one which the parties were perfectly free to make, unembarrassed by any implied condition or any original underlying obligation, such as exists when a ship-owner seeks to relieve himself of liability to the shipper in case his vessel should be found to have been unseaworthy.

The position of the "landing agents," at the port of Penang indicated.

Semble.—They are intermediaries owing duty to both parties—agents of the ship-owners, as long as the contract of affreightment remains unexhausted, agents for the consignees as soon as the bill of lading is produced with delivery order 38—Bill of Lading—Interpretation—" Not responsible for marks'—Effect and meaning—Endorsement in blank—Negotiability—Bill of Lading Act—Object of—Whether affects other rights.

Held, that, by endorsing the bill of Lading in blank, it becomes a negotiable instrument, and it could pass from hand to hand by mere delivery, so as to affect the property in the goods and that the plaintiff who obtained delivery of the Bill accompanied by an endorsement became the owner of the goods and was entitled to sue.

Held, also, as owner of the goods, the plaintiff had open to him, under the common law, all the several forms of suit in tort. He could sue the Port Trust in "detinue" for wrongfully retaining the possession of the goods or for "conversion" if they had given to any other consignee.

The Bill of Lading Act was intended to meet the case where the goods in respect of which Bill of Lading purport to be signed, have not been laden on board, and does not affect the rights such as those of the plaintiff.

Held, also, that the object of inserting the proviso " not responsible for marks" is to prevent the Bill of Lading having its ordinary effect of being evidence against the ship that goods marked as stated in the body of the bill were actually shipped, and it lies on the plaintiff to prove that the goods bearing his mark were actually committed to the custody of the Port Trust or were delivered to some other consignee.

1.—Succession—Religious institution—Head of Chelas, right of, to succeed—Mahant—Alteration of succession—Ascetic.

The right of succession to the property left by the deceased head of a religious institution depends upon custom and practice which must be proved by evidence in each case. A Chela is primarily entitled to succeed a Mahant of the Sanyasi sect who has to follow a life of celebacy; but where there are more Chelas than one, custom and practice intervene. An ascetic is a mere life tenant and cannot alter the succession to the trust by an act of his own in connection with the status under which he originally acquired the trust. One J who was the Mahanth of a religious institution initiated A who had been his Chela and nominated and installed him as his successor. A after succeeding to the Mahantship executed an ekrarnama in favour of the Mahant of Mirzapur giving him the right of naming or appointing his own successor. Held, that the mode of appointment by a Mahanth of a successor from out of his chelas was well known, and the manner of A's own appointment to the guddi indicated that such was the custom and practice of the Barhampore-Paita Asthal; that A had no power to ignore this custom and practice and give away the right of appointment to the Mahanth of Mirzapur. That consequently the ekrarnama was ultra vires as an exercise of A's right of electing his own successor. Mahanth Ramji Dass v Lachhu Dass, 7 C W N 145.

Held. by the Chief Justice;—

As a notice has not been produced, the maximum Omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta applied and that the fact that a notice was not signed by the adjacent landholders did not per se render the grant by the Tahsildar invalid and that the grant by the Tahsildar was therefore binding on the Crown.

Held, by Benson J.—

That the Pattah being in the nature of a mere bill and not of a grant or conveyance the issue of a pattah has not the effect of confirming the conditional grant by the Tahsildar which appeals under rule 13 were still pending; and it is not open to Civil Courts to discuss the sufficiency or otherwise of the grounds on which the Darkhast authorities whether original or appellate-grant or refuse to grant Government lands to parties applying for them so long as these authorities act within the scope of the authority conferred on them by the Rules as to do so would be an assumption of the appellate jurisdiction by the Civil Court instead of the Revenue authority in whom it vests under the rules. 26 Mad 268; 18 Mad434; 26 Mad 742; 12 Mad 464; 19 Mad 324; 1 M I A 305; 6 Mad 303 ref. Muthu Veera Vandayan v. made out "a prima facie case of fraud, or at any rate of irregularities which prevented the Petitioner from obtaining knowledge of the proceedings against him, and caused the sale of his estate at a most inadequate price," Held—That the power of revision conferred on the commissioner by sec. 17 of Act VII of 1880, B. C., was amply sufficient to justify the order setting aside the sale. The Board of Revenue also had power to interfere in this case under sec 24 of the Act. Sec. 17 of Act VII of 1880, B C., applied to orders made after as well as before sales in execution of certificates issued under the Act. The periods of limitation applicable in ordinary cases were not binding on the Commissioner when he was acting in exercise of his revisional jurisdiction. It is an elementary principle which is binding on all persons who exercise judicial or quasi-judicial powers that an order should not be made against a man's interest without there being given him an opportunity of being heard. The defendant No. 2 who was appointed the new Shet Sanadi was remunerated from the extra assessment levied upon the Shet Sanadi lands. In 1905, the Government resumed the lands and handed them over to the defendant No. 2. Held (1) that the order passed and the action taken, under the rule by the Government, had in law the effect of converting the lands from a Shet Sanadi Vatan into a ryotwari holding and investing the holder of the land with the rights of an ordinary occupant entitled to it so long as he paid the survey assessment. (2) That the defendant No. 2 had held the office of Shet Sanadi independently of the lands in dispute; and all that was done in 1865 was his remuneration for that service in a way increased and the enhanced amount was made payable, not from the lands in dispute, but out of the assessment payable to Government by the occupant. (3) That that was an arrangement between defendant No. 2 and Government which could not prejudice the rights of the proceedings adopted by the Collector in 1905 were on the supposition that what was done in 1865 had the effect of continuing the land in dispute as one reserved for Shet Sanadi service but that was not its effect and the proceedings in question were ultra vires of the Collector. Yellappa Ranappa Kuri v Marengappa Chareadappa. 5—S. 53—Principle to be applied to case under the Act—Mens rea——Master's liability for servant's defaults.

Bombay Acts (Abkari Act V of 1878) S. 53-Concld.

The principle with regard to Abkari Act, 1878, is that licenses to keep shops are only granted to persons of good personal character, and it is obvious that the object of so restricting the grant of licenses would be defeated if the licensed person could. by delegating the control and management of the house to another person who was altogether unfit to keep it, free himself from responsibilty for the manner in which the shop was conducted.

Mens rea is not required where the acts prohibited by a statute are not criminal in any sense but are prohibited in the public interest under a penalty. This principle is substantially adopted in S. 53 of the Abkari Act with this exception, that it is open to the license holder, according to the section, to prove facts to show that he is not liable for his servant's defaults or acts.

2.—Dismemberment of bhag—Narva-Bhag-Alienation previous to Bombay Act V of 1862.

The principal object of Bombay Act V of 1862 is to prevent the further dismemberment of bhags or shares in bhagdari villages: it renders null and void any future alienation of any portion of a bhag other than a recognized subdivision, but it does not invalidate previous alienations A sale of a portion of a bhag, previously to the passing of Bombay Act V of 1862 amounts to a dismemberment of the bhag and what remains in the bhagdar's hands continues to be a complete bhag, while the portion separated from it becomes a new bhag. Bhai Shanker v Collector of Kaira. 5 Bom 77.

On the 30th September 1880 the Collector applied to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground that it was illegal under Bombay Act V of 1862. It appeared that the Collector did not know till November 1877 that the land sold was an unrecognized portion of the bhag, and not the whole of it. Held that the sale might be set aside under the provisions of s 2 of Act V of 1862, notwithstanding its confirmation and the subsequent delivery of possession. Quære—Whether any provision of limitation applied to such application under the Bhagdari Act? Collector of Broach v Rajaram Laldas 7 Bom 542.

In 1878 plaintiff purchased the whole bhag from the aforesaid three brothers and the widow of the fourth, and in 1883 brought this suit to obtain possession of the whole. Held that the suit was maintainable, as s 2 of Bombay Act V of 1862 contains no provision barring the right of any person prejudicially affected by an illegal sale from suing to set it aside. Held further that the sale of an unascertained bhag is not illegal under s. 1 of the Act, and the defendant having obtained peaceable posssession of the whole bhag, could not be evicted by plaintiff as purchaser of the whole bhag. Bai Kuvarbai v Bhagwan Ichharam P J (1888) 115=13 Bom 203.

1 The City of Bombay Improvement Trust —Acquisition of the property—Amount of compensation—Scheme of development—Rent capitalized at a given number of years purchase—Allowance for the risk attendant upon the scheme of development

In fixing the valuation of a property acquired by the City of Bombay Improvement Trust, the tribunal of appeal devided it into two categories, the one of which was regarded as fully developed and was valued at 16½ years purchase while the other that is the position lying at the back was taken as capable of further development, and was estimated at 16 years purchase The Scheme of development that was accepted provided for the erection of 4 blocks of chawls running practically at right angles to the front premises, and according to the scheme these chawls were to have three upper floors and the ground floor was to be used for godown With regard to this, in appeal to the High Court, the parties limited their contentions to three points (1) Whether the Tribunal ought to have allowed four upper floors to the hypothetical chawls thereon, (2) whether the Tribunal was wrong in allowing 16½ and 16 years purchase, and (3) whether sufficient allowance was made by the Tribunal for the risk attendant upon a scheme of development such as that adopted by it as the basis of its award:

Held (1) that, it could not be said that a scheme of development involving four upper floors was so obvious that it would enter into the calculations of an intending purchaser and influence his offer; and that there were no materials that would justify the High Courts upholding the contention that, contrary to the Tribunal's conclusion four upper floors should be allowed.

(2) That the amount of purchase fixed by the Tribunal was fair and reasonable; for the difference between the 16½ years purchase for the front and 16 years purchase for the back was due to the allowance of a 2 years' rental as a reward for enterprise and a compensation for risks, the purchase having been treated as a 6 per cent. investment,

2.—City Improvement Trusts Act—Tribunal created by no Court—Provincial Legislature, power of, to create new courts or to confer jurisdiction on High Court.

The tribunal of appeal constituted by the city of Bombay Improvement Act 1898 is not a Court of justice. The High Court of Bombay has no appellate or revisional jurisdiction over the decision of the Tribunal of Appeal, except the qualified appellate jurisdiction provided by the Act itself.

The notice of suit prescribed by s 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, is necessary even when the remedy sought in the action is only an injunction.

The Court has jurisdiction to grant an ex parte injunction; but in exercising the discretion the greatest care should be exercised.

The tribunal created by Bombay Act IV of 1895 is not a court, but a body free from the control and superintendence of the High Court except so far as its intervention by way of appeal might be sanctioned by its president. Quære:—Whether the creation of a court is an unauthorized invansion of the Crown's prerogative or whether the creation of a new court within the limits of the Presidency is within the 3—Acquisition of land with buildings thereon—Amount of compensation—Principles upon which the amount to be fixed—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), S 561—Cross-objections.

Section 48 (11) of the City of Bombay Improvement Act, does not provide for leave to appeal being granted to any individual, but for a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal that is the whole case and not any particular part of it. The consequence of the grant of this certificate is that there shall be an appeal to the High Court from the award, or any part of the award and this must mean that there shall be a right of appeal, or to use the language of the Civil Procedure Code, that an appeal will lie to the High Court. And the respondent is entitled to object to the award in the manner provided by s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code.

In calculating the amount of compensation to be awarded upon acquisition of lands, with buildings thereon, by the City of Bombay Improvement Trust, the rental should be the basis of calculation, so that after arriving at the net rental, what has to be ascertained is the rate of return investors in this class of property expect; for that serves to determine the number of years purchase it is proper to allow, after giving due weight to any special conditions that may affect the property advantageously or otherwise.

As to the contention that the property was at the date of the declaration capable of fetching a higher rental which was apparent from the fact that the rents of their property had been steadily rising for 16 years previous to 1899.

Held, that though for the purpose of this inquiry it was legitimate to have regard to the passed history of the rental, it could not be taken for granted that enhancement would continue possible for ever, and still less that there was such a certainty of this as to make it a basis for fixing a higher purchase price.

As to the contention, that in arriving at the valuation the tribunal of Appeal following the Collector, had deducted 4 per cent in respect of water-tax, whereas the water supply to the premises was measured by meter and the average payment for water was Rs. 16 per annum:

Held, that the Tribunal was right in deducting 4 per cent, for water-tax from the rental.

The Collector allowed 20 years purchase as the value of the property. On appeal, the Tribunal took an average of the instances adduced before them and allowed the claimants 21-50 years purchase:

Held, that the striking of an average as done by the Tribunal might be a crude method of calculation; but it could not, on evidence be said that the claimants had been awarded too little.

4.—Tribunal of appeal—Jurisdiction to apportion compensation money among several claimants—Questions of title among claimants can also be decided.

The tribunal of Appeal constituted under the provisions of the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, has the power to deal with and decide questions relating to the apportionment of the moneys payable as compensation. It has also the power to go into and decide the question of title raised by the claimants inter se.

5.—Land acquisition—Market value of land-City of Bombay Improvement Act (Bombay Act IV of 1898), S. 49 (2)—Consolidation of references.

The Government of Bombay, acting on behalf of the Trustees under the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, acquired a piece, consisting of nine parcels of land, belonging to J. The land was such that the whole piece consisting of the nine parcels formed in itself a valuable quarry. At the date of the notification, issued under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, J was in unencumbered ownership of only one of the parcels the remaining ones being let on permanent leases as building sites. Between the dates of notification and acquisition, J bought out the interest of the tenant of one more parcel. The Collector dealt separately with the nine parcels, assessed the value of the plots on a rental basis and refused J's claim to receive compensation on a quarrying basis. At J's instance all the nine cases were referred to the Tribunal of Appeal. After the Collector had made his award and before the references came on for hearing, J bought out all the remaining tenants. At the hearing before the Tribunal of Appeal, J applied successfully that the references should be consolidated and that his claim for compensation on a quarrying basis should be allowed. On appeal by the Trustees:—

Held, (1) that the consideration was rightly allowed;

(2) that the land here had an adaptability value on the footing of its possibility as a quarry, but it was not a realised possibility, nor was it competent to J to convert it into a realised possibility by the expedient of buying out the permanent tenants after the Collector's award: that therefore, the land could not be assessed on a quarryable basis;

(3) That J was only entitled to the market value of the land in its existing character, plus a special allowance for its adaptability as a quarry at some future date.

Per Batchelor J.—The method contemplated by the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is to ascertain first the market value of the land on the footing that all separate interests combined to self; and, then, to apportion or distribute the sum among the various persons found to be interested, (1908) 10 Bom L R 657 foll.

The market value of the land under acquisition has to be ascertained on the assumption that all separate interests combine, that is, the separate interests are taken to combine so as to give complete title to the assumed purchaser and the acquiring body not so as to impress upon the land a character which it did not bear, or to give to it a value which it never had in the market

The 'market value of the land means the price which would be obtainable in the market for that concrete parcel of land with its particular advantages and its particular drawbacks both advantages and drawbacks being estimated, rather with reference to commercial value than with reference to any abstract legal rights

Per Heaton J.—In ascertaining compensation under the Land Acquisition Act 1894 the market value of the land to be acquired must be computed as a whole The City should estimate its value by what it would have fetched in the market at the date of the acquisition it should not give to the owner what it considers the land to be worth to the acquirer after acquisition

Taking the scope of the Land Acquisition Act 1894, and its words it seems that neither the method of ascertaining compensation by valuing separately each interest in the land nor the method of valuing the land as a whole and then apportioning to each person interested the share to which he is entitled, is excluded what is intended is a fair and reasonable estimate of the compensation to be awarded and this is to be arrived at by taking into consideration certain specified matters and excluding from consideration others The Act leaves a great deal to the discretion of the Collector and the Court and among st the other matters it leaves it to their discretion to ascertain the market value of the land by either of the two methods The Trustees for the Improvement of the City of Bombay v Jalbhoy Ardeshir Sett 11 Bom L R 674 33 Bom 483

1—S 8—Assessment—Specific limit Superior holder—Collector—Enhancement of assessment

A piece of land consisting of three plots was acquired by the Trustees of the Free Church of Scotland Mission from the Government. Of these, one plot of land was conveyed to the Mission Trustees "their heirs and assigns for ever" subject no doubt to a right of resumption but without any mention of assessment the other two plots of land were also conveyed to the Mission Trustees their heirs executors administrators and assigns for ever but in this case it was expressed to be 'subject to the payment of all taxes rates charges assessments leviable or payable in respect of the premises or anything for the time being thereon

On the 20th December 1867 an indenture was executed by the Secretary of State for India, as representing the Government, to the Mission Trustees It was thereby recited that the trustees, with the approval of Government, had resolved to sell the pieces of land and that the Government with a view to facilitating the sale had agreed to grant to the trustees all their revision and estate in the premises and that the trustees had agreed with Janardhan for the absolute sale to him of the pieces of land By the operative part of the same the Government granted all their revision and estate in the pieces of land to the trustees, their heirs & but subject to the payment of taxes rates charges, &c in respect of the premises

On the 16th January 1898 these lands were conveyed in purchase to Janardhan The parties to the conveyance were the Mission Trustees, the Secretary of State and Janardhan The deed recited that the Mission Trustees had entered into an agreement with Janardhan for the absolute sale of the pieces of land, and that the Trustee with the knowledge and consent of Government conveyed the same to Janardhan subject to the payment of all rates taxes, &c

Prior to the completion of the purchase Janardhan sought information as to what assessments were leviable in respect of the premises, when he was told by the Collector that the land would be assessed at the rate of nine pies per square yard no hint was given at the time that there would be a right to enhance the assessment in future

In 1903 the property became vested, under a partition in the plaintiff Janardhan's son Up to 1899 the fixed assessment of nine pies per square yard was paid and accepted

On the 24th August 1899, the Collector without making any inquiry of Janardhan as to the circumstances under which the property was acquired from Government, increased the assessment to nine times its original amount

On the 26th September 1899 the plaintiff having regard to the terms of the Bombay City Land Revenue Act (Bom Act II of 1876) commenced the present suit for a declaration that he had a right in limitation of the right of Government to hold these lands for ever on the payment of the fixed assessment and that Government had no right to enhance the same.

On the 6th January 1900, a Resolution of Government was published ratifying what the Collector had done

Held, (1) that, under the circumstances of the case, a specific limit of nine pies per square yard per annum was established within the meaning of section 8 of the Bombay City Land Revenue Act and that the Government was bound to it, whether it be put on the ground of collateral contract or of estoppel.

(2) that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to the declaration sought

The phrase "settlement of assessment" in s 9 of the Bombay City Land Revenue Act, 1876 does not by itself imply the necessity of prior notice to the superior holder before the assessment is enhanced The pharse means no more than that when the settlement is fixed the fact shall be communicated to the superior holder.

3.—Acquisition of land-Encroachment—Collector-Assessment fixed in the beginning-Enhancement in assessment subsequently made by the Collector

The plaintiff's father acquired from Government a piece of land consisting of three plots, each of which was acquired at different times.

Bombay Acts-(City & Land Revenue Act)-Contd.

The first plot was acquired in 1890 by a purchase from the Collector "at the rate of one rupee a square yard and ground rent at 30 pies per burga of 60 square yards per annum" The second plot was the result of an encroachment. The plaintiff's father, having encroached upon it by erecting steps and a gallery projecting from his house, was required by the Collector to remove them on his failure to do so, the Collector purporting to act under section 26 (2) of the Bombay City Land Revenue Act charged him with five times the value of the land and fixed an assessment of five times the ordinary annual land revenue on the plot and caused it to be entered in his name The third plot was bought from the Collector in 1885, on terms similar to those relating to the first plot.

Assessment over these lands was paid at the rates originally agreed down to 1899

On the 18th August 1899, the Collector sent a notice to the plaintiff's father that assessment over the lands was fixed at three annas per square yard

The plaintiff then brought this suit, under the Bombay City Land Revenue Act, for a declaration that he had the right, in limitation of the right of Government, to possess and hold the land at the rate originally fixed

Held, (1) that as regards the first plot, since the sale was expressly stated to be a ground rent of 30 pies per burga the rate should form the establishment of a specific limit to the assessment.

(2) that as to the second plot, the Collector having charged the maximum price and imposed the maximum assessment without reserving to himself any right, could not enhance the assessment

(3) that regarding the third plot, the reasonable inference from the circumstances was that as in the first so in the second purchase, the limit of the assessment was fixed

(4) That therefore, the enhanced assessment should be set aside

Where a special tribunal, out of the ordinary course, is appointed by an Act of legislature to determine questions as to rights which are the creation of that Act, then, except so far as otherwise expressly provided or necessarily implied, the jurisdiction of that tribunal to determine those questions is exclusive. It is an essential condition of those rights that they should be determined in the manner prescribed by the Act, to which they owe their existence.

The Chief Judge of the Small Causes Court at Bombay is the sole tribunal indicated under the City of Bombay Municipal Act to determine questions relating to disputed elections. No other Court has jurisdiction to hear suits arising under the Act.

The word "election" in s. 33 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act is designed to express something wider than a legally valid election. The words used in this section are consistent with the view that an election, which in fact took place under conditions that made it possible that there should be a valid election, can be questioned.

There is enough in s. 33 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act to bring it within the exception to section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code and bar the cognisance of suits falling under the 2.—Instalment-bond—Bond payable by instalments—Fraud—Defence—Limitation.

The defendant signed on the 4th June 1893 a Ruzu acknowledging Rs. 11,534-15-0 to be due by him to the plaintiff's firm. On the *19*th June 1894, he paid Rs. 400 cash and a Hundi for Rs 600 and for the balance Rs. 10,634-15-0 passed an instalment bond payable by yearly instalment of Rs. 1,000 each.

The Hundi having been dishonoured, the plaintiff's firm brought suit No. 249 of 1895 to recover the amount of the Hundi from the defendant. The latter pleaded want of consideration and impeached the correctness of the accounts. The Court appointed a Commissioner to examine the plaintiff's accounts, and the Commissioner reported that the debt due was Rs. 3,016-4-0 and not Rs 11,534-15-0 as stated in the Ruzu. Upon this the Court without going into other question raised by the defence, decreed the claim.

In 1897, the first two instalments under the bond having become due, the firm sued the defendant (Suit No 105 of 1897) to recover Rs. 2,000. The defendant admitted the claim, and the suit ended in a consent decree.

The defendant then instituted suit No. 412 of 1898 against the firm for cancellation of the instalment bond alleging that it was obtained by misrepresentation and fraud, and was void in law and passed in respect of wagering transactions and nothing was due as under it. The litigation went up to the High Court, which without giving any decision on the merits, dismissed the suit as time barred.

In 1902, the plaintiff sued to recover 3rd, 4th and 5th instalments under the bond. The defendant pleaded that the bond and prior Ruzu were obtained from him by fraud and misrepresentation and that the debt due was one arising from wagering contract unenforceable by law. The Subordinate Judge held that the defendant was barred by the decrees in suits Nos. 249 of 1895 and 105 of 1897 from raising any of his contentions, and passed a decree in plaintiff's favour. On appeal, the District Judge held that the defendant was barred by res judicata from pleading that the bond was voidable for fraud or from pleading that the bond was void by reason of its consideration being a wagering debt.

On appeal to the High Conrt:—

Held, by Aston J., that unless it be established that the pleas which the defendant had raised in the present suit and had not been allowed to prove, would, if proved in the Hundi Suit No. 249 of 1895, have reduced the amount actually due by him in June 1893 to less than Rs. 600 plus the Rs. 400 paid in cash, the decision in the Hundi suit could not operate as res judicata in respect of the said pleas, for the matter which might and ought to be made a ground of defence in the Hundi suit must be a ground of defence to "the claim actually made in the said former suit.

(2) that the plea that the consideration for the instalment bond partly failed because of the reasons set up in the pleas aforesaid, would have been irrelevant in suit 195 of 1897, unless by setting up these pleas and proving them the claim in that latter suit for Rs. 2000. would have been reduced.

Held, by Scott J., that before the present suit was brought the issue as to consideration had not been raised except with reference to the Hundi and had been heard and determined in Suit No. 249 of 1895, with reference to that document alone. The defendant was therefore. not barred by res judicata from pleading in this suit that the bond was no longer supported by consideration.

(2) that the lower Court was wrong in holding that the defendant was barred by S. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, from raising the questions of fraud or wager as vitiating the bond as a security for the payment of the remaining instalments. The issue in Suit No. 249 of 1895. was a sufficient issue for the disposal of the case on the Hundi and in that suit the defendant's liability under the Hundi was the only matter in issue, in Suit No. 105 of 1897, there was no hearing and disposal of any matter in issue: the provisions of S. 13—did not, therefore apply.

(3) that the fact that the defendant was owing to the bar of limitation only denied the specific relief of cancellation claim in Suit No. 412 of 1898, could not prevent him from raising defence on the merits as a defendant in this suit. (IV), (c), (d)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), S. 8—Practice.

A suit for declaration and injunction, in which the claim was valued at Rs. 540 for the purposes of Court-fees, was instituted in the Court of a Subordinate Judge of the First Class. Shortly before the judgment was delivered, the pleaders of the parties put in a purshis in which it was stated "By consent of both parties in suit, the value of the property in suit is settled for Rs. 10,500." The Subordinate Judge decided the suit; and from his decree an appeal was presented to the High Court.

Held, (1) that, as the suit fell within S. 7, para (IV), Sub-Ss. (c) and (d) of the Court Fees Act, 1870. and as the value determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for the purposes and jurisdiction was the same (S. 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887), the appeal lay to the District Court and not to the High Court (Ss. 8, 26 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act 1869);

(2) that, as, according to the statutory method of valuation, the value of the suit was less than Rs. 5,000, consent of the parties could not make it more than Rs. 5,000, for the purposes of jurisdiction. Pherozshaw Jamsetji Comissariatvalla v Waghji Kuverji Kaje Shirke. 13 Bom L R 158.

Although the expression "miscellaneous applications" in Section 16 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act XIV of 1869 may be large enough to include references by the Collector under the Land Acquisition Act X of 1870, the latter part of Section 16, as it stood before that Section was amended by Acts VII of 1889 and VIII of 1890, indicates that it was not the intention of the Legislature to empower a District Judge to refer to an Assistant Judge applications under Special Acts for disposal. First Assistant Collector Prant Bsasin v Ardesir Framji. Hence, the provisions of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (Act XIV of 1869) S. 16, by which a probate matter can be tried in the first instance by the Assistant Judge and by which the appeal in cases where the amount of the subject-matter does not exceed Rs. 5,000 will lie to the District Court, is one which the Local Legislature was competent to make. Laxmi Tatya v Aba Appaji. 10 Bom L R 924=32 Bom 634.

6—Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), S. 22—Jurisdiction—Special jurisdiction—First Class Subordinate Judge—Jurisdiction over lands valuing less than Rs. 5,000 in value, situated outside his ordinary jurisdiction but within his special jurisdiction.

In execution of a decree lands belonging to plaintiff which were situated in the Gadag Taluka and below Rs. 5 000 in value were attached and sold by order of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Dharwar. The plaintiff then sued to set aside the sale and to recover possession of the lands. This suit was brought in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Dharwar. The defendants contended that the lands having been within the jurisdiction of the Gadag Court and the defendants also having been residents of Gadag, the suit ought to have been instituted in the Gadag Court. It appeared that Gadag was within the ordinary jurisdiction of the Gadag Court: and that it was further under a special jurisdiction of the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Dharwar. in suits of Rs. 5,000 and upwards.

Held, that the First Class Subordinate Judge at Dharwar, had no jurisdiction given him by law to try any case relating to immoveable property outside the local limits of his ordinary jurisdiction unless the value of the subject matter was Rs. 5,000 in value. Shankerappa v Kotrappa. The value of the whole land was over Rs. 5,000 but the plaintiff's share was valued in the partition suit at Rs. 250. Under the Court Fees Act, 1870 section 7 IV (b) the amount of fee payable would be according to the valuation of the relief in the plaint. Under the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 8, the valuation for Court Fees and for purposes of jurisdiction is the same. Held, therefore, that the value of the subject matter was Rs. 250 and that the suit was properly brought in the Court of a Second Class Sub Judge. Motibhai v. 9.—S. 24—Transfer of case-District Judge—Assistant Judge—Order of transfer of a claim upwards of Rs. 10,000 from the Court of first Class Subordinate Judge to the District Court—Order passed by Assistant Judge—Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869.)

A suit, wherein the plaintiff claimed Rs. 18,197-13-0 from the defendant, was filed in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Poona. After the suit had been heard by that Judge for some days, the defendant applied to the Court of the District Judge for transfer of the suit to another Court. The District Judge transferred the application to the Assistant Judge for disposal. The latter heard the application and ordered that the suit be transferred to the District Court of Poona for trial. The plaintiff objected that this order was without jurisdiction:

Held, (1) that it appeared from the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 18869) that an Assistant Judge was not a Judge having jurisdiction co-ordinate with that of the District Judge. He was, therefore not a Judge of the District Court, which alone had jurisdiction to transfer the case under S. 24. Civ. Pro Code, 1908.

(2) That, under S. 24 of the Code, the District Court might withdraw any suit and try and dispose of it. Here the suit withdrawn was for a sum exceeding the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Assistant Judge; and he therefore could not try and dispose of it. He therefore, was not a Judge of a District Court as contemplated by the section, which must be a Court of unlimited pecuniary jurisdiction. Haji Umar Abdul Rahiman v Gustadji Mancherji Cooper. 12 Bom L R 854=6 Ind Cas 518=34 Bom 411.

A suit for a mere declaration that an adoption is invalid can, if so valued, lie in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of the Second Class, even though the property affected by the adoption be more than Rs. 5,000 in value.

In the case of converts, the ordinary presumption is that, as a necessary consequence of conversion from Hinduism to Mahomedanism, the law of adoption recognised by Hindu law and usage has been abandoned by them. vested with Small Causes Court jurisdiction up to Rs. 200. He then decided the suit, on the 5th April 1902, by a judgment which was written as in a regular suit.

Held, (1) that the plaintiff's suit which was a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and instituted at the time when the Court of the Subordinate Judge had already become invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes, did not cease to be a suit cognizable by the Court of Small Causes or cease to be so tried merely because the Subordinate Judge at a later stage dealt with it as if he were trying it under his ordinary jurisdiction.

(2) that the plaintiff's suit did not cease to be a suit cognizable by a Small Causes Court by reason of the defendant having by way of set off made a counter claim for Rs. 120, when the pecuniary limit of the jurisdiction of the Court invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes was Rs. 50.

This was a suit for an injunction brought against the defendant municipality. The Court of first instance passed a decree in favour of plaintiff-appellants which the District Judge reversed on the ground that the suit was not maintainable as the appellants had not complied with the provision of Rule 16 framed under the District Municipal Act (VI of 1873), directing that "parties dissatisfied with the decision of the managing committee may appeal to the Municipality whose decision shall be final." On second appeal the High Court held, reversing the decree of the District Judge, that the rules framed under the Act must be construed in consonance with the intention of the Legislature, and Rule 16 must therefore be construed as permissive and not mandatory. It was framed with reference to departmental procedure only and could not affect the right to the institution of a civil suit.

Under the rules, he was chargeable with one rupee a month for the water supplied to him and the condition was that his house was not to be inhabited by more than three families. The defendant Municipality made a new set of rules in 1905, under which they called upon the plaintiff to take a separate water connection for each of the families living in his house: and they threatened to cut off the connection in case of non-compliance. The plaintiff brought this suit to restrain the Municipality from so doing.

8-Bombay District Municipal Act VI of 1873 S.17-Municipal Fund—Suit to present misapplication of Municipal Fund—Person having direct personal interest—Specific Relief Act I of 1877 Sec 56 cl (k).

Any person having a direct personal interest, however small in the proper application of the Municipal Fund created by Sec. 17 of the Bombay District Municipal Act can maintain a suit to prevent that fund being applied to purposes not allowed by the Act. The personal interest exists in the case of every individual tax-payer, since every person who contributes and is liable to contribute to the fund is personally interested in the due application of it and does not therefore fall within the prohibition of clause (k) of Sec. 56 of the Specific Relief Act 1 of 1877. 11—S. 17 and s.33—Street—Authority of the Municipality under s. 33—Civil Court's interference with the discretion given to public bodies.—

The word "street" in s. 17 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) means and includes not merely the surface of the ground, but so much above and below it as is requisite or appropriate for the preservation of the street for the usual and intended purposes. The plaintiff proposed to make a balcony projecting over a public road. The municipality objected to the work as an encroachment on a public street. He therefore sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed balcony. Held that, so far as the column of space standing over the street was vested in the municipality, the plaintiff had no right to occupy it with a balcony, which by intercepting light and air would greatly impair the use of the area as a street. S. 33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1873, gives the municipality a discretion to issue such orders as it thinks proper with reference to a proposed building. Civil Courts cannot interfere with that discretion, unless it is exercised in a capricious, wanton, and oppressive manner. The plaintiff was the owner of two houses on each side of the passage of a khidki, or open square, containing three or four other houses. He proposed to connect the two houses by building a story across the passage at such a height as not to interfere with the passage of those who were entitled to go to and fro. He applied to the local municipality for permission to build in the manner he proposed. The municipality forbade the work, on the ground that it was likely to interfere with the access of light and air to the neighbouring houses. The plaintiff thereupon sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed structure. It was contended for the plaintiff that the municipality ought not to have refused permission in the interests of the neighbouring house-holders, who were able to protect their own rights in case of injury. Held, that the suit would not lie as the order of the municipality refusing permission was not an unreasonable one under the circumstances of the case, Held, further, that the authority of the municipality was not in any way affected by the circumstance that the proposed erection might be an encroachment on private rights subjecting the plaintiff to an action by the persons injured.

12—S. 21—Disposal by Government of objections to tax—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

S. 21, which enables the Government to dispose of objections made to a tax by the inhabitants of a town, is quite consistent with the well-established jurisdiction of the Civil Court to decide as to the validity of any fresh tax or impost, and affords no sufficient ground for the conclusion that the intention of the Legislature was to take away that jurisdiction.

14—S. 21, cls. (1) and (2)—Bombay District Municipal Act Amendment Act (Bombay Act II of 1884), s. 27, cl. (7), and s. 32—Tax imposed by municipality.

In 1891 the municipality of Surat appointed a committee to revise the taxation of the city, proposing to reduce some of the existing taxes and impose others with a view (inter alia) of obtaining a better water-supply for the city. A scheme of taxation drafted by the committee was subsequently adopted by the municipality, and it included a new house and property tax. The municipality then issued a notice with regard to this last-mentioned tax under the provisions of s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, setting forth the particulars of proposed tax and requiring objections to be lodged within a fortnight from the date of the notice. A number of objections were received which were laid on the table for twenty-one days for perusal and consideration by the municipal commissioners. At the end of the time a special meeting of the Commissioners was held, at which it was resolved that the objections were invalid, and the scheme and the rules with regard to the levying of the tax were forwarded to Government and were sanctioned. The plaintiffs sued for an injunction restraining the municipality from levying the tax, contending that it was illegal, on the ground (1) that there was no municipality desirous of imposing the tax for any of the purposes allowed by the Act, inasmuch as the commissioners who passed the resolution to impose the tax did not know for what purpose the tax was to be imposed; (2) that the resolution imposing the tax was illegal because the notice calling the meeting of the commissioners which passed the resolution did not specify this tax as the object of the meeting; (3) that the notice given under s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 was bad, as it did not state the purpose of the proposed tax; (4) that the nature and the amount of the tax were not sufficiently stated in the notice; (5) that the notice ought to have stated the mode in which the valuation of property for the purpose of the tax was to be made; (6) that the objections of the rate-payers were not sufficiently considered; (7) that it did not appear whether the tax was to be paid in advance or not, and (8) that the assessment of the tax was made on a wrong basis. Held, (1) that the purpose of the tax was sufficiently known to the commissioners; (2) that the resolution imposing the tax was not invalid, although the notice convening the meeting did not specify the object of the meeting; (3) that the notice need not specify the purpose of the tax; (4) that as to the nature and the amount of the tax, the notice was sufficient, as it stated that the amount would depend on the valuation of the property; (5) that the notice need not define the mode of valuation; (6) that the objections were sufficiently considered; (7) that the tax was to be paid partly in advance; (8) that the assessment would not affect the validity of the tax, but would give a right of appeal to have the valuation set right. Held, therefore, that the tax was legally imposed. Surat City Municipality v Ochhavaram Jamnadas. 21 Bom 630.

17-S.33-Notice of proposed building–Right of municipality to demolish building erected without permission to build.

On the 18th August 1890, plaintiffs sent a notice to the town municipality of Umreth, intimating their intention to erect a building on their land, and giving a rough sketch plan of the land intended to be built upon. In this notice plaintiffs did not expressly state their intention to build the wall in dispute. On the 28th August 1890, the municipality wrote to the plaintiffs, requiring them to furnish a plan showing the design of the proposed building with its measurements. On the 30th September 1890, the plaintiffs, without furnishing the plan as required, built a wall on their land. Thereupon the municipality gave a notice to the plaintiffs requiring them to pull it down, as it has been built without their permission. The plaintiffs having failed to comply with this notice, the wall was demolished and its materials were carried away by the municipal servants. Thereupon the plaintiffs sued the municipality to recover damages for the wrongful demolition of the wall. Held that the plaintiffs had contravened the provisions of cl. 1 of s. 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, inasmuch as they had built the wall without giving any notice, or (if they did) gave notice without affording the information required by the municipality. The municipality were, therefore, justified in ordering the wall to be demolished.

19.—S.33–Municipality–Private street-Balconies-Dakkalis–Right of Municipality to order removal of balconies :—(Per Chandavarkar and Aston, J J Batty J., dissenting).

A District Municipality can under the provisions of S.33 of the District Municipal Act (Bom Act VI of 1873), order the removal of balconies put up by a person to his house abutting on a private street and constructed in defiance of the order issued by the Municipality. Per Chandavarkar. J.—Reading the whole of S.33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (Bom. Act VI of 1873) by itself and having regard to its general terms, it is clear that the legislature has given to every Municipality the power to regulate the construction of buildings, whether they abut on a public or a private street. The power may be exercised,as the Municipality "think proper;" that is, it should be exercised, not capriciously or arbitrarily, but reasonably, provided the order is "not inconsistent with the provisions of the Act." Per Batty, J.-The orders passed by a Municipality under S. 33 of District Municipal Act, (Bom Act VI of 1873) if justifiable, must be shown to be consistent with the powers conferred by the Act; otherwise they are neither within the meaning of cl. 1 nor are legal orders within the meaning of cl. 3 of the section. The land affected not being a public street is not vested in the Municipality by S.17 of the Act, and no general power to interfere with buildings on private property is conferred by any section of that enactment. Such interference would necessarily involve an encroachment on the ordinary rights of the subject; and wherever the Legislature intended to authorize such interference, it conferred the power by apt words. Per Aston J,—The words "may in writting issue such order not inconsistent with this Act as they think proper with reference to such building" in S.33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, (Bom Act VI of 1873), are very wide and give elastic powers to the Municipality in the matter of regulation of new buildings as private property, and there is no reference to a street public or private in the section. The words "not inconsistent with this Act" appear to mean not inconsistent with the aim,scope and object of this Act as shown by its provisions.

21.-S.33 and s.42—Discretion of municipality to take action under s.33, cl (3) Court's power to interfere with such discretion.

A suit for an injunction to restrain a municipality from removing a certain building or construction is not an action "for anything done, or purporting to have been done, in pursuance of the Act" within the meaning of s. 18 of Bombay Act II of 1884. Such a suit can, therefore, be brought without giving previous notice to the municipality. Apart from the provisions of s.33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, it is only if the site of a building is vested in a municipality under s. 17 that this body is empowered, whereby s. 42 or by any other section, to take steps for the removal of the building. The discretion of taking action or otherwise under the 3rd clause of s. 33 is vested in the municipality, which alone can determine whether or not the removal of a building erected contrary to the provisions of s. 33 is or is not a measure likely to promote the public convenience. If the municipality adopt the proper procedure, no Court can review its decision on the ground that in the opinion of the Court the removal of the building is not likely to promote public convenience. The legislature has confided to the municipality, and the municipality alone, the duty of deciding what measures within its legal powers are for the public convenience, and its discretion is not subject to control by the Courts. Patel Panachand

Under the District Municipal Act (Bombay Act VI of 1873) a Municipality has power to have all obstructions in a public street removed, whether the obstructions were placed there lawfully or not. The only distinction which the Act draws, is between obstructions erected or placed before the Act came into operation and those which have been erected or placed since it came into operation. As to the former, Sec. 42, clause (1) of the Act provides that notice should be given, and if legally placed on the street, compensation should be awarded for their removal. As to the latter, the Municipality can remove them under Sec. 48 even without giving any notice.

The public have a right of passing over the whole of a street if it is a public street.

The Revenue Commissioner, N. D., on behalf of the Government, sanctioned the resolutions on the 2nd of June 1880. Notice of the meeting of the 18th of March 1880 was not served on three of the commissioners, they being absent at the time from Dakor, and no notice specifying the business to be transacted therein was posted up at the kutchhery as required by s. 11, cl. A Receiving Officer, appointed by the Collector under the Election rules, refused to accept the nomination paper of the plaintiff, a candidate at a by-election for a councillorship of the Surat City Municipality : and the list of candidates that was published omitted plaintiff's name for it. The plaintiff thereupon sued the Municipality for a declaration that he was entitled to come forward as a candidate and for an injunction to prevent the Municipality from carrying on the by-election without accepting plaintiff as a candidate :

Held, (1) that the suit for declaration failed since the Municipality neither denied nor was interested to deny the character or right which the plaintiff sought to establish. It was the Receiving Officer that was concerned with the question and over him the Municipality had no control ;

6.—S. 54—Municipal Corporation acting bona fide—Imperative duty and permitted act - Karachi Municipality—Dust-bins— Nuisance—Court, how far can interfere with acts of a Corporation.

Where the plaintiff sued for an injunction prohibiting the Municipality from placing a common dust-bin on the corner of a garden immediately in front of his house, held, that as s. 54 of Bombay Act III of 1901 imposed an imperative duty on the Municipality to make reasonable provision for cleaning public streets, as the streets could not be kept clean, under the circumstances obtaining in Karachi, without keeping dust-bins in some specified spaces; and as it was not shown that the Municipality was either negligent or not acting with bona fides in placing one at the particular site, the plaintiff was not entitled to the injunction sought for, although the dust-bin in this instance was a source of nuisance to him.

Held, also, to ascertain whether or not a nuisance is such as to give one a right of action, inquiry should be made into the authority under which the Municipality purported to act, the law on which point may be thus summarised

(1) Apart from the terms of the statute which constitutes it, the corporation has no more authority to infringe a private right than the ordinary citizen.

(2) The corporation can do an act which constitutes a nuisance, if, and only if the power to do the act is expressly set forth in the statute or is necessarily deducible therefrom.

(3) Where the corporation has merely permissive and not imperative authority to do a thing, the inference is that the discretion should be so exercised as not to prejudice the common law rights of others.

(4) If the corporation acts within its express or implied authority without negligence and with bona fides, no action lies against it at the suit of a person who sustains a private injury by its exercise.

5) The Courts put a wider and more liberal construction on the powers vested for the benefit of the public as a body, such as a Municipal Corporation. Hansraj Hirji v. The Karachi Municipality.

The plaintiff applied to the defendant Municipality on the 3rd July, 1903, for permission to re-construct his house, and building balconies on the southern and eastern sides. The Municipality gave to the plaintiff,on the 25th idem, permission to re build his house; as regards balconies, it said that the matter was referred to the Managing Committee and until it was decided, he should not construct them. For nearly one year, the Municipality did nothing.The plaintiff after waiting for some time built his balconies. This was reported to the Municipality on the 15th July, 1904; and it called upon the plaintiff, on the 4th August, 1904, to remove the balconies. The plaintiff sued the Municipality for an injunction restraining it from removing his balconies.

Held, that the order passed by the Municipality as to the balconies must be referred to sub s. 3 (a) of S. 96 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, that it was spent after the expiry of one month; and that thereupon the plaintiff became entitled under sub-s. 4 of S. 96 to proceed with the proposed work.

Under the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, an applicant is not to be restrained from proceeding with his work merely because a provisional order, which is expressly limited to one month, may have been issued months, or even years, earlier.

S. 151 (o) of the Bombay District Municipalities Act refers to a manufactory which is such that offensive or unwholesome smells arise from it as the natural result of working the factory in the ordinary way. The mere fact that an objectionable smell arises inside the factory by negligent user is not sufficient to bring a factory within S. 151 (o); there must be an offensive or unwholesome smell issuing from the premises so as to create a possibility of its causing a nuisance to the neighbourhood.

A flour mill worked by a camel is not such a manufactory as is contemplated by S. 151 (o)

S. 151 only authorises a Municipality to issue a notice, if it is satisfied that the smell which issues from the factory in the ordinary course of ordinarily careful user, is so offensive as to cause annoyance to the neighbourhood: if amoyance is caused to the mighbourhood only when and because there is improper user, then the smell must be actually dangerous to life, health or property, before the Municipality can prohibit the further use of the premises as such factory A notice not authorized by, but issued by an Officer of a Municipality, is not subject to the consequences specified in subsections (2) and (3) of S. 151. Pahlajrai Chapumal v The Karachi Munipality, 9 Ind. That question was referred to arbitration as required by s. 160 of the Bombay District Municipal Act. 1901; but the proceedings before the arbitrators were not successful. The plaintiff then applied to the District Judge, under s.160 (3 of the Act,requesting him to ascertain and determine the compensation payable. The District Judge made his award. The Municipality appealed from the award contending that they no longer required the plaintiff's premises and that there never was a completed contract with the plaintiff.

The accused was charged with selling or exposing for sale, without license from the Municipal Commissioner, fish intended for human food on the Chowpatti foreshore, contrary to the provisions of s. 410 (1) of the Bombay Municipal Act. 1888. The sale was from a basket which the accused had placed on the sand at some distance from the water, the place being between the high and the low water mark. The fish sold was fresh fish and it had been recently brought from one of the boats then in the Back Bay:—

Held, that the accused was liable under s. 410 (1) since it was impossible to say that fresh fish was sold from a vessel, when as a matter of fact it had been sold from the basket on the shore, it having been brought from the vessel which was in the water.

Held, in answer to the contention that the place where the fish was sold was a private market, that it was difficult to see how a place like the whole of the foreshore of Chowpatti could be held to be a private market: and, even if this were not so, since the Municipality started their case by showing that the place in question was the foreshore of Chowpatti, that was sufficient to throw the onus upon the accused to show that the foreshore of Chowpatty was a private market within the meaning of s. 398 of the Bombay Municipal Act, 1888.

Held, also that the Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, applied to the spot in question.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration that the defendants were liable to pay the salary of the Mukhi of the village of Kamijla, who was nominated by him and appointed by the District Magistrate under Bombay Act VII of 1867, and to recover from them the arrears paid by him. The plaintiff alleged that the village of Kamijla was held by the defendants as jivakdars on jirai tenure and formed a component part of the estate of Patri, of which he was the ruling chief. The defendants contended that they were quite absolute owners of the village and were independent of the plaintiff and that they were not liable to pay the salary of the Mukhi nominated by the plaintiff. The lower court decreed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the salary of the Mukhi was a charge upon the revenues of the village by custom and that the right of nominating the Mukhi for the said village was vested by custom in the plaintiffs. Held that Bombay Act VII of 1867 did not affect the customary right of the plaintiff to recover the salary of the Mukhi from the defendants. That the Government Resolutions of 1880 and 1894 created no fresh contract between Government and the plaintiff such as could absolve the defendants from the liability to pay the Mukhi's salary, and therefore the plaintiff was entitled to a decree.

Department to prevent the flow—Natural rights of riparian owners.

The defendant was in possession of a piece of land, which derived water from a nala. The nala was crossed at a considerable distance from this land by a Government irrigation canal and existed long before the canal. The water flowing in the nala was derived from two sources (1) from rain water from the hills and catchment area of the nala, and (2) from percolation water or waste from the canal. Apart from abnormal periods of drought, the second of the two sources was perennial and the more important of the two. Before the Government canal was made, there was a surface flow in the portion of the nala near the defendant's land: for seven hundred yards below the point of contract the nala was normally dry and gravelly for many months, but after that point there was a spring which furnished perennial stream in the nala. And quite a part from this, the nala held, throughout the rainy months, a fair body of water. At a point little above the defendants' lands the Irrigation Department erected an earthen dam in the nala for the purpose of irrigating an adjacent field. Held (1) that apart from the Bombay Irrigation Act the defendant had the right of a reparian proprietor to the usufructuary interest in the water in the nala, which was an incident to the possession of the adjacent soil and consequently, whatever the nature of the tenancy might be, he, as the occupant of the land abutting on the stream, and not the Government was entitled to the enjoyment and benefit of the water as it flowed past. (2) That as the defendant had a right to all the water which actually formed a part of the stream in the nala as soon as it became a part whether such water came by ordinary natural means, as from springs or from the surface of the adjacent hills or from rains or was added by percolation from the artificial channel of the canal; and if the canal water had by percolation augmented the stream and became part of it, no distinction could be made between the original natural stream and the accession to it irrespective of the source from which it came. (3) That the nala in question was not a canal within the meaning of S. 3 of the Bombay Irrigation Act, 1879. (4) That the Irrigation department was not entitled to prevent the flow of water to defendant's land by erecting any dam in the nala. (5) S 8 of the Bombay Irrigation Act only empowers a canal officer to enter on any land &c., and in no way defines what he may do for the proper regulation and management of the canal. It does not deal with the supply of water to any person but only what the supply of water to any person entitled to such supply which means entitled under the Act to such supply. Where water-rate is levied under s, 48 of the Irrigation Act (Bombay Act VIII of 1879), the question as to the jurisdiction of Civil Courts in a suit for the determination of the legality or otherwise of such levy depends upon whether the incidence of the rate is authorized by the provisions of the section. Under it, the condition precedent to levying the rate is not the fact ascertained by evidence whether the water in dispute has percolated from the canal, but the opinion of the canal officer that it has so percolated, he and not the Civil Court being made the Judge of such percolation for the purposes of the Act. Ordinarily it would belong to the owner of the soil, and Bombay Irrigation Act, 1879, only gives the Department the special right of charging a water-rate on the land which derives the benefit from the leakage (s 48 Bombay Irrigation Act). If the leakage flow was such that it itself had become in the eye of the law a canal or water-course, then the rights of the persons through whose lands it flowed would be governed by the law applicable to canals or water-courses.

crease height of dam or widen channel—Suit by riparian proprietors in representative capacity—Indian Easements Acts S 7, illustration (h)-Meaning of the word "interruption"-Right of Government to divert water to non-riparian tenements.

Where certain riparian land owners sued for a declaration that Government had no right to increase the height of a dam so as to obstruct the natural flow of water or to increase the width of an old channel so as to diminish the supply of water to the lower riparian owners.

Held that the Government could not be held to have violated the rights of private owners of land, unless the party alleging damage proved that he had sustained injury and that the amount of water which he had been accustomed to utilize had been diminished.

The Government as riparian owner is entitled to divert so much of the water as they put into the stream before it reached the lower proprietor if, in so doing, they did not injure any lower riparian owner.

Where plaintiffs sued as lower riparian owners and on behalf of others alleged to have the same interest, but the water which some of the latter used for irrigation was outside the area of their riparian tenement, it is a question whether the plaintiffs can sue in a representative capacity since the cause of action of each plaintiff is distinct and each would have to prove damage.

In exercising their right of control, Government have always claimed and exercised the right to carry water to non-riparian tracts of country, the very object of diverting water by means of dams being to enable them to do this: it could not however be suggested that for the purposes of their right of control, Government would be warranted in committing an act of trespass.

In this country, riparian owner has no higher rights against Government in regard to works of irrigation carried out by them in connection with natural streams than that of not being damaged by any diminution in the supply of water which he has been accustomed to utilize. But the rights of Government as upper riparian owner are higher than those of a private upper riparian owner.

According to English Law, proof of damage is necessary where the use by the upper riparian owner is a use for the purpose of his upper riparian tenement, but not necessary where the use is for a purpose unconnected with his riparian tenement, but according to the American Law, the quantity of water taken to non-riparian land must, to give the lower owner a form of complaint, be sufficient to inflict a perceptible injury on him,

The word "interruption" which occurs in illustration (h) to s 7 of the Easements Act means such interruption as results in material alteration in quantity. The Crown claims the right of periodical revisions of assessment and the right is to distribute the water for the benefit of the public subject only to the ryot's claim for such supply as is sufficient for that purpose. The melvaramdar has neither the right of such revision of assessment; nor is he under any obligation for the distribution of the tank water.

2—Bombay Act V of 1862, Sec. 3—Suit against stranger for land in joint khatah,-Partition-suit—Parties.

The Suits referred to in Section 3 of Bombay Act V of 1862 are such as are instituted by persons against whom the order of the Collector is made or whom it affects injuriously and which are brought to try the validity of the order of ouster. The Collector is not competent under the Section to pass any order as to the title of the shares in the Narwa. One R owned two Khatas, one of which stood in his own name, the other, in the joint names of himself and G. Plaintiff purchased R's interest in the latter Khata. The lands of the other Khata were purchased at a Court-sale by B. At the time of the sale, R's mortgagees were in possession of his lands. On B's application, the Collector removed the mortgagee from possession and placed B in possessions of R's lands in both the khatas. B then transferred his interests and possession to the defendant. Subsequently plaintiff brought the present suit to recover the land of the joint Khata purchased by him from R.

Held, that the suit was not barred by Section 3 of Bombay Act V of 1862 because instituted more than 3 months after the date of the Collector's order ; that as plaintiff alleged that defendant had no interest in the Khata in suit his proper remedy was not a suit for partition against the defendant ; and that though plaintiff alleged that he had purchased R's interest in the joint Khata of R and G, yet he had sufficient interest in the lands in dispute maintain the present suit as defendant did not object that plaintiff could not alone bring the suit and the other sharers including the plaintiff appeared to be in possession of their respective shares, and the defect of parties, if any could be cured by joining by either as plaintiff or defendant. Haribhai v Gokal, P J 1897, p 109.

Held, that the cause of the error being of the same nature with "oversight" falling within the description of errors in S. 109 of the Land Revenue Code, the rectification of the Register so as to bring it in accord with the order made after hearing both the parties was not contrary to natural justice It was a case in which the Revenue officer concerned was authorized under S. 197 of the said Code to dispense with any judicial or quasi-judicial inquiry. Vasudeo v Govind. 14 Bom L R 124.

The kowl (lease) of the village of Ghatkooper in the Thana District granted by Government on the 31st December 1845 for ninety-nine years provided inter alia that the grantee should pay to Government annually a fixed sum with respect to the land which had already been under cultivation and "that as to waste lands, the grantee should bring them all into cultivation within forty years and on the expiration of that period the full assessment, according to the prevailing usage of the country, should be collected annually from the grantee on such land as might be under cultivation as well as on such quantity as might remain waste out of the present waste, entered in the public accounts." The kowl further provided—"In respect of the above named village you (grantee) are to consider yourself as farmer thereof. You are, therefore, to exercise the authority vested in farmers by Chapter VI of Regulation XVII of 1827, or such as may be hereafter vested in them by any new enactment shall also be exercised by you and in the event of your acting contrary to the above-said enactments, you will be subject to such penalties as are now or may hereafter be provided for by Regulation."

Subsequently some of the occupants of the village having built upon their respective lands Government levied extra assessment from them under the provisions of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom Act V of 1879). The grantee under the kowl himself claimed the right to levy extra assessment on the ground that the village was an alienated village within the meaning of cl. 19 of S. 3 of that Code, and was, therefore, not liable to the provisions of the Code. He, therefore, applied to Government for a refund either wholly or in part of the extra assessment collected by them, and the Government having refused to grant his request, he brought a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council praying (1) for a declaration that (a) the extra assessment imposed by the defendant upon lands appropriated for building sites in the village was illegal, (b) the Bombay Land Revenue Code was not applicable to the village, and (c) the resolution of the Government to the effect that the kowl was agricultural was erroneous, (2) that the defendant be restrained by a permanent injunction from levying the extra assessment, (3) that in the event of its being found that the Government were entitled to levy the assessment, it be declared that that the plaintiff was entitled to receive the same, and (4) that the amount, if any, received by the defendant on account of such assessment be awarded to him.

The Court dismissed the suit.

Held on appeal, that having regard to the terms of the kowl, it was a lease of the revenue of the village on certain conditions. The object of the lease was agricultural and Government never parted with their right so far as the right to build was concerned.

The kowl was no more than a lease. The Government parted with their rights as lessors in favour of the grantee as lessee and imposed upon him certain conditions none of which brought the contract within the definition of the term "alienated" village in cl. 19 of S. 3 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879.

The clause in the kowl, that the grantee was to consider himself a farmer of the village, was to "exercise the authority vested in farmers by Chapter VI of Regulation XVII of 1827 or such as may be hereafter vested in them by any new enactment shall be exercised by you and you will be subject to such penalties as are now or may hereafter be provided for by Regulations," brought the village within the operation of the provisions of the Bombay Land Revenue Code.

5.—S. 3-Land Revenue Code—"Rent"—"Land Revenue."

Plaintiff brought this suit to recover five years' assessment in respect of some lands held by defendant No. 2 through defendant No. 1. Defendant No. 2 contended that plaintiff's claim for the first three years was time-barred by Articles 62, 110 or 115 of Schedule II to the Limitation Act, and that he was in possession only of three lands, the other two lands being held by defendant No. 1. The Court of first instance held that Article 132 or 120 applied, and it awarded the claim for all the five lands as they stood in defendant No 2's khata, and he was, therefore, under section 136 of the Land Revenue Code, responsible as the superior holder of the two lands. A decree was accordingly passed against both the defendants for the full sum claimed. In appeal, the District Judge held that neither Article 110 nor 115 nor 132 applied, that the case was governed by Article 120 as the claim of plaintiff was of the nature of land revenue and not of rent, and that the defendants were liable to the whole claim:—

Held, by Ranade and Whiteworth, JJ., that the defendants were not tenants but inferior holders, under the plaintiff; that the payment made by them was land revenue and not rent; that the Article 120 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act applied to the case.

Per Whiteworth, J.—The term rent is used in the Land Revenue Code only with reference to those superior and inferior holders between whom the relationship of landlord and tenant subsists and not with reference to those superior and inferior holders between whom that relationship does not exist.

Held, by Crowe, J. (dissentiente), that Article 110 of the Limitation Act applied to the case, and that the plaintiff's claim was limited to arrears for three years preceding the date of the suit. The expression "rent" and "land revenue" are used indiscriminately in section 3 (19) of the Land Revenue Code to denote the amount payable by the occupant to Government and it seems impossible to hold that the law contemplated any thing different in the connotation of the two expressions. Sadashiv v Ramkrishna. 3 Bom L R 135.

He did not, however, then specifically allege that according to practice he was entitled to rent for every year. The suit was decided in his favour. In 1899, the plaintiff brought a second suit against the defendants to recover thal for 1898-99. The defendants objected to the suit as res judicata:—

Held, that the second suit was not barred as res judicata, because the first suit merely decided that thal was payable in respect of betel-nuts for the year 1897-98 as alleged and claimed in the plaint and not according to practice. Vishnu v Ramling. 3 Bom L R 450 whereby the plaintiff acquired occupation might over the land let to him in a perpetuity subject to the payment of assessment on his promise to reclaim it. The chief condition of the lease was "if half the area may be resumed." During the stipulated period, the plaintiff succeeded in putting up embankments on the lands which prevented the sea water from washing the land, but he could bring only 5 acres of the land under cultivation. In October 1895, the Government issued a notice to the plaintiff, to the effect that he had broken the terms of the contract which required him to bring the whole land into cultivation in ten years, and on the 6th March, 1869, the plaintiff's khata was cancelled. The plaintiff brought this suit for a declaration that the Government had no right to cancel etc plaintiff's khata:—

Held, that the work of erecting the embankments (the only work specified in the lease) had been done, and the land had been reclaimed from the sea; and that the work of making it fit for cultivation was evidently not included in the lease; and that, therefore, Government had no right to cancel the khata.

Reclamation means, in the case of submerged or overflowed land, the rescuing of it from being submerged. The rendering it fit for cultivation is not the original meaning in regard to submerged land. This would be its meaning in regard to the reclamation of unarable land. Shamrao v The Secretary of State. 2 Bom L R 499= 25 Bom 32.

like other contracts according to the intent of the parties to be collected from the words, and that it meant that Government qua Government should need the land. It appearing on the evidence that Government qua Government did not want the land but that some third parties (the defendants) did.

Held also, that if under such circumstances the Commissioner had exercised his power of determining the lease, who had ordered the lands to be given to the defendants under Secs. 27 and 28 of the rules under the Land Revenue Code which relate to unoccupied land only, it would have been in the nature of a fraud, to which the principles applicable to the exercise of powers generally would have applied. The plaintiff took a plot of land at Matheran from the Government (defendant), under a lease, the conditions of which were that he (plaintiff) should build one bungalow and that he should not carry on any excavation on the land without the previous permission in writing of the Collector. The plaintiff then applied for right to dig stones for building purposes. This permission was given Later on, while the bungalow was in course of construction, the plaintiff was required by the Superintendent of Matheran to erect boundary pillars on his land : in constructing these he used stones which had previously been excavated under the permission already granted. Upon this the defendant called upon the plaintiff to pay for the stones so used and on his declining to do so, the sum (Rs 2-8-0) was realized by attachment and sale of the plaintiff's moveable property. The plaintiff there-upon, filed this suit praying inter alia, for damages (Rs 200) in recovering the amount realized from him.

Held, (1) that the suit was one for damages in respect of trespass to goods, and that he was entitled to recover from the defendant Rs. 2-8 0

(2) that the plaintiff was not liable under sec. 43 of the Land Revenue Code, 1879, for unauthorisedly recovering "any other natural product" from the land, since the expression does not include excavated stones.

(3) that under Rule 38 of the Land Revenue Code. 1879, the Collector was not justified in recovering fees for excavated stones used by the plaintiff in erecting boundary pillars.

12A—Secs. 48 and 65—Agricultural lands —Principles in granting compensation.

In acquiring lands, under the Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), the question for enquiry is not what was the original price paid for the land or the money spent on its present disposition, or the actual income received, but what was the market or sale value of the land if laid out in the most beneficial manner.

The elements which confer on lands their natural value as building sites are the suitableness of its situation, its salubrity, its vicinity to a large and growing industrial or populous centre and the demand for such additional building accommodation.

It does not follow, from sections 65 and 48 of the Land Revenue Code. 1879, that the payment of fine and assessment is a preliminary condition without which no agricultural land can be appropriated for the building purposes

It is clear that the Land Revenue Code, contemplates appropriation both with and without permission, the fines in the one case being larger than in the other. Bhujabalappa v Collector of Dharwar. 1 Bom L R 454.

That they do not empower the Government to confiscate any land belonging to an Inamdar and to confer it upon the persons who live in his village. The mere omission to number a plot of land cannot have the effect of turning it into a part of the village site or take away any rights of the plaintiffs to cultivate it. The fact that Government under Act No. VII of 1863 chose to assess only a portion of the holding and to allow the plaintiffs to enjoy the rest free of assessment for more than twenty years, would not have the effect of cutting off the latter from the holding and of placing it at the disposal of Government. Held. also that the plaintiffs being the owners of the whole village as Inam were also the owners of the bed of a rivulet that lay within the boundaries of their village. The fact that the bed was not numbered or measured so as to be expressly included within the survey numbers formed at the new survey and was not assessed in the sanad did not affect the ownership of the plaintiffs. Neither the giving nor the omission to give a number to land worked any change in its title and the inam-holding of the plaintiffs would remain the same under the new as it was under the old survey. The omission of Government to assess land separately would not deprive the plaintiffs of it or make it the property of Government. S. 37 of the Land Revenue Code deals only with what is not the property of individuals and does not make the bed of a stream belonging to private individual public land.

In 1892, V, a Deshmukhi vatandar, died, leaving five sons—four by one wife, of whom K was the eldest, and one son B by another wife. K and B each claimed to be the eldest son of V. On the 16th June 1893, the Collector of Satara, in proceedings under s. 71 of the Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879), ordered K's name to be registered in the revenue books in place of V's. Prior to this, however, the plaintiff and other tenants paid B rents for 1892—94. K then applied for and obtained from the Collector an order, under s. 86 of the Code, rendering him assistance in recovering these rents. The plaintiff, in August 1894, brought this suit to restrain K from recovering the rents and to avoid the order for assistance. The Subordinate Judge granted the injunction, but the District Judge reversed that decision and dismissed the suit on the ground that K was the registered occupant of the land, and that the order for assistance was valid, and that payment of rent to B did not discharge the tenants. On appeal to the High Court, —Held, reversing the decree of the District Judge and restoring that of the Subordinate Judge, that, the lands in question being alienated land, s. 71 of the Land Revenue Code did not apply, and K was not a registered occupant under the Code. The lands passed on V's death to his five undivided sons, unless a custom of primogeniture existed in the family, and payment by the plaintiff to B, a co-landlord, was a valid discharge. Sambhu v Kamalrao Vithalrao.

The Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bomaby Act V of 1879) applies to talukhdari villages in the Ahmedabad district. Such villages fall within the description of "alienated holdings" as definded by the Code. When a talukhdari village is attached under s. 159 of the Code for arrears of land revenue, so long as the attachment subsists, an order of forfeiture under s. 153 is illegal. The plaintiff was the talukhdar of the village of K. At the end of the revenue year 1878-79, that is, on 31st July 1879, the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year In November 1879, a punitive police post was established in the village under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867 on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between April and January 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdari for arrears of revenue, and realized by the sale a sum of Rs. 608, a sum more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879, but the Collector, after deducting the arrears due for 1878-79 applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid, the village was attached on the 1st July 1880 under s. 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s. 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff sued Government to recover possession of the village and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant contended that it was valid and legal. Held that the village having been attached for arrears of land revenue under s. 159 of Bombay Act V of 1879 on the 1st July 1880, the plaintiff had twelve years' time from the date of the attachment within which he could apply for the restoration of the village under s. 162 of the Act. The order of forfeiture of the 6th January 1881 was, therefore, null and void. Held (per Birdwood J.) that the Collector had no power, under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867, to recover the cost of the punitive post from the talukhdar, (1) as he was not an inhabitant of the village, and (2) because the cost could only be defrayed by a local rate imposed on the inhabitants of the district in which the punitive post was established. Samaldas Bechar Desai v. dant's undivided brother without leave of the Court. In 1892 the plaintiffs (heirs of the mortgagor) brought this suit against defendants Nos. 1. 2, and 3 to redeem the said three plots of land from the mortgage of 1872. Defendant No. 1 pleaded that he had inherited plot No. 304 from his brother, who had become the owner of plot No. 304 by his purchase at the execution sale in 1881. He disclaimed all interest in plots Nos. 303 and 305. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 answered that they had become absolute owners by the purchase at the revenue sales. As to these latter, it was alleged that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were in possession of the said two plots for the first defendant Defendants Nos 2 and 3 contended that by s. 182 of the Land Revenue Code the plaintiffs were precluded from raising this point. Held that, though s. 182 forbade the Court to entertain a suit against defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on the ground that they had bought the land for defendant No. 1, it did not debar it from entertaining a suit against them on the ground that subsequently to the sale they were holding on behalf of defendant No. 1 or against defendant No. 1 on the ground that he was himself really in possession through defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as his agents or tenants. The same principle of equity which would make defendant No. 1 a trustee for the mortgagors if he had bought in his own name would make defendants Nos. 2 and 3 trustees for them if subsequently to the sale they held the land on behalf of defendant No. 1, and would also make defendant No. 1 himself a trustee if subsequently to the sale the property came into his possession as beneficially entitled thereto owing to an agreement between him and the certified purchasers. Genu v Sakharam. 22 Bom 271.

The plaintiff obtained on the 16th June 1885 certain lands from Government under a lease whereby the plaintiff acquired occupation right over the lands let to him in perpetuity, subject to the payment of assessment on his promise to reclaim it. The chief condition of the lease was "if half the area is not reclaimed in five years, and the whole in ten years, the concession may be resumed." During the stipulated period the plaintiff succeeded in putting up embankments on the land, which prevented the sea water from washing the land, but he could bring only five acres of the land under cultivation. In October 1895 the Government issued a notice to the plaintiff to the effect that he had broken the terms of the contract which required him to bring the whole land. into cultivation in ten years, and on the 16th March 1896 the plaintiff's khata was cancelled. The plaintiffs brought a suit for a declaration that the Government had no right to cancel the plaintiff's khata. Held, that the work of erecting the embankments (the only work specified in the lease) had been done, and the land had been reclaimed from the sea ; that the work of making it fit for cultivation was evidently not included in the lease ; and that, therefore, Government had no right to cancel the plaintiff's khata. Reclamation means, in the case of submerged or overflowed land, the rescuing of it from being submerged. The rendering it fit for cultivation is not the original meaning in regard to submerged land ; that would be its meaning in regard to the reclamation of unarable land.

—Assessment—Survey made by the British Government—Collector's certificate—Change in rate of assessment—Pensions Act XXIII of 1871, Sec 4—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Revenue—Jurisdiction Act X of 1876, Sec. 4. sub-cl (b)—Land Revenue Code Act V of 1879, Sec. 216, Sub-cls (a), (b) and (c)—Village partially alienated.

In a suit by an Inamdar of a village against a Khot to recover rent in kind (according to the market rate at the time of payment), the defendant (Khot) contended, (1) that he was only liable to pay cash assessment as fixed by the survey made by the British Government, which was at a lower rate than he had previously paid, (2) that the suit was barred for want of Collector's certificate under Sec. 4 of the Pensions Act XXIII of 1871, and (3) that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit under the Revenue Jurisdiction Act X of 1876, Sec. 4. sub-clause (b) and the Land Revenue Code Act V of 1879, Sec. 216. sub-clause (b).

Held, that as there was no objection taken by either party to the amount or incidence of assessment, of land revenue fixed by Government, and the question being whether the Khot was liable to pay to the Inamdar Mactas or assessment, the suit was not taken away from the cognizance of Civil Courts by the Revenue Jurisdiction Act X of 1876, Sec. 4, sub-clause (b).

Held further, that the Court was not precluded from entertaining the suit for want of Collector's certificate under the Pensions Act XXIII of 1871, Sec. 4, because the original grant passed the lands, and because it is the original grant which determines whether the Pensions Act is applicable, and not the actual rights which the grantee, as a matter of fact, may have enjoyed by it.

Held further, that the payment which the Khot had been making to the Inamdar before the time of the British survey was in the nature of assessment or rating by Government.

Held also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the old assessment as claimed by them. It was plain that in cases falling within sub-clauses (a) and (c) of Sec. 216 of the Land Revenue Code, Bombay Act V of 1879, the Inamdar's interest in the assessment would not be affected by the application of Chapters VIII to X of that Act. He would still get the old assessment in the alienated lands in the village in the former case and the same amount of assessment in the latter, and the same must have been the intention in cases contemplated by sub clause (b).

The "holder of the village" in the concluding para of Sec. 216 must be read as meaning the "holder of the assessment or any part thereof of an alienated village." Gangadhar Hari Karkare v Morbhat Purohit. P J 1893 p 410 =18 Bom 525.

The plaintiff (an Inamdar) was the grantee of the royal share of revenue of a certain village, in which the defendant was a permanent tenant of certain land. At the desire of the plaintiff, the survey settlement was introduced into the village when the plaintiff's name was entered as Khatedar or registered occupant of the land. The plaintiff next sought to recover enhanced rent from the defendant. The latter, in contesting the claim relied on, among other things, S 217 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code 1870, and contended that he was liable to pay only the Government rate of assessment levied on the land. This contention was disallowed on the ground that the defendant was not a registered occupant of the land.

On appeal, Held, that S. 217 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879, was not restricted in its application to registered occupants only; it invested "the holders of all lands" in alienated villages with the same rights,and imposed upon them the same responsibilities, in respect of the lands in their occupation, that occupants in unalienated villages had. The term "holder" as defined in S 3 cl (11) of the Code, was wide enough to include even a tenant who had entered into possession under an occupant. Nanabhai Bajibhai Patel v The Collector of Kaira 12 Bom L R 707 =34 Bom 686=7 Ind Cas 949.

1.—S 8—Local cess-Landlord and tenant - Fraudulent collection of cess

The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wanta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869, s 8 The defendant contended that, in consequence of a demand from Government, he had paid local cess on the whole of his talukh including the village in which the plaintiffs lands were situated and was therefore entitled, under ss 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands, knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them Held, that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands within s. 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869, and was therefore not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs possession and that, consequently the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs Held, also that the defendant was not a person 'interested in the payment of the money made by him to Government within the meaning of s 69 of the Contract Act assuming that a portion of that sum was demanded by Government in respect of the plaintiffs wanta lands and that they were bound by law to pay it to Government Held further that the defendant did not 'lawfully' make the payment within the meaning of s 70 of the Act inasmuch as he did so fraudulently and dishonestly Desai Himat Singji v Bhovabhai Kavabhai 4 Bom 643

The plaintiff's ancestors as the ruling Chief of Patdi, granted to defendant's ancestors the village of Kamijala as jiwak giras When in 1867 the Act III of 1869 was passed which empowered Government to levy from all lands the local fund cess, it was decided that as Kamijala was one of the villages of the Patdi State the cess upon it was fixed on the old Annual rate Since that time down to 1884, the revenue officers levied the cess in the first place from the Patdi Chief who in his turn, levied it from the defendants In 1884, the Local Boards Act was passed and then disputes arose as to whether assistance was to be given to the plaintiff in recovering the local fund cess from the defendants, this resulted in the decision of the Bombay Government that the defendant and not the plaintiff must be held to be superior holders responsible to Government for the local fund cess This decision was communicated to plaintiff on the 24th April 1888 and was afterwards upheld by the Secretary of State Plaintiff, thereupon filed the suit for a declaration that defendants were the superior holders and had no right to pay the local fund cess direct to Government and that he was entitled to pay the same to Government and recover it from the defendants and for recovery of the cess which he paid from 1888 to 1895 Held, (1) that the plaintiff was not an 'occupant' either generally or under the Bombay Land Revenue Code for he was not in occupation of the land and the term under the Bombay Land Revenue Code is applicable to unalienated land, nor was plaintiff 'superior holder' under the Bombay Land Revenue Code, since the words at the end of the 2nd paragraph of S. 8, Bombay Act, III

At a general election for Municipal Councillorship for a ward in the City of Bombay, eight out of the fifteen candidates were declared duly elected. A petition was then presented to the Chief Judge of the Bombay Court of Small Causes, under S. 33 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act 1888, praying that the election of the eight Councillors or of one or more of them might be set aside and a scrutiny held. The inquiry was held and the election of two out of the eight successful candidates was set aside. The Chief Judge then came to the conclusion that under S. 33 he was only empowered to consider the claim of the ninth candidate, who obtained the next highest number of votes to the candidates returned as elected, but, as a valid cause of objection existed to his being declared elected, he declined to direct that candidate should be deemed to be elected. He further held that as there was no other candidate who could be deemed to be elected. proceedings for filling up the two vacancies would have to be taken under S. 34 of the Act. The applicant who stood tenth on the list of candidates applied to the High Court, under S. 45 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, asking for an order that the Chief Judge to proceed to direct under S, 33 of the Bombay Municipal Act, that the applicant should be deemed to have been duly elected.

Held, that as S. 33 had been held to empower the Chief Judge to set aside the election of any number of Candidates returned as elected, there was nothing repugnant in construing the section as empowering him to fill up any number of vacancies so created from the list of unsuccessful candidates subject to the provisions of the section.

Held, further, that the Chief Judge should therefore, proceed to place the unsuccessful candidates in order of valid votes. The two with the highest number of valid votes against whom no cause of objection can be found should be declared to be elected. If only one is qualified then proceedings for filling up the vacancy or vacacies would have to be taken under s. 34 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888.

The High Court of Bombay may under S. 45 of the Specific Relief Act of 1877 make an order requiring any specific act to be done or forborne within the local limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, provided that (a) an application, for such order be made by some person whose property, franchise or personal right would be injured by the forbearing or doing (as the case may be) of such specific act; and (b) that such doing or forbearing is. under any law for the time being force, clearly incumbent on such Court in its public character.

An application under sub-sec I of S. 33 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act 1888, should name the persons whose election is objected to.

Sub-sec. 2 of S 33 enacts what the Chief Judge is to do when an application is made under sub-sec. I. He has to make such enquiry as he may deem necessary and—

(1) If he finds that the election was a valid election and that the person whose election is objected to is not disqualified, he shall confirm the result of the election.

(2) If the Chief Judge finds that the person whose election is objected to is qualified for being a Councillor, he shall declare such person's election null and void.

(3) If the Chief Judge finds that the election is not a valid election, he shall set it aside.

Under S. 33, sub-sec (2), it is not the candidate with the next highest number of votes whom the Chief Judge shall declare to be deemed to be elected, but the candidate with the next highest number of valid votes and against whose election no cause of objection is found. The Chief Judge is entitled to presume that all the votes in favor of a candidate as declared by the Commissioner are valid, but if a vacancy has to be filled, all the unsuccesssul candidates are open to attack, and the last on the list may prove to be the one with the next highest number of valid votes.

The change effected in sub Sec 2 to S 33 by Act of 1905, enables an applicant to apply to the Chief Judge for a declaration that any of the unsuccessful candidates should be deemed to be elected.

public streets. It was contended that the amount of compensation to be paid to the trustees was to be measured by the loss of rent which they would have received for certain rooms which they had proposed to build on the land in question. Held that the words of s. 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878 were intended to ensure compensation to the owner for every sort of damage, and not to restrict it to compensation for such damage as he might by his own arrangement reduce it to. Compensationbecomes due under the section as soon as the Corporation takes possession, which is when the owner begins to build. and there being no words in the section to show a contrary intention. the compensation must be assessed according to the state of things then existing, and not upon the basis of what the owner may have it in his power to do towards diminishing the damage which would otherwise result to him. Held, also, that in cases of compensation granted under s. 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878, the addition of 15 per cent cannot be allowed.

—The eaves of certain buildings belonging to the plaintiff projected over the public road. On the 17th May 1886, the Municipal Commissioner of Bombay gave notice to the plaintiff requiring him within thirty days to remove the said eaves as being " a projection, encroachment, or obstruction " within the meaning of s. 195 of Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878. The plaintiff thereupon filed this suit, praying for an injunction against the Municipal Commissioner. The eaves in question projected to the extent of one foot eight inches. The width of the road in front of the buildings was about forty feet, and the length of the eaves varied from seven feet to nine feet two inches above the roadway. At the time this suit was filed there was an open drain or gutter, one foot three inches wide, running along by the side of the plaintiff's buildings and between them and the road. That gutter, however, subsequently to the filing of this suit, but before the hearing, was covered over. and so much additional width was thereby added to the road. Held that the eaves constituted an obstruction within the (b) Properties which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, are usually or frequently vacant either wholly or partially. (3) No sanction for drawback shall extend or apply to any floor on which trade or manufacture is carried on, or any goods are sold." The Commissioner having refused to sanction a drawback of the tax leviable on certain properties of the plaintiff on the ground that they did not fall within the terms of the above conditions, the plaintiff filed this suit. It was contended on his behalf that the second and third of the above conditions were bad, and that the standing committee could not by so-called general conditions limit or curtail the right given to tax-payers by s. 158. Held that the conditions prescribed by the Standing Committee were not ultra vires, and that the Commissioner was justified in refusing the drawback. Goverdhandas Goculdas Tejpal v Municipal Commissioners of Bombay. 17 Bom 394.

9.—Ss. 342, 527—Notice-Suit for injunction—Reconstruction—Repairs—Regular line of the street—Public Officers——Prompt execution of duty.

S. 527 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act does not apply to a suit to restrain a Municipality by injunction from doing an act which is threatened but not done, 25 Bom 143 followed. It is of importance that public officers should not be encouraged to sleep at their posts and postpone the fulfilment of their duties in the expectation that their delay will be condoned and their demands conceded, whatever may have been the lapse of time of the change of circumstances. The word "reconstruction" as used in S. 342, Cl (d) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, has some other element than that of additions, alteration or repair. If the repair is of an ordinary and casual character, it is not reconstruction of any portion of the building. If, on the other hand, the repairs are of a more or less substantial character, affecting the stability of the building, it is reconstruction whether the repairs are done inside or outside the house. In each case, it is a question of fact whether the partial works done with reference to a building are mere repairs or one of reconstruction of a portion of the building. The difference between repairs and reconstruction is one of degree, and can be made out by finding whether what has been done adds to and was intended to add to the structural capacity of the building. Dewakabai v The Municipal Commissioner of Bombay. 6 Bom L R 1028.

(a) no building shall exceed seventy feet in height.

(b) in streets not exceeding twenty-six feet in width no building shall exceed in height one and a half times the width of the street;

(c) in streets exceeding twenty six feet but not forty feet in width, no building shall exceed forty feet in height, and in all other cases no building shall exceed the width of the street in height, except with written permission of the Commissioner.

If the permission is given to build, any person may, as a matter of right, build, to the prescribed heights relatively to the streets on which the building faces, without having recourse to the Municipal Commissioner at all. In, any case in which permission is granted, it is desired to exceed those prescribed heights or the general maximum height, the Municipal Commissioner's written permission must be obtained.

The opening words of s. 349-B suggest that the rules in that section are intended to be a guide to the Commissioner in the exercise of his discretion, rather than an imperative command.

The intention of the legislature expressed in Ss, 349-A and 349-B was to confer upon the Commissioner a power to grant permission in writing in all exceptional and proper cases for the erection of buildings beyond the prescribed heights.

The Advocate General represents in this Presidency the Attorney-General in England and has all his powers.

In case of constructive public nuisance or public nuisance in law—meaning that which is only wrong because it contravenes the provisions of an Act—the Attorney-General's special power extends in England. No such power can be derived from s, 91 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which is in terms restricted to public nuisances in fact.

18.—City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom Act III of 1888), S, 351—Municipal Commissioner-Powai to remove objectionable structures-Exercise of the power—'Appear' interpretation of—Danger, kind of, contemplated by the section-Discretion vested in the Commissioner—Court's interference with the discretion—Commissioner can act through agent—Right of the party to be heard in answer to his notice—Injunction to restrain Commissioner from pulling down a building.

The primary object of s. 351 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, is the safety of the public, to secure which the Commissioner must of necessity be given very wide powers. But it does not follow that those powers must be exercised arbitrarily and without due consideration of the provisions of the section and the right of individuals. In the first place, it must appear to the Commissioner that a structure is in a ruinous condition or likely to fall or in any way dangerous to any person occupying, resorting to or passing by such structure. He may next by written notice, require the owner or occupier to pull down, secure, or repair it.

The word "appear" in the section does not involve "appears to the eye." It is sufficient if it appears to the Commissioner on the representations of a competent officer whose duty it is to make such representation. But, the Commissioner's action when "it appears" is judicial,so that he must exercise his discretion in determining what action should be taken. He does not satisfy this test, where he merely signs the notice which is sent to him by the Executive Engineer, because it has previously been signed by that officer. It is only by aid of a fiction that it can be said that a notice signed in this way by the Commissioner complies with the section, which should be considered as a notice to show cause. It is not invalid; at the same time it

Danger means peril, risk, hazard, exposure to injury from pain or other evil, and can vary in degree, according as the apprehended injury is expected to occur at once or at some future time. S. 354 applying to all degrees of danger and prescribing various precautionary measures to be taken to prevent injury resulting therefrom, it follows that first the degree of danger must be ascertained and then the appropriate precautionary measure prescribed.

Discretion must not be arbitrary. The very term itself standing and unsupported by circumstances imports the exercise of judgment, wisdom and skill as contra-distinguished from unthinking folly, heady violence of rash injustice.

The legislature has vested in the Commissioner a discretion in the matter (s. 354) and the Court would not interfere in his exercise of it, merely because the object in view might be carried out in some other way, nor would it lightly impute to him bad faith. But, the Court is, in the first instance, entitled to inquire whether the discretion has been exercised. The discretion has to be exercised, first in coming to a conclusion, as to the state of the structure, and then in fixing upon the remedy.

It is obviously impossible for the Commissioner to inspect all structures that are suspected of being dangerous. Therefore, it is a sufficient exercise of his discretion, in deciding what structures are dangerous, if he appoints a competent person to represent to him what structures are dangerous. But, if a notice is issued based on the representation of such a person, it is open to the owner to prove that that person has not exercised his discretion or has been actuated by improper motives in prescribing the steps to be taken.

If the owner can prove to the satisfaction of the Court that his house was not in such a dangerous condition as to warrant an order to pull it down, that would be prima facie evidence, that the person appointed by the Commissioner had not exercised his discretion.

When the Commissioner has per force to act on the advice of his expert advisers, it must be proved that they decided judicially what advice they should offer. If they did not, the provisions of the section have not been complied with. In other words, the Commissioner can exercise his discretion through an agent; but it follows that, if the agent has not exercised his discretion, neither has the Commissioner. The Commissioner has the opportunity to remedy this when the owner complaints.

Under certain circumstances, the safety of the public must be considered in priority to the right of private individuals as in the case of imminent danger; but, where there is no suggestion of imminent danger the person affected is entitled to be heard as a matter of common justice. 23—Ss. 504, 527 and 301—Land taken by the Municipality for street improvement—Compensation for land taken—Dispute as to amount of compensation—Notice of suit—Limitation.

In 1891 the Municipal authorities of Bombay gave notice to the plaintiffs under s.299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 that they required 23-30 square yards of the plaintiff's land for street improvement. On the 14th December 1891, the plaintiff gave possession of the land to the municipality, and on 27th January 1892 claimed Rs.60 per square yard as compensation. By letter dated 23rd February 1892, the Municipal Commissioner (without prejudice) offered Rs50 per square yard as compensation, and stated that, on the plaintiff producing the title-deeds and papers to establish his title, the necessary documents in connection with the payment would be prepared. Nothing further took place in the matter until the 14th February 1894, on which date the plaintiff wrote a letter to the Municipal Commissioner, in which, without mentioning any sum, he requested the payment of the amount which might be due to him as compensation for his land taken by the Municipality. The Commissioner refused to pay the compensation, contending that the plaintiff's claim was time-barred. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit claiming Rs1,165 (being at the rate of Rs.50 per square yard) as compensation for the land taken by the defendant or in the alternative for that sum as damages for the breach of contract to pay purchase-money for the land. The defendant pleaded (1) that notice under s. 527 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) was necessary before suit filed; and (2) that the suit was barred by limitation. The Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court found for the defendant with costs, and dismissed the suit contingent on the opinion of the High Court. On a case stated for the High Court—Held (1) that notice under s. 527 of Bombay Act III of 1888 was not necessary, that section not being applicable to suits brought to enforce payment of compensation under s. 301 of the Act; (2) that the suit was not barred by limitation. Per Farran, J.—A suit against the Municipality of Bombay for compensation for land acquired by the Municipality under s. 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 is not an action of tort or quasi-tort, but a simple action for the price of land which the terms of s. 301 of the Act impose upon the Commissioner to pay. The obligation to pay that price is of the same nature, (1) whether the owner assents to the valuation of the land placed upon it by the Commissioner; (2) whether the value is determined by the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court; or (3) whether it is left undetermined. S. 527 does not apply to any of these three cases. In all of them the obligation to pay is imposed by s. 301, and does not arise from the manner in which the amount of the price to be paid is arrived at. S. 504 prescribes the only mode in which, in case of dispute, the value of the land can be determined. If the owner of land disputes the Commissioner's valuation, he must apply to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court within a year. If he does not do so, the result is that he loses the power of effectually disputing the Commissioner's valuation, but does not lose his right to the amount of the valuation. The owner of land has a remedy independent of the provision of s. 504. That section only deals with cases where there is a dispute as to the value of the land, and leaves untouched those cases where there is no such dispute, but where the Commissioner for some reason declines to pay. In such cases the owner is left to his ordinary remedy, no special mode of procedure being prescribed. Cases in which there has been a dispute, but in which the owner abandons his claim to dispute the valuation of the Commissioner, fall within the latter category. Muneklal Motilal v Municipal Commissioner of Bombay 19 Bom 407.

The plaintiffs were owners of a house consisting of a ground floor and upper story and measuring 77 feet in length. On the south side of the house was a gully, 3 feet 6 inches wide, separating it from another upper-storied house. The plaintiffs in this suit complained that in January 1891 the defendant by his servants dug a trench 8 feet deep, along the whole length of the gully for the purpose of laying a drain pipe, and that the work was done so negligently that the plaintiffs' house was injured and became in such a dangerous condition that it had to be pulled down. The plaintiffs claimed Rs. 3,996 as damages. The defendant denied the negligence, and alleged that the work was not done by his servants or agents but, by a contractor. For the defendant it was contended that the notice of action given by the plaintiffs under s 527 of the Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888) was insufficient. The notice stated "that one S L, a contractor under you, and as such being your agent and servant, excavated a trench, etc." It was argued that this was not a good notice, as it only alleged a cause of action arising out of the acts of the defendant's servants and agents, and not out of the acts of a contractor. Held, that the notice was sufficient. The section only required the notice to state with reasonable particularity the cause of action, and this was done. The individual by whom the damage was done was specified, and the acts which caused the damage were clearly set forth.

Held, that the words of the Regulation point to the actual value as the basis of remuneration, while the Court-fee value in suits of this class may bear no relation to the actual value.

The principle and rule of taxation ought as far as possible be such as to secure that the successful party should recover from his opponent such costs as are necessary to enable him to place his case properly before the Court, and this end can best be secured by adopting the actual value as the basis of the taxation.

The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant, a farmer of abkari duties on the manufacture of spirits, under s. 60 of Bombay Regulation XXI of 1827, a sum of money alleged to have been illegally levied by him as tax or rent through the mamlatdar in respect of certain cocoanut trees tapped by the plaintiff in 1877-78 and 1878-79. Held that the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. On July 1883, a further resolution was passed to the effect that, for the purposes of s. 4 of Act II of 1863, the village should be held to be restored after formal enquiry. Held, that resolution amounted to an adjudication by competent officers under s 4 (k) of Act X of 1876 and that the Civil Courts, therefore, had jurisdiction to entertain a claim for interest on the mesne profits which had been paid to plaintiffs with the restoration of the land Also by Birdwood, J., Semble that, as plaintiff's claim was based on Government's decision in their favour s. 4 (f) of Act X of 1876 would not apply. Janardanrav Ganpatrav v The Secretary of State for India. on 31st July 1879, the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assesment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879 a punitive police post was established in the village, under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867 on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between January and April 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdar for arrears of revenue, and realized by the sale a sum of Rs 608-12-8. This sum was more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879-80 but the Collector, after deducting the arrears due for 1878-79 applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid, the village was attached on the 1st of July 1880, under s. 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff filed the present suit against Government to recover possession of the village and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the suit was barred under s. 4 cl. (c), of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876) that it was also barred by limitation. Held, also, that the plaintiff's claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not barred by s. 4, cl. (c). of Act X of 1876, as the order of forfeiture could not be considered "a proceeding for the realization of land revenue." The proceeding authorized by law for the realization of land revenue i-e the attachment of the village having been taken, no other proceeding could legally be taken as against the plaintiff, till the expiration of twelve years from the date of the attachment. Held further, that the claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not time-barred, as it was governed by art. 120 of the Limitation Act. 4-Service inam land—Suit for a declaration of title to trees thereon and for damages—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874)—Hereditary officer—Officiator.

The plaintiff complained that he was prevented from cutting the trees growing on land situate in the village of Tungarli, belonging to certain persons who had sold the trees to him. He claimed damages and an injunction restraining the Collector from interfering with him. The defendant pleaded that the trees did not belong to the plaintiff's vendors, being on service inam land. The lower Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the land, on which the trees were growing, was service inam land, and that the plaintiff's vendors had no title to them. On appeal, the High Court, on the evidence, upheld the lower Court's decision that the land was inam service land, but held that it did not necessarily follow that the trees upon it were the property of Government, and not of the vatandars. The latter might be the owners of the trees subject to a condition. The case was, therefore, remanded to the District Court for a finding on an issue as to whether the holders of service inam lands had a title to the trees on the lands, and, if so, whether they had the right to cut down trees without the permission of the Collector. On this finding the District Judge found in the affirmative. The case then came again before the High Court, when a preliminary objection was taken that under s. 4 of Act X of 1876 the Court had no jurisdiction. Held that, it having been decided that land in question was service inam land, the Court, under s. 4, cl. (a), of Bombay Act X of 1876, ceased to have jurisdiction over the plaintiff's claim against Government in respect of the trees growing thereon, as such claims related to property appertaining to the office of a village officer.

5.—Rev. Jur. Act S. 4—

The Proviso to s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, contains no exceptions in respect of holdings unaccompanied by proprietory right in the soil and there is no saving clause which would suggest that such a claim to such holdings might fall within the purview of the Pensions Act. The right of an alienee of the revenue to sue for disturbance of his possession by a stranger or by Government is clearly recognised by the proviso and the only condition required is that the claim should be under an enactment instrument, sanad

8.—S. 4 (a)—Land held as Saranjam—Suit against Government—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Act XI of 1852—Decision of the Inam Commissioner—Finality of decision:

The Inam Commissioner decided in 1859, under the provisions of Act XI of 1852, that certain estate was Saranjam and not Sarva Inam. On the death of its holder P, in 1899, Government resumed the property on the ground that it was Saranjam and granted it to V, one of the grandsons of P. The plaintiff, another grandson of P, sued the Secretary of State for India and V, for a declaration of title to and for possession of the property, alleging that it was Sarva Inam and that it was not competent to Government to resume and re-grant it to any one it liked. Held, (1) That the decision of the Inam Commissioner was by virtue of the provisions of Rule 2 of Schedule A of Act II 1852, final as regards the land and interests concerned in the decision. (2) That the title to and continuance of the estate must be determined, under Schedule B, Rule 10, of the Act under such rules as Government might find it necessary to issue from time to time. (3) That in accordance with those rules the estate was on P's death resumed by Government who granted it to V. 9-S 4 (a), (b), (i), (j), (k)-"Any other written grant"—"Treaty."

In the Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, s 4. cl (j), the phrase, "any other written grant" means any written grant other than that which falls within clauses (h) and (i) of the same section. The clauses (h),(i),(j) (k) of the section are independent of one another; the source of title referred to in each stands apart from the rest and each clause is connected only with that portion of the proviso which precedes cl (h).

The term "treaty" in s 4 (a) of the Act, is to be strictly construed and is to be confined to an agreement between two or more independent Sovereign Powers or States.

The effect of the Amending Act (XVI of 1877) is to restore the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to the extent mentioned in that Act in the district mentioned in the schedule thereto, and so far to remove the bar created by S 4 of the principal Act X of 1876.

An objection to come within either of the two heads 1 and 3 of clause (b) of section 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, must be an objection which reaches them directly, i. e; an objection to them per se which admits the liability to pay land revenue on the part of the objector but quarrels with its amount or incidence or the validity and effect of the notification of Survey Settlement as by themselves objectionable, not because some other right affects them or makes them inapplicable to his particular case.

Objections in s, 4 (b) of the Act may be raised by a suit or in defence to a suit: but in whichever way they are raised they must be of the particular nature described in clause (b). Where they fall outside that class, they can be raised in defence as well as by a suit.

A Forest officer is not a Revenue officer within the definition in Sec. 2 of the Land Revenue Code Bombay Act V of 1879, and does not become one merely by being placed under a Revenue officer for purposes of control.

Section II of Act X of 1876, only applies to an act or omission of a Revenue officer and only in cases where the law allows an appeal.

Act X of 1876 must be construed strictly. No right of appeal can be given except by express words. Narayan Ballal v The Secretary of State For India, P J 1895 P 317= 20 Bom 803.

12.—Practice—Procedure.—

Abaji Parashram v. Secretary of State for India 22 Bom 579.

Notes.—Ref: 22 Bom 583.

14.—Section 11 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act is not a complex statute of Limitation for the protection of government. Its object is to prevent government from being exposed to law suits arising out of the orders of its subordinate officers before its superior officers have been afforded the opportunity of considering, and it may be, of disallowing the executive orders of its subordinate officials. The words "an appeal allowed by law," used in the section, should therefore not be treated as equivalent to an appeal within the time allowed by law" it rather refers to the appeals which the law prescribes, and has no reference to the limitation in point of time, which the law may impose upon the bringing of such appeals the term "allowed by law" cannot do double duty, and be held to be both descriptive of the nature and number of the appeals which a claimant must present, and also be employed to impose a limit of time within which he must bring such appeals. Statutes imposing restrictions upon the subject's right of suit should be construed strictly. Ranchhod Haribhai v Secretary of State for India P J (1897) 378=22 Bom 583.

15.—S. II—All such appeals—Civil Court—Jurisdiction.

The expression "all such appeals" in s. II of Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, means appeals in respect of the "act or omission." Hence, the bar created by s. 11 does not apply where the fact or omission concerned is not an order or decision in respect of which there is a right of appeal under the Land Revenue Code.

In 1898, A took advantage of the Sind Incumbered Estates Act, 1896, and an order of management had been made, and A's estate was still in management at the date of suit. Held, that, under s. 9 of Act XX of 1896, the Court had no jurisdiction. Under S. 29 of the Act, the share of a person, who is under the protection of the manager, cannot be alienated beyond the term of his natural life. A sale of such is invalid as to any period after his death.

A was entitled to a share in certain survey numbers and was under the protection of the Manager, Encumbered Estates in Sind. After discharge from management, he acquired the rest of the survey numbers and then sold the whole survey numbers to B. B subsequently sold ⅓rd share of survey numbers to C.

Upon the death of A, his heirs sued B and C, to recover the shares which belonged to A, while the property was under management. The claim against C., was given up and the suit as against him dismissed. As against B, plaintiff's claim was decreed. B contended that the share awarded to plaintiff should be reduced by ⅓rd, the share sold to C.

Held, that the contention was untenable. The ⅓rd share sold to C must have been out of the residue of the survey numbers, which A acquired subsequent to discharge from management and to which also B had an absolute title. Therefore, the sale to C, did not operate as an alienation of the share sued for by plaintiffs. Tekoomal v Din Mahomed 10 Ind Cas 550.

(3) Land Revenue.

1—Revenue survey—Entry of tenants in registers—Landlord and tenant.

The mere entry of the names of the tenants of a khot in the Government registers as occupants under the Revenue Survey Act, I (Bombay) of 1865, does not constitute an injury to the landlord of a tangible kind, of which the Civil Courts can take cognizance. The khot's rights as landlord, if they can be established, cannot be prejudiced by any proceeding under the Survey Act, there being nothing in that Act, or the rules framed under it, which affects the rights of subjects of the Government inter se. The utmost benefit which the tenants can derive, as against their landlord, from being entered as occupants under the Act, is a right to claim a deduction of the amount of assessment paid by them direct to the Government. If they deny his title, he can sue them either to establish his title and recover the full rent due to him under his contract with them or to eject them as holding possession of his lands by a title which they themselves repudiate.

2—Boundary dispute.

"Boundary dispute," as used in the Survey Act (Bombay Act I of 1865), means a contention between two neighbouring land-proprietors as to where a boundary line or boundary marks has or have been fixed by the survey officers. After the functions of the latter officers have ceased in a district, the Collector acting under Act III of 1846 is the proper officer to determine such a dispute, and fix the proper position of the boundary marks. But where a landholder claims to recover from a neighbouring holder land alleged to have been usurped or encroached upon by the latter, the person aggrieved must file his plaint in Court (which in the case of a claim for mere possession may be the Court of the Mamlatdar or the ordinary Civil Court), where the detemination of the Collector as to the proper position of the boundary line or marks (although it of itself confers or withdraws no right of possession) affords valuable evidence in adjudicating upon the rights of the parties. Pitambar Dhari v Sambhajirav 8 B H C A C 185.

5—Power of Government to raise assessment—Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, s. 4, cls. 2 and 3—

The words in s. 25 of Bombay Act I of 1865 confer upon Government no absolute power in all cases to fix any assessment they may please. But that section, as also s 4, cl. 2 Regulation XVII of 1827, distinctly limit the power of Government to raise the assessment on land held partially exempt by right. Government, however, may set aside such limitations at their discretion by a legislative enactment, as provided by cl. 3 of the above Regulation. But Government can exercise this power only under "specific" rules In Bombay Act I of 1865, s. 25, no such "specific" rules are to be found as would indicate that the Legislature intended to set aside the provisions of cl. 2, s. 4, Regulation XVII of 1827, and to enable the revenue officers to ignore all exemptions except those which they may themselves choose to recognize. Where plaintiff had enjoyed "Savai sut" or a remission of one-fourth for a period of more than thirty years with respect to lands on which assessment became leviable in 1805 A. D., he was held by the High Court to have established a prescriptive right to such a remission.

7—Ss. 35, 48 — Power of local Legislature—Government land—Suit to set aside attachment on land—Building, Erection of.—

In a suit for setting aside a summary attachment, under Bombay Act I of 1865, placed by the Collector on land held on a settlement for a period not exceeding thirty years, the value was held to be five times the assessment, and the stamp duty calculated upon it, irrespective of the actual market value or the amount for which the land was attached. The holder of a cocoanut part in Bandora, in the island of Salsette, in the Thana District, paying an annual assessment of Rs. 39 to Government, built a bungalow upon it without the permission of the Collector, who, under the rule purporting to have been issued by the Government of Bombay on the 1st February 1869 in accordance with the provisions of s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, demanded from him a fine equal to sixty times the assessment, and, on the plaintiff's failure to pay the fine, summarily attached the land under the provisions of s. 48 of that Act. Held, first, that the Government of Bombay had no authority to make the rule of 1st February 1869, and that, s. 35 of the Survey Act providing no penalty for building without the Collector's permission, the attachment was illegal. Secondly, that the expressions "Government land" and "Land belonging to Government" in Bombay Act I of 1865 mean land of which Government is the proprietor, and do not apply to land in which the proprietary right in the soil vests in a private individual, whether or not it be subject to the payment of assessment to Government. Quære—Whether the amount of the fine contemplated in s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, if not paid, is a charge leviable by summary attachment under s. 48. Collector of Thana v. 2—S 12—Inability of guardian to contract on behalf of infant ward, so as to bind him personally—Effect of Act VI of 1862 (Bombay), S. 12, in regard to a charge upon a talukhdari estate in the Ahmedabad District during the period of management.—

A guardian cannot contract in the name of a ward, so as to impose on him a personal liability. Act VI of 1862 (Bombay), "for the amelioration of the condition of talukhdars in the Ahmedabad Collectorate and for their relief from debt", was intended to deal with all debts and liabilities which could possibly impose a charge upon the talukhdari estate at the end of the period of management; when the estate was to be restored to the talukhdar free of incumbrance, excepting the Government revenue. If debts amounted to more than the surplus of rents during the management, of which the maximum period was twenty years, they were not to be paid. A widow, as guardian of her infant son, the heir of talukhdari estate in the above district, validly transferred villages, part thereof, and in the deed of transfer to which her ward was, by her as his guardian, nominally a party, contracted to indemnify the purchaser in case the Government should claim and enforce a right to revenue upon the villages which she transferred as being rent-free. The deed purported to make both guardian and ward personally liable in this respect, and also charged the liability upon other parts of the talukhdari estate. The infant attained majority and the estate was then placed under management within Act VI of 1862. During the period of management the Government claimed and enforced payment of revenue upon the villages. Held, that there was no personal liability on the part of the talukhdar created by the above; also that, if the charge on the estate had been validily made, it fell, at all events, within the terms of s. 12 of Act VI of 1862, absolving estates from liability for debts incurred, not only before, but during the period of management. Waghela Rajsanji v. 3—S 12 and s.20—Talukhdar's power of disposal over his landed estates after the expiration of the management by the Talukhdari Settlement officer.

Under s 12 of the Ahmedabad Talukhdars Act (VI of 1862), debts or liabilities incurred by a talukhdar during the management of the Talukhdari Settlement Officer are not enforceable against landed estates. His personal liability for the same remains unaffected by the Act. This personal liability furnishes a sufficient consideration for a subsequent obligation, so as to bind the landed estates by a contract made after the period of the management by the Talukhdari Officer had expired. From and after the expiration of that period, the talukhdar becomes, under s 20, the absolute proprietor of his estate, and he is then at liberty to create a valid charge upon his estate for debts contracted during the period of of the management. Acccordingly, where a talukhdar had, after the withdrawal of the management by the Talukhdari Settlement Officer, encumbered his landed estate under several mortgage bonds, passed partly in renewal of old bonds and partly in consideration of old debts contracted during the period of the management,—Held, that the mortgage-bonds created valid and binding encumbarances upon the estate.

A lessee, from Government of the right to levy tolls, admitted into partnership with him the plaintiff and two others. One of the conditions attached to the lease prohibited sub-letting.

The plaintiff having brought a suit for his share of the profits realized in the transaction, the Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the partnership was illegal, being of opinion that sub-letting and admitting a partner were identical.

Held, reversing the decree that the partnership was not illegal.

Where in such a partnership two sets of account were kept, one true and the other false, held that such practice, however reprehensible, was not illegal under Sec 7 of the Tolls Bombay Act III of 1875, and did not disentitle the plaintiff to show as between himself and his partners what was the actual profits of the concern.

1.—S 24—Meaning of the words " Regulating the travelling "—Validity of Regulation made under the section for regulating the conduct of the Company's servants.—

The words " regulating the travelling " in s 24 of the Bombay Tramways Act (Bombay Act I of 1874) mean laying down rules, as to how persons shall travel that is to say, rules for the conduct and behaviour of the persons who travel, and cannot be held to include rules for the conduct of the Company's servants, prescribing what they shall do, or what they shall not do, in the matter, for instance, of issuing tickets. S 24 of Bombay Act I of 1874 authorizes the Bombay Tramway Company to make regulations "for regulating the travelling in or upon any carriage belonging to them." Under this section, the Company made the following regulation:—"Any conductor who shall neglect to issue a ticket to a passenger, or shall issue to such passenger a ticket bearing a number other than one of the numbers contained in such books, or shall issue a ticket of a lower denomination than the amount of the fare, or non-consecutive in number or a ticket other than the ticket provided by the Company for the journey to be travelled, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding Rs 25." Held that the regulation was ultra vires.

2.—(1 of 1874) Sec 30—Bombay Municipal Corporation—Right of purchase-Notice "Similar," interpretation of—Date of Notice—Purchase, meaning of.—

Section 30 of the Bombay Tramways Act, 1874 provides, " The said Municipal Corporation of the City of Bombay shall have the right of purchasing the said Tramway——after expiration of twenty one years from the 12th day of March 1873, upon declaring its intention so to do within six months after expiration of the said twenty-one years and shall have a renewed right of purchase at the end of every seven years after the expiration of the said twenty-one years upon similar notice being given. " In March 1901 one of the period of seven years expired; and the Corporation gave to the Tramway Company notice of an intention to purchase. The Municipality served for this purpose, three notices, first two of which were served on the 11th and 12th idem respectively: while the third, though dated the 13th was not served till the 14th March. Respecting these notices the Tramway Co. contended that the notices, on the 11th and 12th were premature, because the words " at the end of seven years " related to, not only the right of purchase, but also the time at which notice was to be given: and the notice served on the 14th was too late, because it was not given in as short a time after the end of the year as was possible with exertion on the part of the Corporation.

Held, that, the word " similar, " in s 50 of the Bombay Tramways Act, had reference not only to the terms of the notice, but also prescribed the time within which notice was to be given : thus the Corporation had six months from the expiration of the period of seven years within which to give notice of its intention, and the notice served on the 14th March was served within time.

Per Jenkins C J.—"Though the words ' purchase ' and ' purchaser ' may technically imply an acquisition of property otherwise than by descent, in relation to a sale of land, they are commonly used as appropriate to the stage prior to actual completion by conveyance or transfer."

3.—Municipal Corporation-Right of Purchase —Purchase on behalf of a third person.

The notice contemplated by s. 30 of the Bombay Tramways Act is not invalid solely by the fact that the Corporation in exercising their right of purchase are not acting for themselves but for and on behalf of a third person. There is nothing in the Tramways Act which expressly or impliedly prohibits such a transaction; nothing to show that if the Corporation exercise the power conferred upon them by s. 30 and acquire the tramways, they are bound to keep them in their own hands and to work them themselves.

ly wagering, to be a wagering contract, it must be satisfied that the intention of the parties was in no circumstances either to give or to take delivery. This intention is not to be confounded with capacity. A party may be able to fulfil a contract and yet have no intention whatever of doing so.

If A, usually an honest dealer, knows that B is a pure gambler, then any contract which he makes with B with that knowledge will be a contract in furtherance of wagering, and will fall within the scope of Bombay Act III of 1865, while it will likewise follow that, waiving that consideration. A cannot strictly be said to have "intended" to give or take delivery to or from B.

Both parties to a contract may intend to wager or one party may intend to wager, and the other party may know that, that is his sole intention and knowing it, enter into the contract. When the facts found warrant the Court in adopting either of those statements of fact, then the contract is a wager under the law of this Presidency. But where only one party intends to wager and the other neither intends himself to wager nor knows that it is the sole intention of the former, then the contract is not a wagering contract from the point of view of the latter and he has a right of action on it. Mathuradas Gokuldas & Co v. 2.—S. 30-Bombay Act III of 1865—Wagering contracts—Teji Mandi transactions—Duties of agent.

Teji Mandi transactions are in the nature of gambling transactions. The prohibition contained in S. 30 Contract Act, 1872, applies only to the case of winners. A person, who has won a wager or a bet, cannot sue to recover the amount deposited by the loser with the stakeholder.

Under the general law of wagering administered in England and India (with the exception of the Bombay Presidency), an agent, who has received moneys on behalf of his principal, must pay those moneys, to the principal even though the contracts under which he received them were not only void but actually illegal.

The Bombay Act III of 1865 embraces not only every conceivable form of wagering contracts, but contracts made in furtherance of wagering contracts, and all contracts made by way of security or guarantee of wagering contracts; and it prohibits all suits for moneys paid or payable in respect of wagering contracts. Ramchandra Shivdar v. (1) Form of bond.

1—Bond not to be operative until dishonour of hundi with respect to which bond has been executed.

An instrument which is in the nature of a bond is not the less a bond because it does not come into operation unless and until the hundi with respect to which it is passed has been dishonoured. Lakshmandas Raghunathdas v Rambhau Mansaram. 20 Bom 791.

2—Bond—Promissory note.

Where an instrument containing a promise to pay money advanced is attested, is not payable to order or bearer and under which the executant obliges himself to pay the amount to another, is a bond within the meaning of s. 2 (5) (b) of the Stamp Act, 1899. Venku v Sitaram. 6 Bom L R 841.

(2) Incomplete bond.

3—Bond, Incomplete.

A bond, the terms of which provide for its being entered into by four separate individuals, is incomplete if executed by three only. Krishnadas v Balkrishnadas. 11th January 1872.

The defendant entered into a contract with the President of the Taluq Board in respect of the collection of fees in a market which provided inter alia—"If, I, my agent or servant were to act contrary to the above regulations, I shall be liable to pay a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 imposed by the President * * * or I am not entitled to object if my gutta is put up for auction again subject to the loss that may be sustained by the Taluq Board." The President brought this suit for recovery of Rs 50 on the allegation that the defendant's agent collected more than the established fees from the people. Held-That the agreement was not an instrument of the same nature as a bail bond or recognizance within the meaning of the exception to S. 73 of the Contract Act. (2) The bond is one given for the performance of a public duty or act in which the public are interested and is not one given "under the provision, of any law," there being no section in the Act which authorizes or requires the giving of such a bond. (3) That the clause authorizing the plaintiff to put the defendant's "gutta" up to auction did not preclude the plaintiff from recovering under the contract. (4) That the penal clause of the Local Boards Act Ss. 162 (c) and 162 (d), did not preclude the plaintiff from recovering against the defendant under the contract. (5) That the suit for recovery of the penalty mentioned in the clause was governed by either Art, 68 or 115 of the Limitation Act and not by Art. 6. (6) That the amount of Rs. 50 cannot be said, under the circumstances, to be exhorbitant though the amount of damages are for the lower Court to determine. (7) That under S. 74 it is not necessary for plaintiff to prove any actual damage or loss. Taluk Board of Kundapur v Lakshminarayana. (1906) 17 M L J 537.

(4) Assignment of bond.

7—Bond—Promissory note—Attestation.

Under the Stamp Act, a promissory note unless it is payable to order or bearer, is to be deemed a bond if attested. R D Sethna v Mirza Mahomed Shirazi. 9 Bom L R 1034.

(7) Necessity of signature of an obligee.

8—Signature necessary.

According to native practice, the signature of the obligee of a bond is an essential part of the document, and the mere fact that he was present and assented to the bond being written is not enough to charge him thereon. Murharrav v Punjaji. 1882 P J 365

(8) Condition in bond for money lent.

9—Right of suit.

(11) Bond payable on demand.

13—Bond payable on demand.

(12) Bond payable within one year.

14—Bond payable within one year.

Where defendant executed a registered bond on 15th March 1873 by which he agreed to re-pay the loan within one year and plaintiff sued on the bond on the 14th March, 1874, it was held that limitation ran from the end of the year and that the suit was within time. Sher Jang v. (13) Bond with collateral agreement to accept rents.

15.—Right of suit.

In a suit to recover money (principal and interest) alleged to have been due on a bond, defendant pleaded that subsequent to the execution of the bond plaintiff had taken from the obligor an ijara and a dur-ijara and executed ijara-kabuliats, agreeing to accept payment of the bond by setting off the rents due under the kabuliats. It was found that the kabuliats stipulated that during their term the rent should, year after year and instalment by instalment, be

The proposition that a guardian of a minor cannot bind his ward personally by a simple contract debt, by a covenant or by any promise to pay money or damages, is subject to the modification that the promise will not bind the minor, unless it has been made merely to keep alive a debt, for which the ward's property was liable.

Where the promise is to pay money, which has been expended for necessaries, the estate of the minor may be liable, not on the promise, but because the money has been supplied.

(16) Cause of action.

18.—Limitation.

J, after entering into a bond for the payment of a sum of money, adopted one S, who took the family estate at J's death. While in the enjoyment of the estate, the bond-holders brought a suit against him to realize the debt, and obtained a decree. Under the decree, the obligees sought to sell the property which by the time of the execution had come into the hands of R (a great-nephew of J's), who sued and eventually succeeded in having J's adoption declared void. R then sued to set aside so far as it affected him, the decree for the sale of the property, and in this suit also he eventually succeeded. The representative of the original bond-holders then brought a suit against R to recover the money due on the bond. Held that plaintiff's right of suit first arose, not from the last decree in favour of R, but from the time when the debt became due under the terms of the bond. Rajkristo Singh v Huro Soonduree Chowdrain. 13 W R 313.

Defendant executed a bond to plaintiff on the 29th April 1869, on condition of plaintiffs releasing S from arrest against whom plaintiff had a decree and the bond was payable within 6 months, if S did not pay in the meantime. Plaintiff brought a suit on the bond on the 5th May, 1873, contending that there was litigation between himself and S till 26th October, 1871, in respect of execution of decree and time should run from that date. Held that the suit should have been brought within 3 years after the expiry of the six months. Bhai Sawaya Singh v Hira Nand. 58 P R 1874.

(24) Suit on bond said to have been passed under pressure.

29—Court of Wards—Disqualified proprietor—Oudh Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1876)—Ch. VIII, Secs 161 to 177—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) Sec 16—Act VI of 1899, Sec. 2—Hard bargain—Undue influence—Compound interest.

The group of Sections (161 to 177) in the Oudh Land Revenue Act, 1876 entitled "Ch. VIII, Courts of Wards" was not intended to interfere with the personal status or rights of an adult disqualified proprietor who is neither idiot nor lunatic, except as regards the management of his property or anything expressly prohibited. There is no prohibition of a disqualified proprietor contracting debts or borrowing money, but he is not at liberty to create any charge upon his property without the sanction of the Court.

In 1886, the defendant being then largely involved in debt, was declared a disqualified proprietor under the provisions of the Oudh Land Revenue Act, and his property was placed under the charge of the Court of Wards. In 1889 he borrowed from the plaintiff without the sanction of the Court the sum of Rs, 4,500 and stipulated to pay interest at the rate of 24 per cent. per annum. In 1892 a further sum of Rs, 1,250 was advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant and the latter executed a bond in favour of the plaintiff for the total sum due to him, but the interest was reduced from 24 per cent. to 18 per cent. per annum. The plaintiff brought the present suit for the recovery of the amount due under the bond. There was no fraud in the matter and no pressure was put upon the defendant by the plaintiff for his agents to induce him to accept the conditions offered to him.

(24) Suit on bond said to have been passed under pressure.—Concld.

Held, that although the defendant was left free to contract debt, yet he was under a peculiar disability and placed in a position of helplessness by the fact of his estate being under the control of the Court of Wards, and the position of the parties was such that the plaintiff was "in a position to dominate the will" of the defendant within the meaning of the amended Sec. 16 of the Indian Court Act. In this case the lender used his position to demand and obtained from the borrower more onerous terms than were reasonable, and the bond sued on must be set aside.

Held further, that the Subordinate Judge was wrong in deciding the case in accordance with what he supposed to be English equitable doctrine. He ought to have considered only the terms of s. 16 of the Indian Contract Act.

Apart from a recent Statute, an English Court of Equity could not give relief from a transaction or contract merely on the ground that it was a hard bargain, except perhaps where the extortion is so great as to be of itself evidence of fraud. Dhanipal Das v. 31.—Material alteration after execution—Dismissal in toto.

In a suit based upon two bonds purporting to be executed by the five defendants, it was found that the name of the fifth defendant (Nabi Bakhsh) had been added by plaintiff after execution without the consent of the defendants.

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover from any of the defendants, the alteration in a material particular of a deed after execution without the consent of the other party to such deed disentitling the party who has so altered it from seeking afterwards to enforce it. 7 Cal 616; 4 All 62; and 103 P R 1883 followed. Karam Ali v. (27) Fraudulent alteration of hypothecation clause.

32.—Alteration—Fraud.

The obligee of a bond for the payment of money in which a certain share of a village had been hypothecated as collateral security, having fraudulently altered such bond so as to make it appear that a larger share of such village was hypothecated, sued the obligor to recover the money due on such bond by the sale of such large share. The obligor admitted the execution of the bond and that a certain sum was due thereon.

Held, on the question whether under these circumstances the obligee was entitled to relief as regards his claim for money, that he was not so entitled, inasmuch as the bond on which his suit was brought must be discarded, being a forgery and therefore the suit as brought failed. Gunga Ram v Chandan Singh. 1 W N 118, 4 All 62.

The test for determining the materiality of an alteration in an instrument is to see whether the addition gave a different legal character to the writing and whether it would completely change the nature of the relation towards each other of the parties to it and their remedies upon it.

If a party to a deed makes an alteration in a covenant after the deed is executed, not only the covenant but the whole deed becomes void.

Any change in an instrument, which causes it to speak a different language in legal effect from that which it originally spoke which changes the legal identity or character of the instrument either in its terms or the relation of the parties to it, is a material change, or technically an alteration and such a change will invalidate the instrument against all parties not consenting to the change.

The question, to what extent the indentity of an instrument must be changed in order that its legal effect will be altered, so as to bring the case within the terms of a material alteration vitiating the instrument, must depend upon the nature of the alteration in each particular case. The test is not, necessarily, whether the pecuniary liability of one of the parties has been increased by the change; it is of no consequence, whether the alteration would be beneficial or detrimental to the party sought to be charged on the contract. The important question is, whether the integrity and identity of the contract have been changed.

Where a party, by his own act alters a genuine instrument, so that it cannot be the foundation of any legal remedy, he ought not to be permitted to prove the promise contained in it by any other evidence, on the principle that the debt is merged in the instrument and hence the destruction of the latter leaves nothing upon which to sue.

In the absence of fraud, the instrument only, and not the original debt is, in such circumstances, destroyed, but where a party has voluntarily and fraudulently altered a deed and has thus destroyed the evidence of his debt, he should not be allowed to fall back upon the original consideration and establish it by evidence which he himself has destroyed.

As an ordinary rule where the defendant has notice of an alteration in an instrument, which is the foundation of the action, he should raise the issue by his pleading, whether the alteration is material and the instrument has become void If, however, in proving the execution of a note the testimony discovers the fact that it was designedly changed by the payee, the Court is not precluded from giving effect to the well settled rule of law that an instrument is avoided by a material alteration. 7 Cal 616 and 2 P L R 107 Fol: 13 M & W 343; 5 E & B 83; 1 Sm L C 107, 767 (11th Ed). 167 Mass 426, 57 Am St, Rep 466, 6 Walh s. 80, 42 I11 R 375, and 50 Mo. 157, Ref 2 M & Cr 890, 29 L J Ex 115, 1 Ch 451, Dist 3 B & Ad 660 and 1 [illegible]Sm L C 801 (11th Ed), Ref 24 Am St Rep 250, 12 Am St Rep 754, 4 L R A 196, 16 L R A 468, 47 Am St Rep 929, Ref 5 C W N 56; 25 Bom 616; 23 Mad 137; 25 All 580 Dist; Gour Chandra Das v. Where the defendant executed to the plaintiff a bond for the payment of the balance found to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff upon an adjustment of the account of their mutual dealings, which bond contained the following stipulation. "I shall pay the money after causing the payment to be entered on the back of this bond, or after taking a receipt for the same. I shall not lay and claim to any payment made except in this way,"—Held that though the defendant at the time of the adjustment disputed the correctness of the account, yet that, by having executed the bond and made payments under it, he must be held to have waived his objection, and in a suit on the bond could not be permitted to re-open the question of the correctness of the balance, though he might possibly have been allowed to do so had he alleged that he had discovered errors in the account after the execution of the bond, and had he specified some of the alleged errors. Held, also, that the stipulation in the bond could not be permitted to control courts of justice as to the evidence which, keeping within the rules of the general law of evidence in this country, they may admit of payment; and the Anglo-Indian law of evidence not excluding oral evidence of payments, it would be against good conscience and the policy of the law to reject it, though the absence of endorsements is a circumstance of some importance, which ought not to be over-looked, but is by no means conclusive. (37) Acknowledgment in letter of evidence of missing bond.

44—Acknowledgment in letter of evidence of missing bond—Interest at contract rate—Interest not to exceed principal —

In a suit to recover the amount of principal and interest due upon two separate bonds, one of which alone was forthcoming, the other being referred to and vouched by a note of hand of the obligor, the issues settled and recorded by the Court below for trial were, first, whether the first bond was the deed of the deceased obligor; and, secondly, whether the note of hand was under the seal of the obligor, and if so, whether it was a valid acknowledgment of the debt claimed on the second bond, and up to what time and at what rate interest was due. The Court below, notwithstanding that the first bond actually proved, purported to have been given on an account settled, allowed evidence of the accounts and dealings between the obligor and obligees previous to the execution of both bonds, and, after having referred the same to an accountant, decreed the Plaintiffs entitled to a less sum than sued for, with interest upon the account thus taken. Held, on appeal by the Judicial Committee that the Courts below had miscarried, first, in allowing the opening of, and founding the, decrees upon settled accounts, the only question upon the issues recorded for their judgment being the validity of both bonds, of which they were satisfied; and, secondly, that from the frame of the issues neither the obligees nor their representatives were bound to prove the consideration for the bonds, but were entitled to recover the whole principal and interest due thereon, which was decreed, and the decree of the Court below amended to that effect. Shah Koondun Lall and Phoondun Lall v Rajah Ameer Husain Khan. 11 M I A 120.

The three childless widows of a zemindar instituted a suit against the rightful heir to their husband's estate, in which they unsuccessfully disputed his legitimacy. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond, whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered their husband's estate, and virtually gave to him the control of their suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise, the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right, and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows ; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he hold from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last mentioned bond—Held that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that, as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Semble—The transaction, even if valid, did not amount to a novation, for the plaintiff never abandoned his claim against the widows, but only agreed to abandon his remedy against them in case he obtained satisfaction of his claim from the heir.

Suit brought on 24th April 1873 for principal and interest due on a bond dated 30th October 1850. The debt was payable by eight annual instalments, on failure of any one of which the whole amount was to be payable on demand. No instalment was paid, and when the suit was brought, defendant pleaded that the suit was barred as three years had elapsed from the date on which the last instalment became due. Held, that the usual clause, that on failure to pay one instalment the whole amount shall be payable on demand, gave a mere election to plaintiff of converting the obligation into a different one; that that election was never exercised, and that the document continued to be one securing the payment of a debt by instalments, as to all of which the action had long been barred; and that it was unnecessary, therefore, to consider whether, in the present case "on demand" must not be construed according to its meaning at the period at which the words were written. Eathamakala Subbammah v. but the obligee subsequently accepts payments of one or more sums as an instalment or instalments due under the bond, such acceptance amounts to a waiver of the condition of forfeiture, and puts an end to the cause of action which had accrued, so that the bond is set up again as a bond payable by instalments, and no cause of action under the condition arises until some fresh default is made in the payment of a subsequent instalment. Passamma Row Garu v. 1871 and 1877, art 75—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 194; 1877, s. 210—Power of Court to alter contract between the parties.

Where a bond is payable by instalment, and expressly stipulates for the payment of the whole debt on failure in the payment of any instalment, the law of limitation runs on the whole amount of the bond against the obligee from the day on which the obligor first makes default in the payment of any instalment, unless the obligee waive the default, and afterwards from the day on which any fresh default is made in respect of which there is no waiver. The obligee may waive the default under Acts IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 75, but the Courts have no authority to compel him to waive it. Neither Act VIII of 1859, s. 194, nor Act X of 1877, s. 210 confers any authority on the Courts to relieve a contracting party from such an express stipulation in a bond payable by instalments as to the consequence of default in punctual payment of the instalments. A debt being presently due, an agreement to pay it by instalments, with a stipulation that on default the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest, is not to be relieved against in equity. Such a stipulation is not in the nature of a penalty, inasmuch as its object is only to secure payment in a particular manner. The defendant executed to the plaintiff a bond payable by instalments, and expressly stipulating for the payment of the whole amount on failure to pay any instalment on the day fixed. He paid the first instalment, but made default in paying the second which fell due on the 3rd August 1878. On the 20th August plaintiff sued to recover the whole balance due on the bond. Defendant admitted the bond, but pleaded tender of the amount of the second instalment soon after the due date, and prayed for payment by instalments without any interest. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount claimed with costs, but ordered defendant to pay Rs. 100 and the costs at once, and the balance by yearly instalments of Rs 100 each, with interest at six per cent, till payment. The District Judge, on appeal, affirmed the decree, with a slight variation as to interest, which he directed the defendant to pay on overdue instalments only. Held by the High Court, on second appeal, that neither of the lower Courts had jurisdiction, without the consent of the parties, to substitute, for the contract made by

The defendants executed a bond in favour of the plaintiff, promising to pay the money by annual instalments: on failure to pay any instalment the creditor was to be at liberty to recover the whole amount due. The instalment payable for the years 1305 and 1306 were paid, but not on the dates fixed for payment, but thereafter. The creditor brought this suit, to recover instalments for the years 1307-1309 Fasli. The defendants set up a plea of limitation. Held that the acceptance of the instalments, after the appointed date amounted to an implied waiver of the creditor's right to recover the whole money. Waiver is implied, when a person entitled to anything does or acquiesces in something else, which is inconsistent with that to which he is entitled. Held, further, that the suit was governed by Art 75 of the Limitation Act and the right to sue accrued, when an instalment fell due, in respect to that instalment. Where a defendant sets up the defence of limitation, he must plead it, and show that the claim is barred. If, when the plaintiff has proved his case the facts show that the cause of action accrued at a date earlier than the period of limitation, and the plea of limitation has been set up by the defendant, he will be entitled to take advantage of the plaintiff's evidence that the claim is barred, and to have judgment given in his favour. The obligee of a bond, by which the obligor covenanted to pay the sum of Rs. 3,800 by the annual instalments of Rs. 200, and in which it was also agreed that payments of the instalments should be endorsed on the bond, brought a suit against the obligor alleging default in payment and claiming to recover the amount of the bond. He gave credit for payment of the instalments for seven years, and alleged that his cause of action arose upon default in payment of the eighth instalment. The bond showed on its face endorsements of the payments for which credit was given. The obligor alleged that no instalments were paid after the third year, that therefore the debt became due at an earlier date than that stated by the plaintiff, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Held that inasmuch as the defendant adduced no evidence to show that the latter instalments were not paid, and inasmuch as the evidence produced by the plaintiff did not show that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the limitation period, the plea of limitation failed. Radha Prasad Singh v Bhajan Rai. 7 All 677; 5 W N 202

(41) Power of Court to alter terms of specially registered bond

71—Act VIII of 1859, s. 194—Order to pay by instalments—Superintendence of High Court.

By bond specially registered under Act XVI of 1864, obligor stipulated to pay the entire amount secured thereby with interest at the rate therein mentioned on a day therein mentioned. There was a further stipulation that, on default of payment, the bond was to be enforced as a decree. On failure of payment, the obligee applied for execution under s. 53, Act XX of 1866, but the Subordinate Judge ordered the payment to be made by instalments. On an application to the High Court under s 15 of the Charter Act,—Held that the Subordidate Judge had no jurisdiction to pass a decree on the bond altering or varying its terms. S. 194. 2—The appellants sued the respondent on two bonds. The second bond differed from the first only in this respect that in the third clause it contained a further provision that in case of default compound interest should be payable. The question was to what amount of interest the appellants were entitled. Held, that the appellants were entitled to interest for the periods after the bonds become due at the rate payable before that date (Viz Rs 2) and such rate should not be reduced because they had not availed themselves of their right of suing when default occurred ; and that they were entitled to recover, in respect of the second bond, compound interest at the rate agreed upon. 1 All, 603) followed. Chammi Lal v Ganesh Kuar. 3 W N 35.

A ship was chartered for a voyage from Calcutta to Jedda and back While at Jedda the master found it necessary to borrow money for the wages of the crew and other purposes and with the consent of the owner tenders were invited by advertisement for a sum for which a bottomry bond was to be given Several tenders were made, and one by the charterer of the ship was accepted A bottomry bond was executed by the master, with the consent of the owner in which was included the expense of certain repairs which had been found necessary at an intermediate port on the voyage from Calcutta and for which the master had made himself liable By the bond the master bound himself his heirs executors and administrators, for the payment of the sum named therein, and part of the consideration was expressed to be the payment of the debt which the master had incurred at the intermediate port On arriving in the Hooghly the ship was taken in charge by a pilot under whose advice the master engaged a steamer to tow her to Calcutta He was sued in Calcutta for the hire of the steamer and had to pay the claim When the ship arrived in Calcutta the bond holder obtained a decree on his bond and had the ship arrested and sold but on the application of the master who had put in a claim for wages the Court ordered that the proceeds should remain in Court pending the consideration of the master's claim In a suit by the master to recover the balance of wages due to him as master of the ship and for the expense of the steamer which towed the ship up the river to Calcutta—Held the towage was a disbursement fairly made, and of which the bond holder had the benefit the master therefore had a lien on the ship for such disbursement Semble-The master also had a lien for wages down to the time when he was duly discharged, and not merely down to the time of the arrival in port and arrest of the ship The master however, having bound himself by the terms of the bond, was precluded thereby from setting up his lien against that of the bond holder, to whom on the face of the bond, he had constituted himself a debtor The Ship Portugal 6 B L R 323.

6 Hypothecation of ship—Uncertainty of contract—Yogyam adamanam

A bottomry bond given by the owner of a ship must to be valid, be given at a place where he has no personal credit or security other than the bond

A bond hypothecating a ship after reciting the consideration and the security imposed a personal liability on the hypothecators for re-payment of the amount within a fixed time and stated that if the money is not paid within the stipulated time we (the hypothecators) shall add vattam at Rs 20 per cent per annum on the amount of principal and interest accruing on that date adding vattam once in twelve months until date of payment after the stipulated time, on the adamanayogyam of the said ship and get back this mortgage bond.'

Held, that the bond was not valid as a bottomry bond, and that as a mere hypothecation the provision therein contained for vattam on yogyam of the ship was void for uncertainty, the word yogyam being indefinite in its signification.

Equity will relieve when the confusion of boundaries has been occasioned by the fraud of one of the parties and grant the relief not only against a party guilty of neglect or fraud but also against those who claim under them The Court in cases relating to confusion of boundaries proceeds upon the same principle as it does when an agent or bailiff or any other person who is under an obligation express or implied to keep his own property separate from the property of another mixes them together, for under such circumstances he will have the onus thrown upon him of distinguishing his own property and if he is unable to do so the other person will be entitled to the whole property Sheshi v Venkatramna 1891 P J 232.

It cannot be presumed as a matter of law that the boundaries of an estate as shown on the thak or survey map are identical with the boundaries, as they stood at the time of the Permanent Settlement but it is open to the Court to presume, in the circumstances of a particular case, that the condition of the locality has not changed materially between the date of the Permanent Settlement and the time of the Revenue Survey.

The dried up bed of a public navigable river if not originally part of public domain, becomes private property so as to entitle the owner of the soil to all beds left therein completely isolated from the new course of the river.

1—Beng Reg X of 1882, ss. 2, 3, and 8—Suit for declaration of boundary contrary to survey award—Proprietary rights, Exercise of-Presumption of ownership.—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 5, cl. 12.

At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shoosung (situated in Mymensingh, at the foot of the Garrow hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time, and certainly for more than sixty years, the zamindars of the pergunnah have always, but in an irregular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights in the Garrow hills and over the inhabitants, who are half savages, such as hunting elephants, cutting wood, levying cesses on the inhabitants, when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per hut), and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey, and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shoosung to be a line running along the base of the Garrow hills. The zamindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey, and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north, and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung. Held (by Seton-Karr, J) that the acts of possession proved by the zamindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract, and for the passing of a decree in his favour. Held (by Macpherson, J) that they were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree being acts of mere easement independent of possession. Held (by Peacock, C J, Jackson and Phear, JJ,) on appeal under the Letters Patent. The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in s. 2, within which the administration of civil and criminal justice, etc, was by s, 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north-eastern parts of Rungpore. The proviso in s. 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country, and cl. 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the pewer of any Civil Court except within that tract. The proviso contained in s. 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in s. 2 from the district and from the general Regulations, but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zamindars, and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zamindars from the Garrows. By cl 2, s. 8, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description, done under the authority of the Government ; but that does not take away the right of a zamindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zamindari and his permanently-settled estate. Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line, and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently-settled estate, the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate, throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line, was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under cl. 12, s. 5, Regulation IX of 1825, they were wholly irregular, and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them. When a man is found exercising, on both sides of a boundary line, without objection, rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil, or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years, his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong doer. Per Phear J.—Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable, it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. Government v Rajkishen Singh. 8 W R 343 ; and on appeal, 9 W R 426.

Unless there be very good grounds for dissenting and differing from the reports made by the Deputy Collectors upon local investigations, the Courts even in India, and a fortiori the Courts in England, in dealing with boundary questions ought to give great weight to them and to be guided by them. The Privy Council will never interfere with the finding of an Indian Court upon a question of boundary, unless they are clearly satisfied that there has been some plain miscarriage in the conduct or decision of the case upon which they can put their hands, and make it the ground for an order reversing or varying the decree. Ram Gopal Roy v. In a suit on a mortgage for Rs. 49,855 and odd, a consent decree was made whereby the Defendants consented to judgment for the entire amount but subject to the proviso that, if on a certain date the Defendants should pay to the Plaintiff the sum of Rs 35,000, the decree should be considered as satisfied. The decree further provided that if for the payment of the aforesaid sum it should be necessary for the Defendants to sell any portion of the mortgaged properties they should give the particulars of the properties to be sold to the Plaintiff who should then appraise the same within 30 days and after crediting the proper price against the Defendants' debt should execute a deed of release or deed for consent. The Plaintiff, however, refused to appraise any properties when asked to do so, and by reason of such refusal the Defendants were unable to pay up the amount within the date fixed. The Plaintiff thereupon applied for execution for the whole amount of the decree. Held,—That by reason of the breach of contract by the plaintiff, he was only entitled to a decree for Rs. 35,000. Held, that the appellate Court very properly reinforced the cause of the worshippers of the temple by joining certain new plaintiffs.

The principles applicable to the case of a trustee who betrays his trust by surrendering customary usage of the institution, and if he fails to do so he is guilty of a breach of trust and still more so, if he deliberately attempts to effect a vital change of usage and to make it binding on the worshippers by obtaining a decree of the Court to establish it. 3 Merivale 353=17 Revised Reports 101 Fol, Sankaralinga Nadan v Raja Rajeswar Dorai 12 C W N 946. Payments in the nature of a bribe or secret commission are open to the gravest reprehension, and when a bribe has been given it is immaterial to enquire what, if any, effect the bribe had on the mind of its receiver.

In a suit for rescission of a lease by the lessor on the ground that the lessee had bribed the lessor's servant to bring about the transaction, it appeared that, after the institution of the suit, the plaintiff had prosecuted an appeal and defended another on the footing that the lease was a valid one.

Held, that the plaintiff's action in the two appeals was only inadvertent, the suits having been instituted and the appeals preferred before the present suit was instituted, and that the plaintiff was not thereby precluded from seeking to rescind the lease.

The rights and powers of contract possessed and exercised over the Native States in India by the British Indian Government, with the corresponding restrictions upon the independent action of those States, are to some extent, the necessary consequences of the suzerainty vested in the predominant power. But apart from this general source, rights of very varying kinds have been acquired in connection with the several States, from other sources Such rights differ not only in origin but in kind and in degree in the cases of different states, so that in each instance in which the nature or extent of such rights becomes the subject of consideration, enquiry has to be made into the circumstances of the particular case. On a review of the relation of the Kathiawar States and their people to British India, and the character of the control exercised by the British Indian Government over those States and particularly with relation to the administration of justice, Held—That the Kathiawar States are not includad within the King's dominions. Large as has been the political control exercised over them, any assertion of territorial sovereignty has been avoided. No legislative power over them has ever been claimed The intervention in their affairs has never been carried further than was judged necessary, in the emergency, for the maintenance of peace, good order, and security. The position of the Chiefs has always been respected; and at least, in the case of the more important among them, many of the functions commonly regarded as attributes of sovereignty have been preserved to them. The form adopted in establishing and regulating tribunals in the province has been that which was regular and appropriate if it was not British territory, but quite irregular and inapplicable if it was. I A C 332 (1876), explained. If a Court, administering justice on the King's behalf, makes an order, judicial in its nature, by which some

In respect of the debts and liabilities of a Thakur, Act XXI of 1881 ousts the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts as soon as a liquidation scheme under section 20 is sanctioned; but this ouster does not apply to a suit for partition among the debtor Thakurs themselves. Sections 9, 20 and 27 show that conclusively; but, as sec. 37 mentions succession only, it is argued that a suit for partition being not a suit relating to succession, on the principle of unius expressio alterus exclusio, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is excluded. The argument is not universally conclusive. It loses all force where one class of suits only are removed from the cognizance of the Civil Courts and no reason exists in the nature or purpose of the Act for extending the class.

Section 37 requires the manager to be made a party. His not being so is a matter for amendment and it does not take away the jurisdiction of the Court as it is the plaint which determines it.

Though large and important jagirs and saranjams are usually impartible, there is no general rule applicable to all estates held upon political tenure, but that each case must be considered separately according to circumstances.

From a consideration of the evidence it is found that the village of Alva is partible.

A Suit for its partition does not require a certificate under the Pensions Act of 1871 since the Maleks are the owners of the soil of the village and not merely assignees of its revenues.

negotiations upon a reasonable basis, even though a change or modification of the terms of the contract is made by the buyer and seller without his intervention. A broker sued the Municipality of Bombay for brokerage in respect of lands purchased by them. Held, that, if during the time that the broker was negotiating with the vendor the latter was induced to consent to the sale, the broker was entitled to his brokerage. It was not material to inquire what operated upon the mind of the vendor, and whether it was the advice of friends, or the knowledge that his land could be acquired compulsorily, or the persuasions of the broker. It was sufficient to support the broker's claim if the vendor's acceptance of the terms was brought about during his intervention; and the fact that the Municipal Commissioner stepped in at the last moment, and himself actually struck the bargain, did not deprive the broker of his brokerage. Primarily a broker is merely the agent of the party by whom he is originally employed. To make the other side liable to pay him brokerage it must be shown that he has been employed by such party to act for him, or that in the contract he has agreed to pay brokerage.

The plaintiff negotiated with one Pestonji Patel and his brother, who eventually agreed to become purchasers, but stipulated for four or five months within which to pay the purchase-money. On the 1st February 1895, the defendants through the plaintiff finally closed the contract with the purchasers, one of the terms of which provided that Rs. 10,000 should be paid immediately as earnest and the balance (Rs. 27,000) of the purchase-money to be paid within four months. chasers were, however, unable to pay the Rs. 10,000 earnest-money, and they handed to the defendants three Bank of Bombay shares as security for the performance of the contract. One of the purchasers shortly afterwards died, the defendants apparently abandoned the idea of enforcing the contract, and at the end of the year they returned to the purchaser's family two of the Bank of Bombay shares, having (as they alleged) sold the third to defray the expenses which they had incurred in connection with the transaction. The plaintiff sued to recover Rs. 1,500 as brokerage from the defendants. Held, that under the circumstances the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the Rs. 1,500, but only to a quantum meruit, there being no previous agreement as to the time when the brokerage was to be paid and that he was only entitled to a percentage (5 per cent) on the value of the shares which had been actually received by the defendants. 4—Liability for agent's fraud—Scope of authority discussed.

An undertaking by a broker to refund advances made by third parties to his constituents and giving a guarantee for the repayment of advances with profits is altogether outside the scope of his ordinary business and would not bind his partner unless the latter assented to it or subsequently ratified it. The duties and responsibilities of a broker discussed. A principal is liable for the wrongs of his agent committed within the scope of his authority and purporting to be for the benefit of the principal, though no express order of the principal can be shown, but where the fraud is committed by the agent when he was acting not in the interest of his employers but entirely in his own interests, the principal cannot be held responsible for the consequences of his fraudulent conduct. There is no duty incumbent upon mercantile men any more than upon other people to anticipate and to take precautions against the possibility of a theft of letters or of forgery being committed The rule that "whenever one or two of innocent parties must suffer by the act of a third person, he who has enabled such person to occasion the loss must sustain it", must be restricted to this that the neglect must be in the transaction itself and be the proximate and direct cause that led to the loss complained of. Even if there is negligence on the part of one of the parties in the conduct of their business it would not be sufficient to fix him with liability unless the loss was the ordinary or likely result of that negligence. 4 Bing 253, discussed and distinguished. The signing by a broker of a bought note in which he guarantees the fulfilment of a contract on the part of the seller raises no presumption of law in transactions between the same parties which cannot be contradicted, that subsequent bought notes, to which the signature of the broker is forged, containing similar guarantees were signed with the authority of the broker. D. Quantum meruit—Where the remuneration of an agent is payable upon the performance by him of a definite undertaking he is entitled to be paid that remuneration as soon as he has substantially done all that he undertook to do, even if the principal acquires no benefit for his services, and, except where there is an express agreement or special custom to the contrary, even if the transaction in respect of which the remuneration is claimed falls through, provided that it does not fall through in consequence of any act or default of the agent. Where the agency is in respect of raising a loan, it is essential that the agent procures a person ready and willing to make the loan on the terms proposed; it is not sufficient that he procures a person willing to negotiate about the matter. The defendants granted a letter of authority to the plaintiffs to raise a loan of eleven lakhs on a mortgage of their entire estate. The capitalists with whom the plaintiffs entered into negotiations were not ready and willing to advance the money on the terms offered by the borrowers. They imposed a condition as to the margin of security never proposed or accepted by the borrowers. The transaction ultimately fell through: Held, that the plaintiffs never earned the remuneration claimed by them. The rule of equity, which is formulated in s 55 of the Contract Act, is to look at the whole scope of the transaction to see whether the parties really meant the time named to be of the essence of the contract. Where the plaintiffs claimed remuneration according to the contract which failed completely, they are not entitled to remuneration on the basis of quantum meruit for their services, which was not the foundation of their claim,

Brokerage fees.

1.— In estimating allowance of, in estimating compensation of land compulsorily acquired one set of brokerage fees that is to say, those payable on purchase, should be deducted, when the price is estimated by capitalising returns and deducting inevitable outgoings. But this is not necessary when the market price is known for the market has presumably already considered such items.

When the estimate is on the rental basis, the purchaser looks to annual returns minus outgoings as the value he gets for his money. If he does not look to those annual returns but only wants to sell again, then the value he expects to get is not estimated on the rental basis but upon the future market price which he speculates on obtaining from some third person and in determining how far that future price will pay him, he must reckon on re-couping himself from it, for all expenses which that transaction would involve and therefore will not buy unless he thinks that on re sale he can realise a price which will pay him back more than the market price at date of purchase. Merwanji Muncherji Cama 9 Bom L R 1232.

Building erected by adjoining owners.

1 —Liability of adjoining owners for costs of party wall—Agreements for building—Decision of Government surveyor made final in case of dispute—Right of suit—Right of one owner over portion of party wall not used or built on by the other.—

Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations, among which were the following. (a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties" The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the condition contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878, on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of Rs 20513-4-11 which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed, the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land, and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the protion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants, but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property, and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the costs of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and, in the event of such payment not being awarded he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof The brother (Khatav Luddha) of the first defendant was originally made the second defendant of the suit He however disclaimed all interest in the premises and it appeared that in 1876 the first defendant had sold the property to him (Khatav Luddha), who in 1879 sold it to Kesserbai, the first defendant's wife Kesserbai accordingly was made the second defendant in the place of Khatav Luddha Both the defendants pleaded limitation and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing, Scott J, held (1) that that part of the wall in dispute although not used by the defendants, was a party wall having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected (2) that Kesserbai was liable equally with the first defendant to pay for its part of the wall having purchased the property subject to the terms of the prior agreement of which she presumably had notice (3) that the suit was not barred but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor in whose decision by all disputes as to such cost and that, until his decision was given there was no completed cause of action So it Accordingly on 11th December 1882 decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant The case was thereupon adjourned in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, etc, of the wall The case came on again before Scott, J, who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set off and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the amount certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall The defendants appealed Held, that, having regard to the terms of the agreements under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set off or the other points raised by the pleadings These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue and upon which the Court might give judgment Held, also that the plaintiff was not entitled to use the portion of the wall not occupied by the defendants in any way except as a party wall It was erected under the agreement as a party wall and that it should be used for a purpose inconsistent with the idea of being a party wall would be opposed to the true intention of the parties to the agreement whether Government or the lessees. The plaintiff was not entitled to the full right of ownership over it as if it had been built on his own ground the declaration and injunction asked for, therefore were refused lessor The terms and conditions to the two agreements were the same. By these agreements the plaintiff and defendant respectively agreed to build houses upon the said pieces of land in the manner therein specified, and the agreements contained the two follwing clauses —(1) "The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses ' (2) ' All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties In pursuance of the said agreements, the plaintiff and defendants respectively erected buildings on the said pieces of land The plaintiff caused the northern wall of his building to be built as a party wall, and it was used by the defendants as the southern wall of the building, erected by them The defendants paid the builder, who was employed by the plaintiff s sum of Rs. 700 on account of the cost of erecting the party wall but the rest of the cost was defrayed by the plaintiff The party wall was completed in November 1871 but, in consequence of disputes which arose between the plaintiff and the building contractor the sum payable to the latter was not ascertained for some years In March 1879 the plaintiff caused the party wall to be measured by a surveyor and on the 7th June 1879 demanded from the defendants payment of half the cost The defendants, however, failing to pay the sum demanded, the plaintiff after notice to the defendants, caused the cost of the said party wall to be ascertained by the Government surveyor, who by a certificate, dated the 25th February 1882, certified that the share of the cost to be borne by the defendants for the said party wall was Rs 226 The plaintiff in this action sought to recover his sum from the defendants minus the Rs 700, which, as abovestated, the defendants had already paid and for which the plaintiff gave them credit The defendants in their written statement alleged that the party wall had been partly built with materials supplied by them, and that in the year 1870 they had adjusted accounts with the plaintiff in respect of the said materials and the said party wall and it was then agreed that the sum of Rs700 paid by the defendants should be treated as a final settlement They also alleged that the plaintiff had settled disputes with the building contractors, and had only paid them three annas in the rupee on the amount of their claim in full satisfaction , the defendants pleaded that they ought not to be charged with more than their due proportion of such reduced amount It was further contended for the defendants that their obligation to pay half the cost of the party wall existed independently of the arrangement between them and the plaintiff to refer the matter to the Government surveyor that this latter covenant was only collateral, and did not interfere with the plaintiff s right to sue the defendants for their half share of the cost , that the plaintiff's cause of action in this respect arose on the 15th October 1878, when the contractor's claim was finally settled and that this suit not having been brought for more than three years after that date, it was barred by limitation Held that the suit was not barred There was no right of action independently of the valuation and award of the Government surveyor There was no separate covenant to pay compensation to which the covenant for reference to the Government surveyor could be collateral The rights of the parties were defined by the contracts, and under these, each lessee might have the benefit of a party wall on such terms and no others as he on his part submitted to Payment of a share of the cost was not one of those terms except in so far as each lessee, if a dispute arose, was bound by the decision of a Government surveyor That decision was not ancillary, serving to give greater explicitness to a right already fully subsisting It was essential to the right itself, and until it was made, no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose Where, in leases granted by one lessor to several lessees taking sites for buildings intended to be contiguous and to form one block or group in mutual relation, there is a common covenant which is an inducement to the lessee to take the lease, and which he must know is equally an inducement to his neighbour to take his lease, neither can be called a stranger to the consideration Each may be regarded as an equitable assignee of the covenants which lessor made for his benefit as lessee Each, consequently, has an equitable right to enforce against the other, the obligation stipulated for in his interest, and serving as a part of his inducement (as the other knew) to the contract Cooverji Luddha v Bhimji Girdhar 6 Bom 523.

Held, that, to determine whether a suit is a land suit, the true principle is to have regard to the character and use of the land at the time immediately before the cause of action arose: the use, to which the defendant may have devolved the land after the cause of action has arisen, is immaterial, and a land suit does not cease to be one, merely because something else is claimed along with it.

Held: also, that objection as to the valuation of a suit or to the admissibility of a document cannot be raised for the first time in appeal to Chief Court.

Held, further, that, except where the owner stands by and makes no protest when the building is being erected, a person knowingly building upon another's land is not entitled to claim compensation in the ejectment suit, but he can be allowed to remove the materials. An owner of lands may appropriate land to public use and yet retain in himself all such rights in the soil as are compatible with the full exercise and enjoyment of the public use to which the property has been devoted, and it is not essential to constitute a valid dedication that lagal title should pass from the owner. Nor is it inconsistent with an effectual dedication that the owner should continue to make any and all uses of the land which do not interfere with the uses for which it is dedicated. Held, in respect of land which had not been expressly dedicated but was used by the public as a burning ground, that the circumstances of the case showed that the owner made a dedication of user of the property for the purpose of a burning ground, such dedication to remain in force only so long as the property continued to be used as a burning ground. When the sole use to which property had been dedicated becomes impossible of execution by reason of statutory acquisition and compulsory use for purpose inconsistent with the original dedication it reverts to the dedicator or his representative. Although it is an essential element of a good dedication that it should be irrevocable, nevertheless when after a valid dedication has been made the use for which the property is dedicated becomes impossible of execution or the object of the use wholly fails, there is an abandonment in consequence of which the rights of the public therein fail and a reversion takes place,the dedication being taken to have spent its force when the use ceased. 1 C W N 698: s c L R 24 I A 177; 25 Cal. 194 (1897), distinguished. Unlike the road-land which was acquired by the Collector in the above case, the burning ground in this case, treated as such, had a market value which had been actually assessed. Therefore the person who was proved to be the owner of the soil was entitled to the compensation assessed. The word ghat in sec. 30 of the *B*engal Municipal Act does not include a tract of land used as a burning ground. That sub soil under a ghat does not vest in the Municipality under sec. 30 of the Bengal Municipal Act; but the ghat itself does. The Legislature by enacting sec. 30 intended that such roads, etc., as are private property, or are maintained by Government or at the public expense should not vest in the Municipality. The Chairman, Howrah Municipality v Khettra Kristo Mitter. 10 C W N 1044= 4 C L J 343.

2.—S. 9 (1882—S, 11)—Jurisdiction—Suit-Right of burial—Claim to recite prayers in the mosque—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.—

Held,-that though in suits relating to ritual or religious observance only, the Civil Courts in this country have no jurisdicion,when the matter is of a mixed spiritual and temporal character,the question will depend upon the nature of the connection between the facts, and if the spiritual question is no intrinsically connected with the temporal as to be inseparable from it, it would be the duty of the Courts in trying the civil disputes to enquire into the spiritual matter thus intimately related.

Where the plaintiffs alleged that they had a right to bury their deceased relations in a certain mosque, and in the course of the burial to recite prayers at a particular spot in the mosque that the recitation of the prayers was a necessary part of the burial and that they were hindered from exercising their right in accordance with the law and usage of the community to which they belonged, by the defendant who asserted an exlusive right to recite the prayers in himself. 7 Bom 328; 26 Bom 198 Ref.

Held, that though the defendant's objections were limited to that part of the ceremony which consisted in the recital of prayers the dispute did not relate to a matter ot ritual only and that the plaintiffs were entitled to go into the question whether. according to the law and customs governing their community, their right of burial was in the way alleged by them. Tharagan v. 3.—Nuisance—Opening of burning and burial ground not actionable—Even if so, Municipality protected—Limitation Continuing nuisance:

The Municipality of Madras opened a burning and burial ground close to the plaintiff's factory with the result that the ground was a source of nuisance, and led to the depreciation in value of the premises. S.392 of the City of Madras Municipal Act says that the Municipal Commissioners "shall provide a sufficient number of convenient and fitting places for burial and burning grounds" and S. 458 gives a right of action to any one aggrieved by the failure of the Commissioners to perform a duty imposed on them by the Act. The plaintiff sued for an injunction restraining the defendents from using the land as a burial and burning ground and for damages. No negligence was proved by him in the use of the land as burial and burning ground. There was some evidence that it was a source of nuisance to any one who occupied plaintiff's premises, and that their market value had been depreciated by the opening of the burial ground Held, (1) No actionable nuisance had been proved. It cannot be laid down as a legal proposition or doctrine, that any thing which under any circumstance, lessens the comfort or endangers the health or safety of a neighbour,must necessarily be an actionable nuisance. The use of a place dedicated for the communal purpose of cremation in a way not calculated to aggravate the inconveniences necessarily incident to such an act, as it is generally performed in this country, is not a public nuisance. (2)Sir Arnold White, C J (a) Even if an actionable nuisance had been proved, the defendants were protected, as the defendants acted under statutory powers, and were even under statutory obligation to open burning grounds. 11 A C 45 foll; 6 A C 193 distinguished (b) The mere fact that a neighbouring land owner has sustained damage from the establishment of a burning and burial ground does not show that the site selected is not

Where the plaintiff held certain land under Government, which he sublet to defendant who afterwards extended his cultivation by entering upon and clearing waste land (the land in suit) adjoining the plaintiff's holding, and got his own name entered in the thugyi's books as the Government tenant of the same, and afterwards regularly paid the Government revenue thereon and sued to have his title declared as the Government tenant of the land in suit, on the ground that defendant held it only as his (plaintiff's) sub tenant, held that as there was no evidence to show that defendant had ever attorned to plaintiff in respect of the land in suit, or that the plaintiff had ever been recognized by Government as the Government tenant, the plaintiff had no title. Maung Kyauk Lon v Naung Shwe Kyauk L B R 1872—1892, 489.

2.—S. 7 of Rules of 1879, issued under—Grants of ownership—Title to hold land — notice had not been duly served on the defendant did not render the grant to plaintiff invalid, and that as the grant gave the plaintiff a clear title, the defendant was bound to show a superior title. It is doubtful whether the Civil Court has any jurisdiction in a suit of this nature, having regard to s. 55 cl. (f) Act 11 of 1879. Maung Thun v. Mapao L B R 1872—1892, 273.

Notes.—Cons., L B R 1893—1900, 473.

3.—S. 7—Adverse title to land—Mortgagor—Mortgagee.

A mortgagee by being in possession of land for 12 years does not acquire the title to the land adversely to the mortgagor under the provisions of s 7 of Act II of 1876. The provisions of that section have no application as between a mortgagor and a mortgagee, or between any permissive occupant of land and the person other than Government by whose permission the land is occupied. Maung Kwe IU v. Maung San Ya L B R 1893—1900, 3.

4.—Ss. 7 and 17—Title to land in possession by prescription—Status of land-holder—Patta grant—Suit for recovery of possession of land granted under patta—Reference to Revenue authorities.

S. 7 of the Land and Revenue Act allows a person in possession of land to acquire a title against Government by prescription, and the grant of the patta by the Government will not put the grantee in a better position than that of the grantor. The grantee will take the patta, subject to the rights of any person in possession, and the claim of the grantee to the land will be liable to be defeated if he does not get possession before anyone else has acquired the status of land-holder. In a suit to recover possession of certain land alleged to have been granted under a patta to plaintiff, where the defendant contends that at the time of institution of such suit he, the defendant, had acquired the status of land-holder in respect to such land, the point should be referred to the revenue authorities for decision under s. 17 of the Land and Revenue Act. Maung Shwe Byi v. 5.—S. 10—Suit for possession of land.

6.—Ss. 13, 56—Jurisdiction.

Reading together s. 12 of the Land and Revenue Act and s. 84 of the rules under that Act, applications by landholders for permission to resign land temporarily must be by written petition. Where in a suit to recover possession of a piece of land which the thugyi had settled with defendant, it was admitted that the plaintiff had once acquired the rights of a landholder with respect to the land in suit and had relinquished it, but his allegation that he relinquished the land only temporarily, was not proved, held that the plaintiff's suit was practically one to set aside a settlement made by the thugyi, and the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was barred by s. 6 of the Land and Revenue Act. The defendant having obtained a settlement of the land from the thugyi was entitled to hold it until plaintiff could establish his right to a settlement before the Revenue authorities under s. 13. Nga Shwe Eik v. Nga Tha Aung. L B R 1872—1892. 531

7.—S. 19, 56-Jurisdiction of Civil or Revenue-Courts—Claims by temporary occupiers—Revenue authorities to decide questions under S. 19.

Where the occupier of land applied for a lease, but the Sub-Divisional officer, instead of granting a lease, merely ordered that, as the applicant had made his garden before the issue of a Government Circular prohibiting further leases in the locality, he should not be disturbed in his possession.

Held, that such an order could not be taken as the equivalent of formal grant, and bestowed no higher status than that of temporary occupier under S. 19 of the Burma Land and Revenue Act.

In the absence of a grant made by or on behalf of Government, an occupier who has not acquired the status of a landholder must come under S. 19. Under S. 56 of the Act, the Revenue Authorities alone can decide questions as to who are to occupy lands under S. 19, and no Civil Court can therefore, grant a declaration of title sought by an occupier. Maung Po Chit v Periacurupen Chetty, 12 Ind Cas 22.

8.—Ss. 19, 55, 56-Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

The Civil Court has jurisdiction in all matters not expressly exempted from its jurisdiction by s. 56 of the Land and Revenue Act, 1876 The plaintiff held paddy-land all round a village tank to which all the villagers had a right of access across his land and the villagers enclosed with a fence a piece of land all round, and immediately adjoining, the tank in order to prevent plaintiff encroaching and interfering, with their use and enjoyment of the tank, and the plaintiff then sued defendants to declare his title to a portion of the land so enclosed; held that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, there being nothing to show that the dispute between the parties arose out of any claim to hold land temporarily under Rules framed by the Local Government under s 19 of the Land and Revenue Act. Maung San Ya v. Under s. 23 of the Act all culturable land, with certain exceptions, which do not apply to this case, is liable to land revenue. The unauthorized action of a thugyi in giving one person permission to work salt on the land in the occupation of another person does not amount to an ejectment of that other person. Maung Kya Pyu v Tha Nga Aung. 11.—Ss 47, 55, 56—Sale of land by Revenue Officer for arrears of revenue—Irregularities in procedure—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

A sale of land held for the recovery of arrears of revenue by a duly authorized officer, though there was no notification of the sale and no enquiry as to the defaulting holder's interest in the land, is a sale under s. 47 of the Burma Land and Revenue Act, 1876, and under ss. 55 and 56 of the Land and Revenue Act, the validity of the sale can only be questioned by the Revenue authorities. Pallaneappa Chetty v Maung Po Thein. L B R 1893—1900, 370.

12.—S. 55, cl, (b) explained.—

S. 55 (b) refers to "claims to occupy or resort to lands under ss.19,20, & 21 & disputes as to the use or enjoyment of such lands between persons permitted to occupy or resort to the same." By the first part of the clause, the legislature means claims against Government. If this part of the clause refers to claims between private individuals, it would lead to conflict of jurisdictions and be highly inconvenient. Suppose A, upon a possessory title under s.19 sues B, who relies upon a grant or lease. The case would have to be decided by the Revenue Court which would alone have jurisdiction. The Revenue Court may decide in favour of A. Then B. upon the strength of his grant or lease sues A in the Civil Court, which would certainly have jurisdiction. The Civil Court may decide in favour of B, and there would then be a conflict of decisions. This cannot have been the intention of the legislature.

Burma Land and Revenue Act II of 1876- contd.

Persons could not be permitted to occupy the same land adversely to one another. The clause refers to disputes arising between persons jointly permitted to occupy the same land. Such disputes must be decided by the Revenue Court, 13.—Ss.55 (b),56—Jurisdiction—Civil Court's power to grant a mortgage decree in respect of land over which no person has a right created by Government grant or a landholder's right.

A suit by a mortgagee for a decree for the sale of land over which no right has been created by a Government grant or a land holder's certificate, is barred by s. 56 of the Lower Burma Land and Revenue Act read with s. 55; proviso, if a mortgagee of land, held under s. 19 of the Land and Revenue Act and ch. IX of the Revenue Rules, wishes to enforce his mortgage, his remedy is to apply to the Revenue authorities. All that the Civil Court can give is a money decree. Aruna Challam Chetty v Veerappa Chetty, 10 Ind Cas 864.

14 –S 56 (a)–Jurisdiction.

Where a thugyi gave plaintiffs and defendants a general permission to extend their temporary holdings without specifying boundaries within which their extension might be made and without any limitation as to area, and both plaintiffs and defendants claimed the land in suit on the authority of this permission, held, that the Civil Court was barred by. s. 56 (a) of the Burma Land and Revenue Act 1876, from entertaining the plaintiff's suit to establish their right to the land. Maung Kyi and Ma Gon v Maung Nyeim and Min Aung. Court. It was conceded on both sides, that, if the land was in either a town or a village the Civil Court could have no jurisdiction. The sole question that had to be determined, therefore, was whether the land was in a town or a village as defined in the Act. Held, if the land in suit was not in a town, it must be in a village, which has been defined in the Act as an area appropriated to dwelling places not included within the limits of a town. It followed, therefore, that the land must be either in a town or in a village and consequently, the suit relating to it could not fall within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court.

2—Ss. 11, 15 and 41—Suit to recover house-site—Necessity for reference to Revenue Officer—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain suit without such reference.—

The plaintiff sued to recover possession of a house-site in Pantanaw. The defence was that the defendant had obtained permission from the Revenue authorities to occupy the site. Held, the Lower Burma Town and Village Lands Acts, 1898, and not the Lower Burma Land and Revenue Act, 1876, applied to the case. The only point for determination was whether the plaintiff's right, as landholders, had ceased under S. 11 of the Act. This matter should have been referred to a Revenue Officer as arising under the last clause of S. 15 of the Act. S. 41 of the Act provides that no Civil Court shall have jurisdiction to determine such cases as the present, unless they have been referred to the Revenue authorities for their decision. 3—S. 41—Suit for eviction from house on village land—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Title to house distinct from title to site.—

It is impossible to evict a person from a house, without evicting him from the occupation of the site, on which it stands. Such a suit for eviction is, therefore, one for occupation of the land as well as the house, and is essentially different from a suit for possession of the materials of the house. In the former case, the question of title to the house cannot be treated as distinct from the question of title to the house-site. Where

4—S. 41, whether ultra vires—Claim to right over land as against Government—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—S. 65, Government of India Act 1858—S. 22, Indian Councils Act, 1868.—

Held, by the Full Bench (Robinson, J., diss.) that the provision of S. 41 of the Lower Burma Town and Village Lands Act, 1898, that no Civil Court shall have jurisdiction to determine any claim to any right over land as against Government, was ultra vires of the Legislative Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Burma, because it infringed the 65th section of the Government of India Act 1858, and the 22nd section of the Indian Councils Act, 1861. Burmese Law (Adoption).

1—Definition and rights of keittima and aptittha sons.—

The keittima son has the full rights of inheritance of a natural son whereas apatittha son has only partial rights of inheritance. The apatittha son has nevertheless rights of inheritance. Looking at the definition of an apatittha son in the Digest of Buddhist Law, the term would seem to refer to a founding, a child casually adopted whether its parents and relatives are known or not a child casually adopted and brought up in the family of the adoptive parents, being abandoned by its natural parents, a child casually adopted through compassion, a destitute child casually adopted. The principle underlying the definition of the term seems to be that an apatittha adoption is a compassionate one which takes place in consequence of the child being destitute with no one to maintain it through abandonment by, or the decease of, its natural parents, or some such similar cause.

Held, in this case on a consideration of the probabilities and of the manner in which the boy was treated, that the adoption was keittima and not apatittha. Tet Tun v Ma Chain. 5 L B R 216.

2—Some probabilities in favour of alleged adoption—One or two important probabilities against it Adoption not generally publishad and not notorious—Valid adoption according to requirements of Burmese Buddist law, whether proved.

The plaintiff, an adult, claimed to have been adopted by his uncle. He was able to adduce, from the relationship between himself and his uncle, from the latter's circumstances from his uncle's public letters, through witnesses, and from other sources, good deal of evidence calculated to render his contention probable and successful. It appeared, however, that the plaintiff, when called upon to state his father's name, gave, not his adoptive, but his natural father's name, thus making it doubtful, whether the idea of giving up all his prospective rights in his natural parents' property as the result of the adoption, presented itself to his mind at the time of the alleged adoption; and also, that his relationship with his uncle was not published generally and was not notorious, as it ought to have been had it been true.

Held, that he failed to prove that he had been validly adopted according to the requirements of the Burmese Buddhist Law.

In the absence of anything to show what is necessary to constitute the adoption of an adult, the general principle is that an adult cannot be adopted without his or her consent. But, as an adult (cannot be deprived of any rights without his or her consent),—an adoption depriving rights of inheritance in natural parents' property—it must appear that he or she consented to renounce all his or her prospective rights in his or her natural parents' property.

Per Fox, C. J.—Notoriety amongst the people with whom the parties ordinarily mixed in social life is what is required in evidence of the adoption of an adult.

Per Hartnoll, J—When a person claims a share in an estate on the ground that he was adopted as an adult, the burden of proof lies heavily on him, the more especially as such an adoption is not usual even if it is sanctioned by the Dhammathats (11 Bur L R 240=2 L B R 221, Fol. I Ch. T C L P 168 Ref.) Ma Gyi v Maung Po Tha 14 Bur L R 15.

3—Burmese law and custom—Adoption—Mode of proof—Publicity—Inference from the facts of the life of parties—Child—Adult.

According to Burmese Law, no formal ceremony is necessary to constitute adoption, and though adoption is a fact, that fact can either be proved as having taken place on a distinct and specified occasion,or may be inferred from a course of conduct which is inconsistent with any other supposition. But in either case publicity must be given to the relationship, and the amount of proof of publicity required will be greater in the cases of the latter category, when no distinct occasion can be appealed to.

In many cases the inferences of the relationship existing, and the publicity of the relation ship itself, may naturally be taken from the facts of the life of the parties, a part from the verbal statements of those concerned Thus when a child who has natural parents leaves those parents and its own home, and is brought up in the house of another who treats it as a father would a child, the inference is not difficult to draw, and the facts from which that inference is drawn are public facts necessarily known to all the persons, friends and acquaintances. But in the case of an adult, when the inference to be drawn from "bringing up" are necessarily absent and where the consequence of adoption is disinherison of those entitled to succeed by law, it is specially necessary to insist on adequate proof of publicity or notoriety of the relationship. Ma Ywet v Ma Me 11 Bom L R 1193 (P C)=5 L B R 118=10 C L J 253 =6 M L T 302=3 Ind Cas 797=36 Cal 976 =19 M L J 577.

4—Right to cancel.

Adoption is an institution of Buddhist Law, and for the incidents that govern it, the Court must look to Buddhist Law or to custom, if custom has modified the law. There is no other means of getting light on the subject. Parents who have given a child in adoption to another, are at liberty until the child has grown up to take the child back when they please. Maung Sein v Ma Mon, U B R 1902—1903 Vol 11 Buddhist Law, Adoption 1.

5—Adopted child—Rights of——Whether extend to collaterals of adoptive parents.

Under the Buddhist Law, the rights of inheritance of an adopted child are not limited to inheritance from his or her adoptive parents, but also extend to inheritance from their collaterals. (1 Chan Toon's L C 393, Fol: 1 Chan Toon L C 279, Ref:) Ma Mhaw v Ma Sein 5 L B R 89.

6—Ceremonies, Necessity of—Publicity and notoriety essential—Keittima adoption—Proof.

It has been held that no particular ceremony is required for adoption but there can be no doubt that an essential part of adoption is publicity of the relationship and of the intentions of the adoptive parents in regard to the inheritance of their estate by the adopted child. To establish a Keittima adoption proof of publicity and notoriety is essential. Ma Mein Gale v Ma Kin. U B R 1892-1896 Vol II. 34.

Notes.—(U B R 1892-1896 Vol II 22 Ref).

7—What is a keittima adopted child?—Manugye Dhammathat (pp 314 and 319, 3rd. Edition.)

When one party seeks to disturb a decision in revision, it is fair that the other party should be at liberty to put forward grounds of dissatisfaction with it on his side, although he might otherwise have let it stand unchallenged. No particular method of adoption is prescribed by Buddhist Law. Evidence of bringing up and treatment as child of adoptive parents and public recognition as such is sufficient proof of keittima adoption. The duties of an adopted child are similar to those of a natural born child, and separate living may constitute a disqualification to inheritance by the adopted child, but that the question what constitutes separate living depends upon the circumstances of each particular case Suggested that possible reason for disqualification may be that separate living on part of adopted child might indicate severance of the adoption. Ss 26 & 27 are applicable.

8—Essentials of valid adoption—Ceremonies-Documentary evidence—Publicity—Intention of publicity.

To constitute a valid adoption the law requires no ceremony, no written document, nothing indeed but a request from parents, and a notorious and public taking and bringing up, in order that, or with the understanding that, they i. e., the children, may inherit Just as an open living together is among Burmans presumptive proof of marriage, so also the open bringing up of a child, and supporting such child for so many years, is presumptive proof of adoption especially where the parents are childless and the child is a niece Ma Gun v Ma Gun L B R 1872—1892, 25

A Buddhist can adopt a child he having a child of his own at the time Me Bwin v Ma Yin L B R 1872-1892 100

10—Adoption—Proof—Two adoptions valid—Evidence of adoption

Where it was proved that the plaintiff who claimed to be the adopted daughter of a Buddhist couple and had lived with the couple from the age of three years and the plaintiff's mother as well as others have stated that the old couple had told them that they had adopted the plaintiff and that she was generally regarded as their daughter. Held, that the adoption had been amply proved. Inasmuch as even children of well to do parents often assist in cultivating the family acres, no inference against adoption can be drawn from the fact that an adopted daughter worked in the fields for her adoptive parents A second adoption during the lifetime of the first adopted child is not prohibited by Burmese Buddhist law though it is unusual Ma Shwe Yin v Ma Shwe Nyun 11 Ind Cas 776

11—Adoption—Essentials—Proof of relationship—Proof of time of adoption not necessary.

Neither ceremony nor a written document is required to constitute the relation of a keittima adopted daughter in Burmese law There must be, on the one hand the consent of the natural parents and on the other, the taking of the child by the adoptive parents with the intention and on the footing that the child shall inherit Where it is proved that the relationship as mother and daughter existed between plaintiff and her adoptive mother.
